DR. ELIOT, HOME AGAIN, SAYS HE IS FOR WILSON

President Emeritus of Harvard Thinks Moose Party Is a "One Man" Affair.

By BERT FORD.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, president emeritus of Harvard University, is an ardent supporter of Woodrow Wilson for the presidency.

He told the writer so during the last leg of his world-circling trip, which ended at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he and his party, Mrs. Eliot, his granddaughter, Miss Ruth Eliot of Brookline, and his secretary, Rogers Pierce, Harvard '09, of Milton, stepped from the western train at the Back Bay station and proceeded to Brookline.

Dr. Eliot had religiously refrained from discussing politics on his way across the continent, but as the train approached home soil he lingered up on the subject sufficiently to make known his choice of platform and candidate, and to express his views of the "Bull Moose" party.

"I am hardly well enough versed to say much about the political situation," said "Prexy," linking the digits of both bronzed hands across his cocked right knee. "I have been too far away, you see.

"Well, yes, I have read the three platforms since landing at 'Frisco, and I must confess I was amused to notice that all three claimed title to the progressive spirit. They are all progressives, if one is to judge from the claims of the platforms.

"Are you a 'Stand-patter' or a Progressive, doctor?"

Approves Democratic Platform.

"A stand-patter? Hardly! I could never be justly accused of that. I have voted the Republican ticket at times, and, then again, I have not.

"In reading the three platforms did you reach any choice? Wasn't there one you liked better than the rest?

"To be frank, there was.

"Which one?"

"The Democratic platform adopted in Baltimore. I think I like its construction better than the others."

"Remember, now, that I have the greatest admiration for all three candidates. They are splendid men, but I am not a protectionist, never was, and never will be. Therefore, I couldn't support the Taft platform very well.

"As for the Roosevelt movement—well, I look upon that as being IMPULSIVE and GUSHING, so to speak. IF IS A ONE-MAN FOLLOWING AS I VIEW IT. A certain number of men are carried away by their admiration and infatuation for a leader.

"Somehow I can't satisfy myself that such a split is a sound or proper one as the basis for a party.... It doesn't seem likely to be enduring. It is strictly the

One Dead, One Dying in Freight Collision On New Haven Road

Local and Extra Trains in Rear-End Crash at Crystal Springs.

FALL RIVER, Aug. 10.—One man was killed and another probably fatally hurt in a rear-end collision between two freight trains on the New Haven Railroad today at Crystal Springs, six miles north of this city.

The man who was killed was John McKane, a fireman, of Taunton. The man injured is Joseph Joslin, employed in Fall River.

The local freight train, which was due at Crystal Springs at 3:45 from this city, was about two hours late. An extra local, consisting of a caboose and engine, on its way from Taunton to Fall River, crashed into the local freight.

Fireman McKane saw that there was going to be a crash and jumped. He was caught in the wreckage and killed instantly. Joslin, who was walking along the track, was caught in the wreckage and crushed so badly that it was thought he could not recover.

Ellis Coleman, the conductor of the local freight, stuck to his train and was uninjured. No one connected with the trains could assign a reason for the collision.

FAMOUS BEAUTY DYING.

Mrs. Alice Norton of New York Ill in a Paris Garret.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Aged and penniless, Mrs. Alice Norton, once a famous beauty of New York, is dying practically of starvation in a Paris garret. Even in her later years the beauty of the woman, with her great wealth of white hair, dazzled the critics of Paris. She and her faithful mastiff were well known to fashionable Paris. She is a perfect master of French and German. "My last days," said the woman, "has been filled with illusions. I have fought hard against Fate, but my fight has been in vain."

Tenean Beach Expert Takes Honors from Field of Thirty in Exciting Struggle

SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND persons saw the AMERICAN'S second annual swimming carnival in the Charles River Basin yesterday afternoon. It was one of the greatest and most successful water events ever held in Greater Boston. Great crowds swarming the Esplanade cheering enthusiastically at the splendid exhibitions given of expert swimming and diving.

The big feature of the carnival—the swimming race for the girls' championship of New England—was won after a grilling battle over the slightly more than mile and a half course by Marion Gibson of Tenean Beach, one of the best known of New England's girl swimmers. Out of a field of thirty contestants the doughty swimmer forged ahead, finishing by a margin wide enough to assure her of the handsome trophy cup donated by the AMERICAN for first prize.

WINNER A 17-YEAR-OLD GIRL.

Miss Gibson's race was a wonderful performance. The seventeen-year-old girl clipped practically 21 minutes from the record she put up for the course last year when she won the AMERICAN'S first swimming carnival feature race. Her time yesterday was 40 minutes, 55 seconds. A year ago her time for the same course was 1 hour and 11 minutes.

As she finished, Miss Gibson was uproariously greeted. Climbing on the raft, she exclaimed, looking almost as fresh as when she started:

"Tenean once more."

Miss Mae Barry of the North End swam a remarkable race, also, though her time was nearly five minutes slower than Miss Gibson's. Miss Barry's time was 52 minutes and 8 seconds. This was excellent enough to give her second prize. Miss Gibson had used the side stroke to good advantage. Miss Barry used the trudgeon.

Close Race for Third Place.

A close and exciting race for third place aroused great enthusiasm. As Gertrude Gibson, sixteen, and sister of the winner, and Lena Raven, twelve, of Providence, came in on the last quarter mile of the course, interest became tense, and the immense crowd was thrilled. The Providence girl had been slightly behind. She made a wonderful sprint, and part of the way was neck and neck. Miss Gibson finally won third cup and place four seconds ahead of her more youthful rival.

Nearly all of the girls who entered the water finished. Two were taken from the water exhausted. All of them were care-

PICKPOCKETS GET $500.

Ashland Man Loses Wallet in Egleston Square.

Henry Baker of Ashland reported to the police that his pocket was picked of a wallet at Egleston square, last night, and that the thieves got away with $500. Baker said that all he knew about the theft was that two young men jostled him and that later he learned that his pocketbook had been slipped from a rear pocket in his trousers. He said the thieves were smooth faced and about twenty-eight years old.

SAVED! TOM GIBLIN PROVES NEAR HERO

Former Alderman Plunges Between Auto and Train, but Crash Is Averted.

This is about a horrible railroad accident that didn't quite happen. If it had, the papers this morning would have carried across their front pages the name of Thomas F. Giblin—hero. It was no fault of the ex-Alderman from East Boston that he is not getting such publicity this morning.

It was at the Orient Heights railroad station. Mr. Giblin was walking along meditating. In the distance a train tooted and the watchful gateman lowered the gates. This is the story as told by Mr. Giblin. If his own words are not used, it is out of regard for Mr. Giblin's modesty.

Suddenly there came an automobile down the road from Winthrop, driven by a very charming young lady whom Mr. Giblin recognized as the daughter of an old friend.

On came the car. On came the car. Mr. Giblin's heart stood still as he saw that the auto was beyond control. The engineer of the train saw that something was wrong and began to slow up.

Mr. Giblin's heart was still, but his legs were working. With a bound, he leaped the gate and waved the auto back. The girl screamed. The auto struck the gates and crashed through them. It moved straight out upon the track.

Mr. Giblin with a despairing cry leaped upon the cowcatcher and stretched out his arms.

The car moved on. So did the train. Two yards, one yard, eighteen inches, one foot. He could see the terrified eyes of the maiden, and he gripped the cowcatcher with his nimble legs. Then just as the crash was due, the train came to a full stop, and the auto responded to its reverse and backed off the track. Barely two feet had intervened between the two vehicles.

The name of he heroine of the accident is purposely omitted. When she was called up on the phone and asked about her experience, she stated that she did not own a car, had not been in one yesterday, had no accident and had not even seen a railroad train.

MORGAN AIDS CHURCH.

Gift to Plymouth Society First to Episcopal Church in State.

J. Pierpont Morgan has given $1,000 to the Rev. Allen Jacobs, rector of Christ Church, Plymouth, to be used in helping build the new church in that town. The new church will cost $25,000. It was lately impressed upon Mr. Morgan by his friends that he should give some money to help build the church where the Pilgrims first landed. It did not take Mr. Morgan long to decide the matter, as he is very much interested in historical towns, and he at once requested his secretary to send his check for this cause. This is the first contribution that Mr. Morgan has ever made to the Episcopal church in Massachusetts.

Since the Five New England Governors Have Edited the Sunday American, Let's See What the PEOPLE Can Do.

For five Sundays in succession now, including today, the Sunday AMERICAN has been edited by the Governor of a New England State, Governor Plaisted of Maine, Governor Bass of New Hampshire, Governor Foss of Massachusetts, Governor Pothier of Rhode Island and Governor John Abner Mead of Vermont.

In all the history of New England journalism there has never been another such series. Never before have Governors of three States served in turn as its editors upon a metropolitan newspaper. Naturally the Sunday AMERICAN is proud of this innovation and delighted with its success.

Now let's see how well THE PEOPLE can write editorials and discover news stories. IT WILL BE WORTH YOUR WHILE.

For the best editorial received $50 will be paid.

For the best news tip sent in another $50 will be paid.

Editorials in this competition must reach the Sunday AMERICAN office not later than Thursday and must not be over 800 words in length.

News tips must reach the Sunday AMERICAN office not later than Friday. (This in order to give us time for investigation and verification.)

Famous Manchester Jewels Are Rescued

Saved from Auctioneer by American Executors, Who Pay $97,440 Death Duty Deficit.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The American executors for the estate of Consuelo, Dowager Duchess of Manchester, have transmitted to London the sum of $97,440 to save the famous Manchester jewels and Manchester mansion in Grosvenor Square, London, from being sold under the auctioneer's hammer.

This sum made known today when the American executors, Harry B. Hollins, John L. Cadwalader and Frederick (Beauty) Ogden Beach, filed a supplementary account of their stewardship. The account showed that 20,000 pounds sterling was sent recently to the English executors. This action was made necessary by reason of the deficit for the English death duties.

The present Duke and Duchess have four children, Alexandrine George Francis Drogo, who is Viscount Mandeville, Lady Mary Alice Montagu, Lord Edward Montagu and Lady Ellen Montagu. The executor's accounts record the fact that for the edunction and maintenance of Viscount Mandeville there is transmitted quarterly to his father the sum of $813. The Duchess of Manchester, formerly Helean Zimmerman of Cincinnati, received $400 monthly for the care of the younger children.

Through the will of his mother the Duke receives a life interest in $384,240. His eldest son, Viscount Mandeville, has an interest in an equal amount. The other three children receive the income from $21,000,

$20,000 DIAMOND ROBBERY

Tray of Unmounted Gems in Washington Street Store Carried Off by Bold Daylight Thief Who Eludes the Police

THE most daring robbery that has taken place in Boston in many years became known yesterday when it was learned that a well-dressed man stole a tray of unmounted diamonds in broad daylight from the wholesale jewelry store of D. C. Percival & Co., Incorporated, at No. 373 Washington street.

It was privately reported that the value of the gems taken would reach $20,000.

D. C. Percival, Jr., when asked about the amount stolen declined to state their value, but said that it would not quite reach the amount named.

Thief Eludes Pursuers.

Following the stealing of the gems, which were snatched from a showcase upon which they had been placed for inspection, the clerk and others chased the thief into the street. But the thief eluded his pursuers and made way with his valuable loot.

Half a dozen or more Pinkerton detectives were placed on the case at once, but up to late last night, so far as could be learned, no trace of the gems had been found.

The Percival jewelry store is on the second floor of the Jewelers' Building at Washington and Bromfield streets. The news that the robbery had taken place came from some one employed in the building. Both young Mr. Percival and George Leith, manager of the local Pinkerton detective bureau, declined last night to go into details about the big theft.

From other sources it was learned that what took place was about as follows: Early in the afternoon a man wearing good clothing, who appeared to be familiar with the store, walked into the place and approaching a clerk, said:

"I would like to look at some diamonds, please."

The clerk obtained a tray or box in which a large assortment of unmounted stones were kept. The diamonds were in small envelopes in the receptacle. The stranger began an examination of the stones, handling them as though he was familiar with such gems, and chatting with the clerk about them.

Flees With Diamonds.

The clerk, according to the story, turned away for some reason. In a moment his attention was attracted to the stranger, who was moving swiftly toward the stairway to the street, carrying the diamonds with him.

"Stop that man," shouted the clerk. "He has a tray of diamonds."

Immediately there was great excitement in the store. Some of the employes darted after the man. They ran down into the street. It was at an hour when the side-

...ocks were crowded. The excitement reached the crowd but what caused it was carefully kept from the public.

Alarm Sent Out.

The clerk who had shown the man the diamonds ran here and there in an effort to catch sight of the thief. He was unable to find him. The result was quickly related to those in charge of the store, and the Pinkerton Detective Agency was called on the telephone. In a few minutes half a dozen of the most skilful men in the employ of the agency were on the scene, gathering what facts they could upon which to base their search for the robber.

Pawnshops were visited by the detectives in search of information, but nothing was found so far as is known, indicating that any of the gems had been pawned in Boston. The news of the robbery was telegraphed to other cities by the detectives.

When an effort was made to get at the facts last night the robbery became more mysterious. D. C. Percis, Jr., who was in the store when the theft was made away with the gems, was asked:

"Is it true that diamonds were stolen from your store a week ago today?"

"Yes, there was a robbery."

"Is it true that the value of the gems taken reached $20,000?"

"You have your figures a little too high—the amount is not as great as we thought it was at first."

"Will you give the correct value of the gems stolen?"

"I do not care to do so."

Within a stone's throw of the Jewelers' building is the City Hall police station. Captain Sullivan was at the station when news was sought there last night of the jewel robbery.

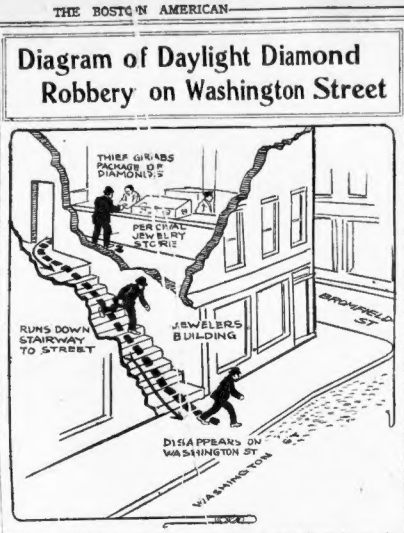
Police in the Dark.

"I don't know anything about such a robbery," said Captain Sullivan. "This is the first intimation that I have had that such a thing took place. No one reported the robbery to the police.

"I think it is a mistake when such a robbery takes place that the police in the district where it occurs are not notified. We have inspectors who keep in touch with men of a suspicious character, and if we were informed immediately after such a happening we might be able to get the guilty persons by prompt action."

It became known last night that the Pinkertons had increased their force of men on the case during the week, and that every effort possible was being made to run down the crime.

Diagram of Daylight Diamond Robbery on Washington Street



While a well-dressed man looked over a tray of unset diamonds at the Percival Store, at the corner of Washington and Bromfield streets, the confusion of the clerk was attracted to another part of the store. The visitor at once ran from the store, as shown in the diagram, carrying off thousands of dollars' worth of gems.

ONE MAN HURT WHEN RACING YACHTS CRASH

S. J. McMahon of South Boston, was knocked unconscious and several others had narrow escapes from injury when the yachts Clarinda of Boston and Thetis of Portland, Maine, collided outside of Marblehead harbor late yesterday. McMahon was taken to the Salem Hospital. His injuries are not serious.

Both yachts were racing against a stiff southeast wind. When the boats came together the mast on the Clarinda snapped off six feet from the deck. The gaff, sails and rigging fell to the deck and caught McMahon. The Thetis boom fell across his chest and knocked him unconscious. The Thetis, a 46-foot sloop, was not damaged. The other members of the crew aboard the Clarinda had narrow escapes.

Malden Cupid Finds Way Full of Barriers

But, Finally a Minister Is Found and Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Poole Are Happy.

Miss Ethel Morse and Frank J. Poole of Malden had a pretty hard time getting married, although they and their relatives were perfectly willing. They had originally expected to have the wedding two months hence.

Poole, who was a government employe, was suddenly transferred to the West. He wouldn't go without his bride and, for that matter, she would not let him.

The first obstacle they struck was the bridal notice required for the license. They explained that to Judge Sweetzer and he granted a special license.

Then they found that all of the regular clergymen were away on vacation, so they were in despair until someone remembered that the Rev. James Madge, a retired missionary, was in the city. He married them, and they started to Washington very happy in spite of their ante-nuptial difficulties.

$72,000 BANK ROBBERY.

New York Looters Tunnelled Through Basement for Haul.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Tunnelling through the ceiling of a basement room and then cutting a hole through the five-inches inch steel floor of the vault of a bank in the lower part of New York, a band of robbers secured $72,000 in bills of large denominations, and missed $3,000,000 more in cash.

Though the robbery was committed more than two months ago, it became public today for the first time. An impenetrable cloak of mystery has been thrown around the crime, and the directors of the bank, the name of which has not been revealed, have made up the loss from their personal resources. News of the robbery was withheld from police and newspapers by the directors, who feared a run on the bank.

PRESIDENT TO SIGN PANAMA CANAL BILL

House Will Accept Senate Amendments, but Measure First Goes to Conference.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—President Taft told several callers today that he expected to sign the Panama Canal bill passed by the Senate yesterday. The President is said to have declared some of the provisions of the measure did not meet with his views entirely, but that he expected to approve it.

The House will accept the Senate amendments to the bill, granting free tolls to American ships, whether engaged in coastwise or foreign trade, and American registry for foreign built ships when owned by American capital.

This was agreed upon today at an informal meeting of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, which originated the bill. It was decided, however, to send the bill to conference, so that there may be a more careful and searching investigation as to whether any foreign treaty rights are violated by the Senate amendment extending free tolls to American ships engaged in foreign trade. On this point the committee members are not certain. The conferees on the part of the House will be Chairman Adams and Representatives Sims of Tennessee and Stevens of Minnesota.

JAPAN TO MAKE GIFT.

Will Turn Over Her Panama Exposition Buildings.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—President Taft today received word that Japan is the first foreign nation to select her site for the erection of buildings at the Panama Pacific Exposition, to be held in San Francisco in 1915. Japan is planning to erect, upon her concession, a number of costly buildings, which will be turned over to the United States at the close of the exposition. A board from Japan is now enroute to Washington to inform the President of this fact. President Taft will receive the board and will accept the gift on behalf of the people of the United States.

FARMER KILLS SELF.

Fastens Rope About Neck and Jumps from Barn Window.

TAUNTON, Aug. 10.—George Clifford, a retired farmer, committed suicide today by hanging. He fastened a rope to the inside of a barn on his sister's estate, in Westville, on the outskirts of this city, then jumped from the window.

He was missing for several hours and a search was made for him by the employes on the farm. One of them found his body and cut it down. Despondency and family troubles are said to have caused the deed. Medical Examiner Charles Atwood pronounced it a case of suicide.

BROWN FOR GOVERNOR.

General Picked as Candidate By Ohio Republicans.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.—General N. B. Brown of Zanesville, was chosen by the Republican State Committee late this afternoon as the nominee for Governor to fill the vacancy caused by the withdrawal of Judge Dillon. The vote was 11 to 3, Roosevelt men voting for U. G. Denman.

SAM SCHEPPS IS TAKEN IN ARKANSAS

Man Wanted for Complicity in Rosenthal Killing Captured at Hot Springs.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Aug. 10.—Sam Scheppe, wanted for complicity in the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal, was arrested here this evening.

Jack Rose's Confession.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The New York American will tomorrow publish the first part of a signed confession from Jack Rose. In it he tells how he was lured into the web of the underworld; how he met Rosenthal; how they quarrelled and, finally, how they made up that quarrel. In part, he says:

"When nothing remained wherewith to gamble I let myself become a tool in the plotting of a man's life. It resulted in myself and three of my dearest friends facing the charge of being accessories in the murder of Herman Rosenthal.

In Connecticut Sports.

"As a young man I drifted into the state of Connecticut. In the city of Hartford I was known as the Charter Oak Athletic Club. It was a boxing club at which we gave monthly exhibitions, added to this another club at Bridgeport, and one at Waterbury. I also acquired a baseball franchise in the Connecticut State League. All these ventures brought me in close contact with sporting men, soon I took to gambling."

He then tells how from the small poker games of his town he drifted to the big gambling of New York and says:

"In addition to refusing to be the good fellow, which meant when I won, I differed my winnings or spent them; an other part of my reputation was that I would bet the limit against the bank. If I had really bet what I ought to, in comparison with my means, I would have still have been playing poker in Connecticut.

"Soon I began borrowing right and left. One day when I was completely broke in New York I wrote to my partners and friends in Connecticut, making a clean breast of everything. That ended my career in that State. I remained in New York and gave myself to a life of gambling."

Prey to Gambling.

Ross tells of how he became a prey to the gaming spirit, of how two theatrical friends attempted to help him, but of how he slipped back into gambling again. Then he became a friend of Herman Rosenthal. They were chums for four years, had a quarrel which they afterwards made up, taking a drink in Tom Sharkey's cafe.

"Rosenthal was very odd," says Ross, in closing, "about four years later, I started the gray automobile which ended its ride in the bullet-ridden corpse of Rosenthal, and all through gambling."

The Curran Aldermanic investigation committee will meet on behalf of all the information and evidence collected by the District Attorney's office in the graft probe. Mayor Gaynor will be subjected to a grilling. "Only one man is responsible for the present demoralization of police department," said Aldermain Curran today, "and that man is Mayor Gaynor. We have a few questions about his stewardship."

"I am reliably informed," he continued, "that for every twenty felonies committed in Greater New York, only one was solved by the police to the extent of arresting anybody. In other words, the conditions are twenty to one that the burglar, highwayman, pickpocket or other criminal will go scot free. I make the charge that every crime committed was with the permission of the police."

Newport Is a-Flutter Over Genuine Prince

NEWPORT, Aug. 10.—Newport society is all a-flutter today with the popping-out of the news that a real Italian Prince is in town. He is Prince Gennaro Caracciolli of Rome, Italy, and he thinks Newport is one of the prettiest cities in all the world, and that there are no handsomer women than right here.

The Prince has been stopping at the Muenchinger-King Hotel. He is of middle age and of immaculate dress. He has plenty of credentials, but has not a wide social acquaintance in Newport. His friends deny that he is a fortune hunter, and the Prince himself declares he is traveling solely for the pleasure of it.

"I am a Prince, but not of the royal Italian nobility," he said to a Sunday AMERICAN reporter. "One of my ancestors was King of Sicily about 1780. I belong to the Caracciolli Rosso branch of the family. Sergrinal Caracciolli was Great Seneschal of the Kingdom of Naples about 1420. Admiral Caracciolli lived at the time of Lord Nelson.

The Prince says he is more interested in sports than in society. From here he plans to visit Martha's Vineyard and then go to Lenox.

WARSHIP NEBRASKA LIMPING TO BOSTON

Travelling Slowly and Leaking Badly She Comes to Navy Yard for Repairs.

The battleship Nebraska, of the Neth Atlantic squadron, is on her way to Boston, traveling slowly and leaking badly, for repairs at the Charlestown Navy Yard, according to a wireless dispatch received at Newport, as a result of striking a reef off Point Judith and tearing open several of her keel plates.

Commandant D. W. Coffman of the navy yard said yesterday afternoon that he had not as yet received word the the Nebraska was headed toward the navy yard, but that he expected she would eventually turn up there for repairs.

"I have not had any orders yet in connection with the Nebraska," said the commandant. "I do not know what is extent of her damage is. Our impression here was that she would be able to continue her target practice."

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Reports of the Navy Department from Rear-Admiral Osterhaus of the Atlantic fleet stated that the battleships Connecticut and Nebraska would be laid up for some weeks. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Winthrop, on his return next week, will appoint a board of inquiry to investigate the accidents.

Landlord "All Out" of Dinner Material

Yet He Asks Detectives: What You'll Have? Now He's Worried.

BLACKSTONE, Aug. 10.—Four able-bodied citizens pulled up in an auto the other day before the O'Gara & O'Neil hotel in Millville.

"What'll it be, gents?" asked O'Gara.

The visitors mused over what they would like for dinner.

Mr. O'Gara was "all out" of everything.

"You have an inn-keepr's license," said one of the callers.

"Surest thing you know," said O'Gara, "have a look at it." The license was pointed out.

"Where's your register?"

O'Gara pointed to the cash register.

"No, no," said the fussy guest, "your register. The books for guests to register in."

Landlord O'Gara began to be worried. If they had anything of that kind, he said, his boy would know where it was, and the boy was "out."

The visitors turned out to be State Detective Robert E. Melt and four deputy sheriffs. They came to Blackstone on complaints from clergymen and other citizens. They arrested Arthur Morin of the Crescent House on a charge of selling liquor illegally and they called on every other dealer to warn him against Sunday selling.

For some days to come, the intimation is, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts proposes to keep a sharp eye on the saloons of Blackstone and Millville.

VAST SUM SPENT IN REPAIRING SCHOOLS

Extensive Work Has Been Going on Ever Since Vacation Began in June.

Boston will have expended in the improvements of her school houses by the first of next month, within the Summer, $215,591.75. This embraces the most extensive work of this kind that has ever been done in a year. Something has been done in the way of improvement in or about nearly every school building in the city. Boston has 346 school buildings—172 of them are of brick and 174 of wood.

The work began immediately after the schools closed the latter part of June. Carpenters, electricians, painters and masons went to work under the direction of the School House Commissioners. So well have the improvements progressed that assurance has been given that all the work contemplated will be finished by the time school opens next month under the new superintendent, Franklin B. Dyer.

Of the $337,000 appropriated for this work this year there will remain unexpended about $21,000. The work is done by contract after competitive bids have been made.

The new Hyde Park schools which have just come into the city had $25,000 spent on them. Many new rooms have been added and the buildings improved as to sanitation and in other ways.

GETS 2,300 VOLTS, BUT STILL LIVES

Ralph Newman, twenty-eight, of No. 402 Main street, Malden, has won for himself whatever fame there may be accruing from being able to say that 2,300 volts of electric fluid have passed through his body and he still lives to relate the circumstances. Newman was at work for the Malden Electric Company when he received the rubber glove used to protect himself and grasped a live wire.

The people of Boston, in ever increasing numbers during the past fifty years, have shown their approval of Butler's. Year by Year we have grown upon the solid foundation of satisfactory service until, now, the physical limitations will stand no further expansion.

The situation has been met in a manner for which both you and we may well be congratulated: You—our patrons—because of the convenience of the new store, located as it is in the very center of the shopping district of Boston (the intersection of Washington and Winter Streets—present Filene Buildings), where all lines of transportation converge. NEWPORTERS RESENT ATTACK BY BURDEN

NEWPORT, Aug. 10.—Residents of this resort of fashion resent the statement of I. Townsend Burden, Jr., millionaire clubman of New York, that there are so many "common people" here and at Bar Harbor that the "people of fashion" and "better class" of folks are being crowded out and thus compelled to go to the Continent or China to live.

Mr. Burden gave voice to these sentiments in Los Angeles, adding that the people of fashion have no proper place to live in America.

This is what the Rev. William Safford Jones of the Channing Memorial Church had to say about Mr. Burden's remarks:

"The more cosmopolitan and democratic we make make Newport the better. There are much more important problems to engage our attention just now than the mere matter of entertainment.

"There is the matter of safe and sane amusements for the young people for one thing that demands attention. We cannot in this country very well establish Gardens of Eden for any particular class. To me Newport and Bar Harbor are delightful."

City Suits Elisha Dyer.

Elisha Dyer, one of the leaders of Newport society, said:

"This is the first time I ever heard anything like the language attributed to Mr. Burden. All I can say is that I have lived in Newport twenty-five years and it suits me all right."

The Rev. George G. Merrill, whose wife is a sister of John Nicholas Brown, said:

"I know of no sentiment in the Newport colony that is seeking exclusive conditions. I have no occasion to make any comment on the situation. Newport seems to be good enough for men like August Belmont, Joseph Harriman, John Thompson Spencer, George De Forest, Clarence W. Dolan, William Ralph Emerson and many others of their caliber."

Here are some of the things that Mr. Burden said in his Los Angeles interview:

"The fashionable cities of the East, as Newport and Bar Harbor, have become so overcrowded and overrun with people of every class that the better class of folks are desirous of making some other place their headquarters.

Not Fit for Cultivated.

"People who have money—and money is easily made in America—are not necessarily its associates for the cultivated.

"There are today many common people with money enough to buy homes in restricted residence places—and most of them have done so. I do not mean to reflect upon the common people, for they are necessary to the economic development of the world, but I am not compelled to have social relations with people whom I do not like."

REBELS ATTACK TRAINS.

Nicaraguan Raids Also Reported to State Department.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Scattered raids by the Nicaraguan rebels and attacks on a number of railroad trains in the vicinity of Leon were reported to the State Department today. Lieutenant Campbell, in command of the sailors at Managua, reported that everything was quiet there.

NARRAGANSETT:

It May Be NAUGHTY, It's Surely GIDDY.

And There Was a Church Fair the Other Day That SOME Say Went the LIMIT.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

WHILE Newport, the city of palaces and family trees, sits coolly across the Bay and tip-tilts her aristocratic nose disdainfully skyward at her less fortunate sister-city, Narragansett Pier, life at the latter resort bubbles along just as merrily as too much money combined with too few brains are apt to make life bubble.

Narragansett Pier is by no means a TYPICAL New England resort.

Those with social aspirations coming from all over the country and sufficient newly acquired wealth to buy admission to almost anything, when turned from the gates of Newport go to Narragansett Pier and strenuously try to drown their sorrow.

Narragansett Is the Summer Mecca for the Newly Rich Whose Golden Keys Have Failed to Unlock the Marble Doors of Newport.

Narragansett Pier is the PREP SCHOOL FOR NEWPORT.

Some may get in in a few years of waiting, some may get in in shorter order and some may never get in—but they all have hopes.

They all wait and they all hope. But while they're waiting and hoping they're not sitting down idly and twirling their thumbs.

That dull ache of disappointment must surely be drowned somehow, and to plunge right into the vortex of gaiety seems the only way.

Some are drowned in the plunge and their sorrows have been forgotten; others are only drenched and their ambitions whetted by the shock of the plunge, while others plunge—perhaps not too deeply—and some day arrive.

It has been called NAUGHTY—well, that's too bad, it's hard to believe, but then, perhaps, it's true.

It has been called BLASE. That may also be true, but it is also said in the morning and only ceased when Bacchus got the better of Terpsichore. They did go about and call their fun and they also went the limit.

Three parties then rent the town, those who held that the others had merely "GONE AHEAD," those who said they had simply "HAD THEIR FUN," and those who said they had "GONE THE LIMIT." And the town is still gossiping and those on the outside still wondering just what did take place.

Speaking of the Pier as a prep school for Newport—in the graduating class next year will likely be Mr. and Mrs. Brevoort Kane and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fell. They come in touch with Newport people more often than any of the other residents. Mr. Kane quite frequently entertains members of the Newport Horse Fountain Polo Ing Club at the Pier, which organization includes about a dozen of Newport men. Mrs. Kane is famed as the best dressed woman at the Pier.

The John Felis were married about a year and a half ago. Mrs. Fell was formerly Dorothy Randolph, often referred to as the song-bird debutante. She is one of the most prominent matrons at the Pier and in her dress copies Eleanora Sears. Her sister, Hannah Randolph is an accomplished cross country rider and always rides astride. Her mannish togs are often the subject of much comment.

Mrs. J. J. Lawrence, widow of the millionaire medicine man of St. Louis, is another noted and interesting figure at the Pier. It was her granddaughter, Vera Asquith, of Atlanta, Georgia, who eloped and married Russell Hopkins.

LAST YEAR, MR. HOPKINS SENT SOME OF HIS FINEST HORSES TO THE NEWPORT HORSE SHOW AND THEY WERE NOT ADMITTED TO THE FIELD BECAUSE THEIR TAILS WERE NOT DOCKED.

They say, some say, of them, that though the wholesale gambling at Narragansett has been passed there is ample gambling "under cover."

One of the most important gathering places is the Narragansett Club. They say that from the outside it looks quite formidable and that getting in is somewhat of a trick but that after you are there the question of its exclusiveness is immediately forgotten and the strictness of the outside give way within to a liberty most entrancing. Refreshments are free and so is entertainment. There, to the uninitiated, shocks and quivers run down the spine in perpetual motion.

Since the police scandal in New York it is said that NO GAMBLERS CAN BE FOUND IN NEW YORK. THEY ARE ALL AT NARAGANSETT PIER.

One man has said of the Casino at the pier—the place where you go after dinner to go it up until tomorrow—"I am something of a man of the world but I saw people there I would really be afraid to meet. One man came up to me and said, 'How do you do? Glad to see you back. I just you here last night.' 'No, my dear chap,' I answered, 'I haven't been here before.'"

There are many parties going on at the Pier—there is the battle among the middle aged and old against time, consequently the Pier is crowded with beauty doctors.

There is the battle or rather the fight, to marry off the unloved daughters to wealthy men; the fight to keep slender and at the same time, not lose their good disposition; the fight to be counted the most lavish entertainer, and the bigger fight to be recognized among the Newporters.

Yes, there's money at Narragansett Pier, perhaps more money than in any other one resort in the East—but HAPPINESS? THEY HAVEN'T SUCCEEDED IN BUYING IT YET.

Beef From Argentina.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—American packers are after future control of the beef exporting trade of Argentina and already do the bulk of the business with England, although British capital is in competition through four companies. The American combine is known as La Blanca. It sells beef lower in England than here.

CHILD'S BODY BROKE OUT IN TOOTH RASH

From Waist to Feet Covered with Large Blisters. Suffered Dreadfully. Could Not Sleep. In Two Weeks Completely Cured by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

R. F. D., Box 92, Thornton, R. I.—"When my little girl was two months old she had erythema or tooth rash. The lower part of her body broke out in a rash which started in the form of small pimples. In a day or so the pimples formed a white head which broke causing a watery discharge to run from it. In a week the baby's body from her waist to her feet looked as if it had been burned, being covered with large blisters which broke open leaving the flesh exposed and causing the child intense suffering. I had an ointment to use on her every two hours. It did not do her any good, in fact she seemed to get worse and she suffered dreadfully. Someone told me they had never seen such a bad case on any child. She could not sleep and cried continually. She continued to suffer for five weeks the blisters spreading all the time. I then began with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I bathed her in warm water with plenty of Cuticura Soap and covered the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment. The next morning we were surprised at the improvement in her and in two weeks she was completely cured. I have used nothing but Cuticura Soap on my youngest child since its birth." (Signed) Mrs. Sara Richmond, Jan. 11, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. A single set is often sufficient. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

"Very Fond of Wilson."

"Do you think Roosevelt will get a strong support?"

"As to that I don't care to estimate."

"Is his plan in founding a new political party likely to be constructive in your opinion, doctor?"

"What do you think of the influences and permanency of the Progressive party?

"I wouldn't care to prophesy. I liked the Democratic platform and I am very fond of Woodrow Wilson. He would make a sound and able President. He is in every way qualified, by experience and natural ability.

"You see he has been more than an educator. He has held public office and written history. He is a fortunate choice. I see the Democrats had quite a tussle before they settled on a candidate. They compromised on a first-class one."

"By the way who is the AMERICAN with? Wilson? Splendid. So the Hearst papers are in for Wilson columns. How do the other Boston papers stand? I obtained a copy of the New York Tribune in Chicago and I couldn't determine where that stood."

Feeling the Pulse of Nations.

Dr. Eliot returns from four as a trustee of the Carnegie Peace Foundation. He was delegated to go from land to land studying conditions, scattering seeds of friendship and goodwill, feeling the pulse of nations and endeavoring as best he could to ascertain the most effective method of ridding the world of cannon, blade, strife and bloodshed.

He returned to his native hearth convinced, he says, that the world is not yet fitted for universal peace or the nations ready for disarmament, but he brings back encouraging tidings. He feels that The Hague has done immeasurable good and that it can continue so to do.

He found a healthy desire for arbitration, especially in China and Japan and other parts of the Orient. He says the Japanese consider talk of war with the United States ridiculous.

Dr. Eliot brings back fixed views as to immigration. He favors the admission of Chinese and Japanese immigrants, claiming that they should have the same rights as the Immigrants from Europe, Germany, Ireland, Sweden, Italy and other countries.

But he thinks immigration laws in the United States ought to be revised and regulated to meet present-day conditions. He says the Japanese feel keenly that they look upon on discrimination, so far as their immigrants are concerned.

Favors an International Law.

"I think there ought to be an international immigration law," added Dr. Eliot. "Every country should have a standard and fix to it. My suggestion would be not to permit an excess of one sex over the other. Let equal moments of sexes be admitted in every land.

"The trouble in this country is that we permit droves of unmarried men to land. They congregate in lodging houses. They are unhappy and discontented and gradually by their mode of living become a moral and social menace. Keep the quality of the nation sound by keeping pure the product of each element."

Dr. Eliot found it hard work to lecture through an interpreter at times, but says his audiences were flatteringly attentive.

In his role as globe-trotter he was out for observation and not speed. He was away nine months and one week, or to be exact—278 days. He figures that he travelled between 24,000 and 25,000 miles.

At one stage of his journey—in Kandy, Ceylon—he life was despaired of for weeks owing to an acute attack of appendicitis. He says it was anything but pleasant to battle with death so far from home.

Granddaughter's Romance.

When the Eliot luggage was tossed to the platform yesterday afternoon by a Pullman porter, the bags and trunks, great and small—a whole mound of them—were gayly frescoed with tags and stickers. Dr. Eliot and his party handled enough railroad and steamship tickets and passes to paper and carpet a good-sized room.

Not the least striking feature of Dr. Eliot's interview was his confirmation of the rumor that the love affair of his granddaughter, Miss Ruth Eliot, and his secretary, Rogers Pierce, son of Dr. M. V. Pierce of Milton, and a member of the publishing firm of Houghton, Mifflin Co., was brought to a climax by their administrations to him during his illness. In his capacity as amanuensis for Dr. Eliot, young Pierce fell in love with his granddaughter during Dr. Eliot's illness, proposed and was accepted.

The engagement took place in May after Miss Eliot's mother had been wired to in Europe, where she was sojourning. The marriage will take place in the Fall, but no date has yet been set. That will depend upon the wishes of Miss Eliot's mother, Mrs. Charles Eliot of Brookline.

When Speedy Marriage.

Mr. Pierce admitted with a broad smile that he wanted to be married just as early in the Fall as possible.

The Eliot party left the through train from Chicago at the Back Bay station. Mr. Pierce's little sister was the only one there to greet them. She was hugged by the tall young man and gave him a squeeze in return. And there were kisses for all.

Dr. and Mrs. Eliot and Miss Eliot went to Brookline under Mr. Pierce's escort, after which the secretary hurried to his home in Milton.

Dr. and Mrs. Eliot are to be the guests for a few days of Mrs. Guild, a sister of Dr. Eliot. Miss Eliot went to her home on Heath street.

They are to go next week to the Eliot Summer place at Mt. Desert, Me., where Mr. Pierce will join them.

Although a trifle slimmer than when he went away, Dr. Eliot looked wiry and strong. His skin was bronzed, his step astonishingly spry for a man of seventy-eight, and his eyes sparkled with health and good humor.

He wore a gray business suit, a straw hat with a soft, curled brim, a bright four-in-hand and tan shoes that have felt the polish of many brushes in many different climes.

He discussed subjects in general with the gusto of a young student. He seemed impervious to train fag, and it was a sticky day, too.

At every stop during their journey across the continent, Dr. and Mrs. Eliot enjoyed brisk strolls together on the station platforms. At Springfield, after pacing up and down, the former "Prexy" of Harvard wanted to try another lap, but the porter told him he'd lose the train, so he and Mrs. Eliot hurried aboard.

LOVE STORY OF RUTH ELIOT ON WORLD TOUR

"We Were Just Casual Friends Before We Started," Admits Fiancee of Secretary.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Rarely has the steady flow of Boston's social life been stirred by such a pretty romance as that of Miss Ruth Eliot, daughter of the late Charles Eliot, a son of Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, and Roger Pierce, secretary to Dr. Eliot. It was while making the world tour with his father with Dr. Eliot that the engagement was announced. The party reached Boston yesterday and I was immediately sent flying in pursuit of Miss Eliot.

Upon arrival Miss Eliot went immediately to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Guild, at No. 41 Edgehill road, Brookline.

There she remained but a short time before going with her fiance to the home of his parents in Milton, where the young people were overwhelmed with felicitations and congratulations, and were the cynosure of honor at a dinner at the beautiful Pierce home in the evening.

It was there I found Miss Eliot.

"Yes, the romance as you call it started during the tour around the world. We were just casual friends before we started, in fact were only what might be called casual friends," she admitted, and seemed loth to discuss so intimate a subject further. But friends say that more than once before the journey started the pretty granddaughter of the president Eliot and his efficient secretary had been forced to auburize one another, and some have said that even before the trip started the winsome pet of the president had more than once cast adulating glances at the broad-shouldered and always good natured secretary of the former college president.

Little did they think, however, that when the party started out that Cupid was in charge.

It was but a short time after starting on the trip that the blue-eyed, all-efficient grand daughter of Dr. Eliot commenced to depend more and more upon the young Adonis for information regarding the territory through which they were passing.

Soon the interesting companion awoke to the many charms of his pretty traveling mate. She, too, was interesting.

Both young Harvard athletes who had been as blissfully happy while so long sending up the shafts of the little Love God, became unduly worried. The journey was too much. He must speak, and still how dared he? His position was a confidential one. How dared he make love to the granddaughter of his employer?

They reached Honolulu. The journey was again interrupted. This time by the serious illness of the happy bride-to-be. Typhoid was the cause, but never was a patient with the dread disease lured back to health by more loving care.

And yesterday they lived their happiness all over once more, in the joy of their friends and relatives who received them so gladly and were so evidently supremely happy in this great joy which has come to them.

The wedding is to be in the Autumn, possibly in October.

Katherine Saltonstall.

MISS SALTONSTALL TO WED P. B. WELD

Miss Katherine Saltonstall, a Vincent Club favorite, is engaged to marry Philip B. Weld of Dedham. The engagement has just been announced. Miss Saltonstall is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Saltonstall of "Intervale," one of the show places of Milton.

Society and the Vincent Club know Miss Saltonstall as one of their favorites and a younger member. She has appeared in the club shows for several years, portraying the title roles cleverly. She is the eldest of three daughters. Her sisters are Miss Rose and Miss Frances Saltonstall.

Her fiance is the son of Gen. Stephen Weld and a Harvard graduate in the class of '08. He has been associated with the New York house of S. M. Weld & Co., cotton buyers, since his graduation.

FIFTH GAS METER ROBBER IS HUNTED

Four of Gang Captured After Exciting Chase in Which Shots Were Fired.

The police expect to capture the fifth members of the gang of alleged gas meter thieves, four of whom were run down Friday in an exciting chase in which the police of Revere, Chelsea and East Boston and Metropolitan Park officers took part. Many shots were fired before the four men were taken.

The four prisoners were arraigned in the Chelsea District Court on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

The men gave their names as follows: James Curran, nineteen, East Boston; Edward Harkins, nineteen, no home; Leo Allen, seventeen, Revere; Cornelius Keating, eighteen, East Boston.

Mrs. Wilson E. Witham, who lives at No. 34 Crest avenue, Beachmont, heard some one pounding in the cellar of the six-family apartment house in which she lives, and went down stairs to investigate. She saw three youths crouching there. Two more were outside, apparently on guard.

She rushed up stairs and shouted across to Mrs. J. Thomas that there were gas meter thieves in her cellar and asked her to notify the police. The thieves then ran from the building and down the street.

Chief Fred A. Sackett, who received the telephone call, jumped into his automobile with Patrolman Henry Blackmar, and proceeded to the house. In the meantime, Police Officer Edward Perker notified the Metropolitan Park police and an automobile with two officers from there was dispatched to the scene.

The Meridian street police station, East Boston, was called, and officers sent to Orient Heights to head off any suspicious persons coming from Revere over the boulevard, and the Chelsea police sent a squad down to the marshes to stop the youths if they came their way.

Separate on Marshes.

Chief Sackett and officer Blackmar reached the boulevard, near the Beachmont station, and saw five youths running toward the marshes.

On the marshes the five separated. One started on a run across the trestle bridge of the Hay State Road, East Boston, another took to the boulevard and the remaining three sought refuge in the tall sea grass.

Officer Toomey, who patrols Beachmont, jumped into the automobile of the park police and started off the youth who ran over the trestle bridge and captured him. He gave the name of Allen.

Officer Blackmar jumped into the marshes and gave chase to the trio there. He finally captured two of the men, each of whom waded deep in water. They surrendered at the command of the officer, who displayed his gun. The other two in the march escaped.

As the officers were returning from the heights side with Allen they saw a youth walking along the road with a pair of oars over his shoulders. A cry of recognition passed between him and Allen and they placed him under arrest. He said he had no name and that his name was Harkins.

The police afterward discovered a green rowboat tied up in Belle Isle creek, and say the youths intended to escape in that.

WRECK CAUSE BALKS STATE'S RAIL BOARD

Commission, However, Reports Equipment and Roadbed Not Defective.

Although nine-six hours have elapsed since the South Boston wreck on the New Haven road, which caused the deaths of eight persons and injuries to sixty others, the cause of the disaster has not been determined.

The Railroad Commission, in a preliminary report, settles at least one question, namely, that the wreck was not caused by a defect in the train equipment or of the rails and roadbed.

The condition of Miss Blanche Brink-water at the Relief Hospital and Mrs. Daniel J. Griffin of Braintree at the Grace Hospital, and also that of the Rev. George Bullen of Hingham, who is at the Quincy Hospital, Parker Hill, were reported much better last night and hopes for their recovery are entertained.

The last two persons to succumb to injuries received in the wreck are Mrs. Stella B. Dorey, of No. 22 Cedar Cliff street, Braintree and Mrs. Fanny Wilde, of No. 214 Bunker street, Roxbury. All the wreck patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital have been discharged.

What Preliminary Report Says.

The Railroad Commission, in its preliminary report, says:

At the time of the accident the board was in the western part of the State on official business.

Two inspectors of the board were at the scene of the accident shortly after it occurred, and have been studying the situation since that time, being present at the investigation made by the officials of the railroad.

The board returned to Boston at the earliest possible moment to investigate the accident, and, accompanied by one of its inspectors visited the scene of the wreck and made a thorough examination of the roadbed and track from Crescent avenue station to a point thirty feet north of where the derailment of the train occurred.

Roadbed Found Solid.

The board found the track to be constructed with rail weighing one hundred pounds per yard, sound ties and solid roadbed, the track being in good surface, line and gauge, and that the condition of the roadbed and track in no way contributed to the accident.

The track has not been repaired or changed since the accident.

The inspectors of the board have carefully examined the equipment of the train and have found no defects which, in their opinion, could have caused the accident. The board will continue the investigation and endeavor to discover the cause of this accident.

WOULD HELP INDIANS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Characterizing the present conditions of health on Indian reservations and in Indian schools as "very unsatisfactory," President Taft today sent a special message to Congress, urging the passage of the measure now before the House appropriating $250,350 for an Indian medical service.

SUMMER COLDS

Are Considered by Doctors More Dangerous Than Winter Colds.

A person is quite as apt to catch cold in the summer as in the winter, but it is harder to cure a cold in the summer than in the winter. In winter the bracing air assists the remedy to overcome the cold, but the sultry, depressing weather of summer retards the cure of colds.

The public is much interested in knowing a remedy that will successfully cope with summer colds. A remedy that covers just such cases is Peruna. Experience has taught that it is the one remedy that promptly expels summer colds of every character and description.

Miss Ivy Gray, Fairview, Ky., says: "I have taken Peruna, and would say that it is the best medicine for coughs and colds I ever saw. I find that it always cures a cold in a short while. It also strengthens and builds up the system."

SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To avoid disappointment, we would say that the name of PE-RU-NA-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio, and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

THREE BEST SWIMMERS IN THE GIRLS' RACE

Gertrude Gibson, winner of the third prize, after a spirited struggle with Lena Raven of Providence, who finished fourth. Gertrude is a younger sister of Marion Gibson, winner of the first prize.

Marion Gibson of Tenean Beach, winner of the race in record-breaking time. She finished away ahead of her nearest competitor. Below her picture is photograph of the trophy won by Miss Gibson.

Miss Barry of the North End, who finished second to Marion Gibson and ahead of Gertrude Gibson. Miss Barry was the winner of the second prize.

fully looked after from start to finish. For each girl there was a boat manned by life-savers, so that no girl was in danger at any time.

One of the points about the race that caught the crowd's attention was the enthusiasm of Miss Marion Gibson on finishing. Mounting the raft, she welcomed each of the other girls as they finished. There were cheers and cheers for the winner and her less successful competitors.

The race itself was exciting and picturesque. The flock of contestants were lined up upon the edge of the raft, and at the crack of the pistol plunged into the water together. There were no handicaps. All the contestants were on equal terms, though their ages ranged from twelve to eighteen.

Out of the bunch of heads darted Marion Gibson's before they had proceeded fifty feet from the raft. She was never headed, but she was contest to keep a few feet ahead of the bunch until the half-way stake was reached. Close behind her came her sister Gertrude, her most dangerous rival, and not far in the rear Mae Barry, a powerfully built girl, was moving easily and steadily, using a trudgeon stroke.

At the half-way stake, which was a little more than three-quarters of a mile up river, Marion Gibson was nearly a hundred feet ahead of her sister, who had barely thirty feet lead over Mae Barry.

Isabelle Lavery was fourth by a good margin over Lena Raven. The others were well strung out and practically out of the contest for the cups.

Miss Gibson steadily increased her lead during the return journey, but her sister, Gertrude, found herself threatened by Mae Barry. They had a very pretty contest, but at a quarter of a mile from the finish Miss Barry's powerful overhand stroke put her in the lead.

Gertrude Gibson was tired by her efforts and slowed up a bit, only to find herself in danger of losing third place.

The plucky little Miss Lena Raven, from Providence, had actually succeeded in passing the powerful Isabella Lavery and was coming down very fast. The Tenean Beach crowd on the Esplanade warned Miss Gibson of her danger and she renewed her efforts.

The Raven child came on, rapidly gaining upon Miss Gibson until they were almost abreast and only thirty feet from the finish. Both spurted and Miss Gibson succeeded in reaching the goal a couple of feet ahead of her opponent.

Mother Hugs Wet Child.

"Come on Lina," called her mother, who stood on the edge of the raft, and she dragged the plucky midget from the water, smearing her, wet as she was.

The little girl had swum herself quite out, and it was several moments before she recovered. She was heartily cheered.

A moment later Miss Lavery finished and then others straggled in. It was thirty-nine minutes after Miss Marion Gibson had finished that the last swimmer reached the raft and received her finishing medal.

The physicians who were in attendance were delighted to observe the wonderful condition of the little athletes at the finish. Most of them were not at all in distress and apparently able to go a much longer distance.

There was great rivalry upon the banks as well as in the water between representatives of the various beaches and baths—North End, L. Street, Brookline, Tenean Beach and other places. The Tenean Beach crowd were the best organized and made the most noise. They had banners proclaiming "Championship 1911," streamers and noise promoters.

Tenean Beach had the greatest number of entries and took first and third place.

One of the features was fancy diving by Miss Winnie Conley, who won fourth prize in last year's race, and her sister, Grace Conley. Miss Ruth Calkins, nine years old, also entertained with swimming stunts. Miss Winnie Conley was not a contestant in the swimming race this year.

Raft No. 1—Mrs. May Burke and the Berlo sisters of the Patti diving girls' show at Revere Beach, Ruth Calkins, Winnie and Grace Conley.

Raft No. 2—Misses Margaret Harris, Mary Brophy and Helen Conway of Brookline.

Though the race was the big feature, there were other events on the program which held the keen interest of the crowd from beginning to end. From rafts especially constructed for the purpose well-known girl swimmers and divers of Greater Boston gave splendid exhibitions of fancy aquatic "stunts," to the great entertainment of the huge throngs along the esplanade.

The crowd packed the esplanade practically from the Boston bridge to the Harvard bridge. On the latter structure, several thousand people had gathered.

Expert Swimmers Contend.

The number of entries and the expertness of the swimmers entered assured the thorough success of yesterday's great carnival. Last year there were twenty-five starters. Yesterday there were practically twice that number. The girls came from every part of Greater Boston and in the number are some of the best girl swimmers Boston has ever turned out.

Until the entries closed Thursday noon, there was no let-up in the enthusiasm of the girl contestants, who vied with one another to enter in the big race of the year. Here is the complete list of entries and the numbers of the contestants.

7-YEAR-OLD JUMPS IN FRONT OF AUTO

Everett Boy's Skull Is Fractured and Many Bones Are Broken.

Rushed at top speed in the automobile which had struck him and knocked him down in front of his home, No. 948 Broadway, Everett, yesterday afternoon, Robert L. Miller, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James Miller, is at the Massachusetts General Hospital, where he is suffering from a fractured skull. He has a bare chance for recovery.

The injury to young Miller is the result of jumping from the sidboard of an ice wagon directly in front of an automobile owned and driven by Charles F. Morgan of No. 187 Elm street, Everett. Miller and a playmate were playing around the wagon, and when the driver appeared the boys jumped. Miller landing directly in front of the oncoming automobile.

The boy was picked up unconscious by his mother and carried into this home. Physicians were called. It was found that there was a slight chance that an immediate operation would save the child's life. He was placed in Morgan's automobile and rushed to the Massachusetts General Hospital. Morgan put on full speed and lost no time in getting the boy to the hospital. Surgeons had in the meantime been notified by telephone and everything was in readiness for an immediate operation. Besides a fractured skull, the boy has many broken bones. He is on the dangerous list.

REWARD FOR FIREBUG.

Onset Offers $250 for Arrest of Person Setting 3 Fires.

ONSET, Aug. 10.—The selectmen have offered a reward of $250 to the person who can give information which will lead to the arrest of the firebug who has been active in this town for the past week. Three fires during the past week have caused the residents considerable alarm. The first destroyed the barn of Mrs. C. P. Marshall at East Wareham. The second destroyed the cooperage establishment of Thomas McKay and the third gutted the Town Hall at Bourne.

Has Inez Milholland Won Burke Roche?

Newport Wonders if Young Society Man Has Met Fate in Fair Suffragist.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 10.—Since Miss Inez Milholland, the New York suffragist, came here as the guest of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, society circles have been trying to solve two riddles around the tea tables. Here is one of them:

"Has Maurice Edmund Burke-Roche, the possessor of an annual income of $250,000 and with more millions to his name than he can count on his fingers, at last met in Miss Milholland his ideal young woman?"

And the second puzzling conundrum to Newporters bears directly on the first:

"Is the wealthy youth about to become a convert to woman's suffrage?"

For their answers, the society folk—chiefly the women—say it is "no" and again it is "yes." There are some who think one way, and others who think differently, but everybody is agreed that young Burke-Roche has been very attentive to Miss Milholland the past week, so they say. This has set society to talking. Nobody has dared ask the couple about it. Miss Milholland is here primarily to confer with Mrs. Belmont and advance the "cause," and there isn't any doubt but that young Burke-Roche would be hailed as a valuable addition to the suffragist forces, according to Newport's way of thinking.

Just how the two feel on the more tender subject now being discussed here of course isn't at all a certainty.

MARINE FOUND DEAD.

Physician Says Portsmouth Victim's Neck Was Broken.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 10.—At 1 a. m. today a sailor passing through an alley off Water street found David H. Carlson, a marine from the barracks at the navy yard, lying dead under the window of the house occupied by Charles B. Amay. Officer Philbrick called Deputy Sheriff Shaw and Medical Referee Walker. Dr. Walker said the man's neck was broken.

Officer Lally Resigns.

Edward J. Lally, the Malden policeman suspended Tuesday evening and given a hearing Friday night by Police Commissioner Charles G. Warren, yesterday handed his resignation to the commissioner. It was accepted. The police refuse to reveal the charges, which, it is believed, were not of a serious nature.

CUPID'S CAPTIVE IN CITY HALL ROMANCE

Pittsfield Stenographer Joins Colony of Brides, Former City Employes.

PITTSFIELD, Aug. 10.—Miss Gertrude Sherman was one of the best stenographers ever employed at City Hall. That was because she knew a lot of things besides shorthand. The first time she ever saw a transit instrument, which is used by engineers in surveying, she wanted to know all about it.

Charles R. Goddard, Jr., assistant city engineer, obliged. When he got through showing the instrument to her and she had sighted through it, little Joys were dancing before her eyes. He saw them, too. That was four years ago.

As a result of this little incident the young couple were married today beneath a bower of flowers at her home at Hinsdale. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Samuel Ross Swift. Miss Gladys Sherman, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Robert W. Browning of Dalton was best man.

When Miss Sherman resigned recently to prepare for the nuptials there were a dozen girl applicants for her job who had heard of Cupid's work there. Miss Anna Murphy, the pretty eighteen-year successful applicant, is the most envied girl in Pittsfield and her fate is awaited with interest.

Goddard is now a supervising engineer for the R. H. Howes Engineering and Construction Company of New York, and is in charge of a big job in Syracuse, where the young couple will reside after the honeymoon.

This was the third romance in City Hall in the last four years. First, City Engineer A. B. Farnham fell in love and married Miss Pearl Morgan, who had preceded Mrs. Goddard as the stenographer for City Almoner A. W. Shaw.

Then City Clerk A. C. Daniels married Miss Alice Hudner, the chief toll operator of the Pittsfield telephone exchange, whose acquaintance he first made over the wire when an active operator.

Would Abolish the Record.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Senator Smith of Arizona would force an early adjournment of Congress by doing away with the Congressional Record. He advises that members of Congress hire reporters and pay to have their speeches printed.

HALE VAULTS INTO BULL MOOSE SADDLE

Gets Right on His Back and Waves Back Defi to State G. O. P. Troopers.

Matthew Hale, ranchman, rough rider, councilor of the city of Boston and follower of Theodore Roosevelt, is in the saddle as active head of the Bull Moose campaign in Massachusetts.

Member from the Bay State of the National Progressive Committee, Chairman Hale speaks up from the throne on the Roosevelt hills, following Colonel Roosevelt and the Bull Moose Progressive party.

Chairman Hale, before lolog at his desk in hoc business quarters in the Bull Moose Republican machine outfit in New England, said:

"I've no formal statement to give out, to be said, because it's time to do things now and not simply talk. We will have nothing to do with the so-called Republican party. It's Roosevelt, Roosevelt, Roosevelt, and then more Roosevelt, with us. Those who are not with us are against us. We'll have our own set of presidential electors in the field, and we'll have our candidates for State office and for Congress on the ticket also.

"We will have no convention. When our postal card poll of voters who desire to enroll themselves as Progressives is completed, we will file our nomination papers according to that poll shows the preference of those who are with Roosevelt and Johnson. This will not happen until after the September primaries of the legally designated parties.

"Beginning Monday, we will go ahead with organizing every city and town in the State. We'll have a perfect organization in every city and town. The Democratic or Republican boss who's their candidates are to be.

"There'll be some waking up in this State and in all New England pretty soon among those who published the downfall of Colonel Roosevelt and the Progressives. This waking up will come soon, too."

At Republican State headquarters the large portrait of Colonel Roosevelt still adorns the wall in the office of the chairman.

"No," said Secretary Groves last night, "it hasn't been turned to the wall. Not yet."

Inside information has it that the Colonel's portrait will go to the carpet or the cellar of the Kimball building the first thing Monday.

"Ah, that's the role we put it in the cellar," said the sheep head janitor of the building. "An' me, first think of it, was a called man, putting the Kunnel away."

Miss Alice Carpenter, Progressive Delegate, Says New Organization Is a Party for Women as Well as Men

"The Progressive Party Means the Birth of a New Idea Which Is Destined to Grow Until Its Influence Is Felt in Every Phase of Life—We Are on the Threshold of Better Things"

THE first American woman to act on the Resolutions Committee in the national convention of one of the great political parties was a Massachusetts woman, Miss Alice Carpenter of Boston. Miss Carpenter is a graduate of Radcliffe.

This history-making honor came to Miss Carpenter, and Boston, during the week just closed at Chicago, where the Massachusetts woman helped to build the platform of the Progressive party. She was one of the Bay State delegates.

Yesterday came the news that State Chairman Hotchkiss of New York had designated Miss Carpenter to take charge of the work of organizing the women who will participate in the Progressive convention in that State. Mr. Hotchkiss declared Miss Carpenter "is to New England what Jane Addams is to the West."

The editor of the Sunday AMERICAN telegraphed Miss Carpenter at Chicago to ask if she would write of her impressions of the convention for the benefit of Sunday AMERICAN readers. The following reply was received by wire:

By ALICE CARPENTER.

Of Boston, Massachusetts Delegate to the Progressive Convention at Chicago.

THE Progressive party of America is a progressive party not only of men, but of men and women; the birth of a new idea which is destined to grow until its influence is felt in every phase of life.

The convention opened Monday morning with Senator Beveridge's speech.

The eloquence of the Senator from Indiana is, I think, not known to many Massachusetts people. They will have the privilege, in the campaign that lies before us, of reading his speech, even if they cannot hear the ring of his voice and feel the sincerity of his personality as he gave utterance to these great thoughts and high ideals which have characterized the spirit of the convention.

And then the second day.

We assembled at 10.

The cheering and singing was incessant, when suddenly Roosevelt was there.

In an instant we were on our seats waving the red bandanna and yelling "Roosevelt!" "Teddy!" "We want Teddy!"

The band burst forth, and out of hearts and voices rang the tribute of fifteen thousand men and women to their leader.

Nor were the women in the background.

Miss Addams seconded the nomination of the Colonel, and when it was over, followed by a thousand men and women to the music of fife and drum, marched about the hall wearing her "Votes for Women" banner.

Surely a new day has dawned.

It is a difficult thing for me to express what it means to me, as a woman, to have had the privilege of serving with the type of man that gathered about the table to draw up the platform for the new Progressive party, nor how much I appreciate what the sacrifice meant to the man whose place had been given me to fill.

For the first time I had the honor of serving my State and of representing it before the people.

It was a high honor, not only to me, but through me to all the women of my State.

It is for us now to prove, we women of Massachusetts, that we are capable of responding to the hand which has been stretched out to us, not only to promote the interests of women, but because our help also is needed to promote the interests of men.

There are two facts which stood out prominently through the whole convention, and I think there is not a person here who has not recognized them. First, the type of man that has gathered is the best our country affords; and, second, that the party is not Rooseveltian, but that he is serving the interests of those who have selected him as their leader.

We had on our Resolutions Committee an extremely interesting group of men representing every side of life, the farmer, the writer, the business man, the theorist and the idealist.

We assembled at 10 p. m., and at 6 o'clock in the morning we were still there.

MISS ALICE CARPENTER

Through that long night and in the heated discussions there was never a moment a lowering of the standard, an appeal to anything that would suggest cheap politics, but a men was on his feet in an instant saying, "Gentlemen," we must remember that we are working here tonight not for votes, but for principles. It is better our party should fail than that our standard should be lowered."

It is impossible to conceive that a new party could be created with less personal interest involved or a more conscientious effort toward the suppression of that infrest for the sake of the common good. I believe that this spirit within the party is going to live.

At 8 o'clock in the morning a subcommittee was formed for the purpose of revising the platform. We met again at 12 and sat until 4 o'clock, when the platform was handed in its final form to Colonel Roosevelt.

I am very glad to know that one can live without sleeping quite easily during moments of such deep interest. And I have proved definitely that a woman can do it as well as a man.

There are to be four women on the National Committee, delegates-at-large. These women are Miss Frances Keller, coming from the South; Miss Jean Gordon, from the South; Mrs. Blakney of California, from the West, and Miss Jane Addams, from the Middle West.

Already we have met for the purpose of discussing the plans for the organization of the Progressive party.

There will be no AUXILIARY women's committees. The Progressive party will have on ALL its committees one woman at least, to work WITH them. It is a man and woman party.

We come back from Chicago inspired to greater efforts.

We are standing on the threshold of better things.

The West feels the spirit that lies back of us, and already the response is ringing to success.

The East cannot hold back. The East must not fail to realize that if it hopes to hold its old place in the life of our country, as leader in great movements, it must learn that the Past belongs to the Past, and the Present is here to build for the better Future.

BENTON AND WALKER OMIT NAME OF TAFT

Rival G. O. P. Candidates Star Speakers at Lynn Committee Outing.

Colonel Everett C. Benton of Belmont and former Speaker Joseph Walker of Brookline, rival candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, were twin stars yesterday at the annual shore dinner of the Lynn Republican City Committee. The outing was held at Seaside Park, Marblehead.

Colonel Benton talked along familiar lines, in favor of "eliminating the close corporation iden" from the party, in criticism of those who would find a way for "circumvent" the direct primary law, in favor of "liberalizing" the G.O.P., and for "more shirtsleeves and fewer frock coats."

"Affiliation with our party," Colonel Benton said, "should be made as free as air. Too often it has been as elaborate as joining a social club, where a man's name had to be posted thirty days in advance, with two sponsors to guarantee him.

"I want the Republicans to understand that I am for harmony. If Joseph W. Walker is nominated I will support him. He is indeed a gentleman. I am sure of one thing. If I am nominated I can defeat Governor Foss."

Speaker Walker began by declaring his belief that Massachusetts is "the most progressive State in the Union." In Mr. Walker's typewritten copy the "p" in "progressive" was a little one.

Mr. Walker hoped that people would soon "peckling the New England railroad and let it go ahead and show what it can do. At the same time he thinks the Railroad Commission should be given the power to "order" as well as the power to "recommend."

It was noticeable that neither of the Republicans who wants the nomination for Governor mentioned the name of William H. Taft. This omission was commented on considerably at Marblehead. Outside of that, the outing was a great success.

A feature of the outing was the presence of ex-Congressman John R. Thayer of Worcester, a prominent Democrat. He sat at the head of the guests' table and smiled broadly when the various speakers made thrusts at his party leaders and the platform.

Fire Captain Saves a Life.

Captain William Welch of the Lynn Fire Department was passing the lodging house at No. 44 Pearl street, Lynn, and heard loud cries from a window in the building. He forced the door and found Henry Moulton lying unconscious on his bed, which was burning. He carried the man out on his back and, with the aid of several neighbors, extinguished the fire without sounding an alarm.

Knox Will Attend Funeral of Mikado

Secretary of State to Represent President Taft at Royal Obsequies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—To emphasize the cordial relations that have existed between the United States and Japan for the past century, President Taft today decided to send Secretary of State Knox as his special and personal representative to the funeral of Emperor Mutsuhito. The funeral ceremonies will be held in Tokio on September 12. In addition to the Secretary of State the special mission will include an admiral of the navy, a general of the army and Rear Admiral S. Miller, chief of the division of Far Eastern affairs of the State department. Mrs. Knox also will accompany the Secretary.

SHINE OUT FOR MAYOR.

Car Strike Leader Seeks the Honor in Malden.

Thomas F. Shine of Malden, one of the most active leaders in the recent strike of elevated employes and president of the Medford car barn local union, today announces his candidacy for Mayor. He is the first candidate to seek the Malden mayoralty on a labor platform. During the strike Mr. Shine and Mayor George L. Farrell were not on the friendliest of terms. The Mayor sent a contribution of $2 to the strikers which Shine returned to him. A controversy over the affair ensued, culminating in a bitter wordy battle in Malden City Hall, in which the Mayor declared Shine ought to get a punch in the nose.

ALDERMEN MUST RETURN

Unless They Vote Money Medford Pupils May Lose Half Day.

It remains with the Medford Board of Aldermen to decide whether the high school pupils in that city have a chance to go to school whole days or only half sessions. If the aldermen come back from their vacation and pass an appropriation of $30,000 the addition that is needed can be built to the school. If the appropriation is not made at once, between 200 and 300 pupils will be without a chance to go to school. At present the accommodations, even with the use of the assembly and lecture halls, fall short. The appropriation at present is $290,000.

Leg Broken in Runaway.

MARLBORO, Aug. 10.—Henry Fahey of No. 72 Kingold street, is at the Marlboro City Hospital with a broken leg, being thrown from a carriage on Main street this afternoon. With Walter Daley of No. 69 Maple street, Fahey was driving down town when the horse became frightened and ran away. Fahey tried to stop the horse, his leg being caught in the wheel.

O'CONNELL IN RACE FOR U. S. SENATOR

Former Congressman Will Be Candidate in Opposition to Mayor Fitzgerald.

Hon. Joseph F. O'Connell of Boston, who formerly represented the old tenth, the Roxbury district in the National House of Representatives, is a Democratic candidate against Mayor John F. Fitzgerald for the United States Senate to succeed Winthrop Murray Crane.

O'Connell said yesterday:

"Yes, I am a candidate for the United States Senatorship to succeed Senator Crane."

"What is your platform?"

"I shall probably make a formal announcement of my candidacy next week. All I care to say now is that I think that the Democratic members of the Legislature of 1913 ought to have a chance to vote for some other candidate than John F. Fitzgerald.

"I was a candidate for the senatorship in 1911 against Senator Lodge. In the caucus of the Democratic members of the Legislature I was voted for on the first ballot, along with Sherman L. Whipple, John B. Thayer, James H. Vahey, Charles S. Hamlin and others. Mayor Fitzgerald was not a candidate then. I see no reason why he should be now, and I certainly see no reason why I should not be."

For Sallow, Blotchy, Rough or Greasy Skin

(From Woman's Tribune.)

Some skins require constant grooming to keep them fresh becoming oily, muddy, blotchy or rough, or if such condition has developed, to overcome it. In such chronic cases it is particularly inadvisable to keep piling on cosmetics which clog the pores, collect dust and dirt—especially in warm weather—making the complexion worse than ever. It's a lot more sensible to use ordinary mercolized wax, which literally absorbs a bad complexion. Apply the wax, like cold cream, before retiring; next morning, in washing it off, you'll wash away fine, flesh-like particles of the unsightly cuticle. Repeat for a week or more and you'll have an entirely new skin—soft, pearly, spotless and beautiful as a child's. One ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any druggist's, is all you'll need.

If the skin be wrinkled or flabby, here's the best possible remedy: Mix a pint witch hazel and 2 ounce powdered saxolite and use as a face bath. It works like a miracle, yet is entirely harmless.

Fat People's Summer Dangers.

Reduce One Pound Daily. Improve in Health and Appearance.

Heat Prostration, Sunstroke or Apoplexy (leading Doctors so followers) or Weakening of the Brain, Heart Disease, Stomach Cramps, Kidney Disease, Diabetes, Loading of Vital Energy are a few of the serious troubles which are most liable to come upon you during the heated term, humid weather. Apart from these dangerous disorders, there are numerous lesser ones directly influenced each and every day, during extreme temperature and weather. It is a well-known fact that fat people are very much more susceptible to heat than thin people; it is seldom possible to be really contented. It is difficult to work, unfit or enjoy one's self. The body becomes even larger, the fat is packed in more closely around the vital organs and digestion and breathing is very much interfered with. Fat people die 10 to 20 years too soon. Reliable statistics show that fat people die much earlier than those of normal weight. Obesity (corpulency) is an acknowledged disease. It ruins health, figure, complexion, freedom and energy. It never cures itself but becomes worse as the person grows older. The time to check its progress and get rid of superfluous fat is now. Mine is the reliable, safe, sure, quick method. I reduce all the fat you want, where you want it, and keep it off.

PROF. LEWIS IN FIELD.

Is a Candidate for Congress in the First District.

GREENFIELD, Aug. 10.—Nicholas J. Lawler, member of the Democratic State Committee, received a telegram from Professor Edward Morgan Lewis, who is in Europe, announcing that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress for the First Congressional District.

At the November election in 1910, Professor Lewis received 13,244 votes and George F. Lawrence 14,109. Professor Lewis was then a member of the faculty of Williams College. Some few months ago he was elected assistant dean of the Massachusetts Agricultural College at Amherst.

In view of the remarkable run made by Professor Lewis two years ago the Democrats in this section believe that he can be elected if he receives the nomination.

He also will be sent to South Carolina and Georgia. Lewis left today for Boston.

WILSON IS WARNED ABOUT ROOSEVELT

Told by Brooklyn Leader the Moose Will Develop Dangerous Strength.

SEAGIRT, N. J., Aug. 10.—Governor Woodrow Wilson heard some plain and not very encouraging truths today from the lips of Frederick W. Hinrichs, one time candidate for Lieutenant Governor of New York, and a member of the delegation from the Brooklyn Democratic club which called at the Little White House this afternoon.

"Governor," said Hinrichs, "you may have noticed that Roosevelt's pronunciation had a decided punch in it—a punch by which fascinated me to the very end. I am sorry to hear Roosevelt say he stands for protection, and I believe in my heart he is for free trade. But I want to say to you, Governor Wilson, even if we forfeit this election, we ought to stand for what we believe is right. I believe your speech was full of genuine Democracy, but I want to warn you that, within a couple of weeks Roosevelt will have a working organization behind him that will not be under the control of any boss or bosses. Many Democrats are going to support Roosevelt on the ground that hitherto the American people have had little to do with their own movement, and that it has been under the control of political machines. I believe you should emphasize over and over again how little is to be attached to political organizations or machines."

Hungarians Pledge Support.

Heinrichs was finally silenced by other members of the delegation, and Governor Wilson made a short speech to his adherents. This was the first of his speeches, and in it he made no attempt to reply to Heinrichs' warning against Roosevelt.

The second speech was made to the Wilson and Marshall Club of Orange, N. J. The members came one hundred strong all shook hands with the candidate, and then listened to a speech delivered from the same spot on which he made his speech accepting the nomination.

A delegate of a dozen Hungarian-Americans came to assure the Governor of the support of their organization, numbering 500 members. Morris Cukor, the spokesman, secured a promise from the Governor that he would deliver a speech to the Hungarians in New York some time during the campaign.

The National Deep Waterways Association sent a committee to ask the Governor to speak at their annual meeting at New London, Sept. 6. They announced they had a half promise from President Taft to speak on this occasion and they did not see Governor Wilson.

Open Campaign in Maine.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The national campaign of the Democratic party will be formally opened on Monday. The first gun will be fired in Maine. This announcement was made at national headquarters today by Congressman Daniel J. McGillicuddy. The campaign will be opened in other States in rapid succession.

"During the past week," said Mr. McGillicuddy, "I have received over 400 letters from every part of Maine. There is not a single weak spot. Wilson will get the Independent vote solidly. Never before have I felt such anti-election confidence."

TAFT AND ROOSEVELT DENOUNCED IN HOUSE AS THE FOES OF LABOR

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Colonel Roosevelt and President Taft were denounced as foes of labor in a campaign speech in the House today, by Representative Wilson, Democrat, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Wilson is chairman of the House Committee on Labor. His speech, which was at once hailed by the Democratic party for labor, was on "Labor and the Democrats."

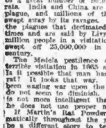
"Democrats," said Mr. Wilson, "have legislated during the last session of Congress that they are labor's real political friends and are prepared to pass needful legislation for working men.

"It seems strange, but nevertheless, it is true, that Theodore Roosevelt, who has for months been parading himself as the friend of the common people, was the first President to issue an executive order denying those employed by the government the right to petition Congress for redress of grievances. This gag order was broadened by President Taft."

The Speaker stated that Governor Wilson is now on the labor question the best informed, best educated, He declared the New Jersey executive had a more unwhipple record than that of Colonel Roosevelt.

Mr. Wilson declared Roosevelt never suggested any beneficial legislation, but contented himself with promises. He added that President Taft, since his injunction issued against striking workingmen, "has never had a sympathetic understanding of the needs and rights of American labor."

Facts About the Plague



The history of Bubonic Plague in Havana and Peru is familiar. Recall the outbreak in San Francisco in 1907. It threatened other California communities but New England is threatened today.

But few people are acquainted with the way it does at San Francisco, work which has made that city one of the most clean in the world.

Where the plague made its appearance in September, 1907, the California Legislature appealed to President Roosevelt for expert assistance to meet the threatened danger.

This request was speedily answered, and some of the most capable scientists in the country were assigned to direct the crusade on the rats.

In April of the same year the plague destroyed over one million people in the Punjab province of India.

The United States government at one time offered bounties to the Philippines for all rats killed and delivered at a certain point.

In Honolulu the government applied the torch to a great number of buildings to get rid of the rats. India and China are suffering from the plague, and millions of the vagabond have been killed. Rats, no doubt, caused the plagues that decimated the tribes of Biblical times. Rats are the cause of the recent 100 million dollar revolt in a visitation 40 years ago, an average of 25,000,000 in Europe in the 14th century.

The Medela pestilence of 1663 and London's terrible visitation in 1665 are recalled by rats. Is it possible that man has been outwitted by the rat? It looks that way. For centuries man has been waging war upon the rat, but their numbers do not seem to diminish. It is not because man is not more intelligent than the rat, but because he does not use the proper methods.

If Martin's Rat Powder had been used systematically throughout the years past, there would be a different story to tell. This powder drives rats from their hiding places and kills them in the open. It is sold by all druggists and department stores at 50c. and $1.00 per can, or sent direct on receipt of price. Beware of other poisons. Stores differ, manufacturer differs.

Defi to Caruso Fitzgerald

Marlboro Has Singing Mayor

MARLBORO, Aug. 10.—Does His Honor, John F. Fitzgerald of Boston at Falmouth think he's got the bolze anyoral melodiousness?

"Ha, Ha, and a Tra la la" trills a Marlboro these day days. Which means that this city is giving the biggest-bellbuster city's Mayor the merry ha-ha. And why?

The reason is—Mayor J. Henry Gleason. He's some songbird, too, is Mayor Gleason, and up here they say he could give Boston's senatorial possibility all the sharps and flats in the scale and then some trotting home with the needed bacon.

So Marlboro thinks, and now it seems to be up to Boston's Napoleon of mayor-sonsters to prove that he hasn't been relegated to a back seat on St. Helena. The dell is famed from Marlboro's City Hall to-day. Mayor Gleason's seconds are ready.

Does Johnnie want to choose the time? Any old date will suit Marlboro.

Does Fitz want to pick the place?

He can. Any old place will suit the rooters for Mayor Gleason—be it the stage of the Boston Opera House, Town Hall, out in the fresh air, or even in historic old Faneuil Hall.

Also, the songs can be of Mayor Fitzgerald's own selection. There's "Sweet Adeline." Mayor Gleason is willing to leave that entirely to Fitz, and if the Bostonian is stodgy for the lilting "Mr Hezo" of "Chocolate Soldier" fame, why Mayor Gleason is so generous he will leave that piece for Fitz.

FITZGERALD CALLS REDBERRIES TO LIFE

The "Redberries" have come back. Everybody though the old Redberry Club of Old Orchard was as dead as Herod, but it has come to life again and will hold its fourteenth outing at the Baker estate, Pine Point, Old Orchard, Friday, August 16.

It is three years since the last Redberry outing, and not since the great fire of 1907, which destroyed half Old Orchard and sent the politicians seeking new Summer resorts, has there been a really great one.

But Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston has tooted the clarion call of remains, and from all New England the "pols," past and present, have heard the summons.

Fitzy is running for United States Senator and is overlooking no bets. So it occurred to him that the era of good feeling among Massachusetts politicians of the Democratic complexion established by the Redberry reunions was a fine thing. Hence the resurrection of the Redberries.

A program of athletic events, ball games and other sports will be on the program, and the old contests between married men and single men will take place. A lot of the Redberries have gone back to Old Orchard and others will follow down for the day. In past years at the Pine Point Rake many prominent officeholders of the present day lamented their candidacies.

Mayor Fitzgerald will be in charge of the outing. On the committee with him are James H. Vahey, James M. Fitzgerald, Augustus Dumont, P. F. O'Keefe, ex-chief ruler of Boston Lodge of Elks, Mayor Keenan of Lawrence, former Mayors Doyle of Nashua, O'Connell of Worcester and Casey of Lowell, Mayor Barry of Cambridge, Congressman McGillicuddy of Maine, Senator James Powers of Massachusetts, M. J. Leary, of East Boston, John G. Clifford, Daniel H. Carmody, Patrick Welch, Edward Welch, Eugene Dohorty, A. T. Cobban, James Collins, John T. McGuire and Thomas Deehan.

ON WORKING BASIS, SAYS ROOSEVELT

"Win or Lose," We Are Headed Right Way," Declares Candidate.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Win or lose, we have put the third party upon a solid working basis. Whatever the outcome of the campaign, we start with the conviction that we are heading the right way."

In these words, Colonel Roosevelt alluded today to the Progressive party as a move for untainted politics. Asserting that the party faced a monumental task in Chicago over the negro problem, the ex-President observed that the party was leading the leaders had been overcome in a way to inspire confidence for the future.

"I felt that the time had come to put a party in the field that was modelled by the label of the visiting delegation, 'The negro' said the Colonel. "When I got to Chicago I found that we were on the verge of the leading that question, and that's what I had taken. Why, some men in my party, honestly believe in a party that professes to stand for equal rights, and look to the advancement of all the people of the country. It is useless to try to keep an element of the population that they cannot come in with the party.

"To those well-meaning people I replied that the new party had to face the problem of building not against the negro but the political side seeking office-seeking.

"It was no easy matter to overcome some as they insisted that the matter must be threshed out on the spot. If we failed to purify our party at the start and let the country know our position I maintained that new world be making a mistake. Those who had opposed me in the end I was right and we took a solid stand on the question.

"After Bryan secures you leaving stolen the Democratic party thunder in your Chicago speech and the third party platform," a reporter said.

"Yes, very well," chuckled the colonel. "we have stolen some of the Democratic ideas, except those of the Baltimore lunatic asylums. Those are leave for the Democrats."

MATTHEW CUMMINGS OPPOSES QUINN FOR BOSTON SHRIEVALTY

Matthew J. Cummings, president of the A. O. H. and the Massachusetts State Order of Foresters, has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for sheriff against John Quinn. He will have the backing of the Donovan-Keliher faction.

Mr. Cummings has been conspicuous in political fights, having been a candidate for Mayor at the last election, but withdrew in favor of Mayor Fitzgerald, who defeated James J. Storrow.

He will resign as national president of the A. O. H.

Sheriff Quinn was appointed by Governor Foss on the death of Sheriff Seavey to fill the vacancy until the election.

It looks as if the bitterness this Fall in Boston would be the Donovan-Doyle-Kelher wing of the party against the Fitzgerald-Lomasney faction. The factions have taken sides on the gubernatorial contest, the former being with Dist. Atty. Pelletier, the latter with Governor Foss.

SHERIFF AT OUTING.

Explains Action on Bread at Prison, at Club Outing.

The Cleveland Club of Ward 25 held an outing yesterday at Chicopee Grove, Hyde Park, the outing the Malvern Democrats—and everybody there was a Democrat—had dinner. Interest in political speeches by prominent office holders, and had some sports. Honest John Quinn, Sheriff of Suffolk County, was there, explaining the recent action of the Bakers' Union in placing him on the unfair list. Sheriff Quinn said: "I cannot control my own health. At the time the Bakers' Union made their protest I was away for my health. I want to say now that I am a good union man. But I will also say that never while I am sheriff will I feed men on inferior bread, whether it is union made or not." Congressman Peters, Senator Francis J. Horgan and Representative Francis M. Cummings also spoke. The ball game between the Mount Hope and Healthdales was called on account of darkness in the seventh inning. The score was 6 to 6. It was the only thing on the program that the Democrats failed to finish.

He journeyed to Waukesha for the notification.

Mrs. Geraghty's Dog Takes Blue Ribbon

Terrier of Mrs. John Nicholas Brown Has to Take Second Place

NEWPORT, Aug. 9.—Newport society people learned today that even a fashionable dog show may be a great leveler of caste. By a freakish turn of fate, the dog show here linked the names of Mrs. Julia Steele French Geraghty, who preferred love in a cottage with Chauffeur Jack Geraghty, to the frills of society life, and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, who lives in a mansion, as the mother of "Millionaire Baby Brown," and doesn't speak to Mrs. Geraghty when they meet.

The two women—both of them born to the same level in life—entered Boston terriers in the show. When the prizes were awarded today, it was Mrs. Geraghty who carried off the first honors with her Pam, and Mrs. Brown who took second in the same class with her Lillie G.

Nixon M. Curley of Brookline, and J. J. Bradley of Mattapan, took first and second respectively in the French bull class. Mrs. J. DeP. Bradshaw of Boston took first prize and the special award in the miscellaneous class with her Tambo.

The victory of Miss Edith Deacon's "Stealthy Steve," which won a first and a third prize, was a popular one. Miss Deacon only recently re-entered society for the first time since the death of her father, George Lee Peabody. She was immensely pleased by the victory of her dog and when the announcement was made clapped her hands with delight.

OBJECTS TO STATEMENT.

Representative Sullivan Rises to Correct the Mayor.

Representative John F. Sullivan objects to being called a disappointed office seeker. At the meeting of citizens of East Boston, on Friday night, Representative Sullivan made a verbal attack on the Mayor and yesterday Mayor Fitzgerald replied. Now Mr. Sullivan offers a defense, in the following:

"On returning to Boston late today, upon reading the Boston AMERICAN, I noticed a statement made by Mayor Fitzgerald, stating that I was a disappointed office seeker. Mayor Fitzgerald offered me, shortly after his election, the position of deputy penal institutions commissioner, which I refused, and later he offered me the superintendent of supplies, which I also refused, stating to the Mayor that it was my desire not to hold an appointive position at City Hall. I desire no controversy with the Mayor, but simply desire to correct my unfair statement tending to injure my reputation.

BETROTHAL CROWNS BALL FIELD ROMANCE

Melrose Girl to Wed Roger Chase, Whom She First Saw Pitching.

When young Roger Poole Chase pitched his first game of baseball for the Reading High School team against the Melrose High School nine at Melrose a few years ago, over ever young and genial friend, Daniel Cupid, was right there with his quiver stuffed with arrows.

One of the charming girls at the game who knew baseball and knew a good pitcher when she saw him was Miss Ruth Sayward of Melrose. Naturally she rooted for Melrose.

But this only seemed to add speed and control to Chase's artful arm. Neither Chase nor the girl can just recall Who was that game of ball, but their friends are inclined to the belief that it was that skillful twirler, Master Cupid.

Anyhow, the engagement of the former athlete and former High School girl has just been announced by Mrs. Nellie H. Sayward, of No. 311 Lebanon street, Melrose. The date of the wedding has not yet been set.

Miss Sayward was president and secretary of the Girls' Glee Club of Melrose High School. Chase was a crack football and tennis player, besides a baseball pitcher.

At one time he pitched for the Watertown team in the Connecticut League, the Louisvilles in the Southern League, and the Boston Nationals. He has given up the game for business.

MRS. GRACE WANTS CRIPPLED HUSBAND

In a Remarkable Statement She Declares She Still Loves Man Who Said She Shot Him.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Daisy Tletch Opie Grace, just freed after a sensational trial on the charge of shooting her husband, has proved that her love for him is stronger than any feeling of resentment she may have had for all the wrong she testified she suffered at his hands.

She announced today that she wishes to return to him.

Her mother declared that this was no end intimated that the reason lay in the fact that Mrs. Grace was expecting the arrival of an heir shortly. But Mrs. Grace denied that this was her only reason.

"I still love him," she said, "no matter what he may have said about me or charged me with doing. I love him. I believe that if his family would let us alone we would live together happily. Perhaps we may find some place where we may hide ourselves and still be happy."

During this remarkable statement Mrs. Ulrich looked with amusement upon her daughter.

"Daisy has told me all this before," she explained, "but I never thought she was in earnest about it. I suppose it is woman loves a man like that it can't be helped, but perhaps it is a blessing that all women do not love in that manner."

Mrs. Grace refused to tell in what manner she expected to effect a reconciliation with her husband. She denied that she had taken any action "as yet" to revoke the power of attorney which she had given him.

"That is something I will not talk about," said Mrs. Grace. "That is an affair strictly between Mr. Grace and myself, and we will settle it to our own satisfaction."

Sent Him a Postal.

Mrs. Grace acknowledged that she had sent a postal card to her husband from Savannah, and that she had wished him many happy returns upon his birthday and had expressed the hope that they would be together again before his next birthday.

She refused positively to discuss the statement of Solicitor-General Hugh M. Dorsey, of Atlanta, who prosecuted her and who declared that he had heard the shot which wounded Grace and that it was fired at 5 in the morning and not at 11, as Mrs. Grace had declared. Solicitor-General Dorsey resides on the same street and just across from the Graces in Atlanta.

"I don't care what Mr. Dorsey said," Mrs. Grace answered. "So far as I am concerned, I never wish to discuss the case again. It is something that is in the past. So long as I think of it I always must think how Mr. Grace endeavored to harm me, and that is something I wish to forget. For the present I shall devote my life to my baby Webster."

Just once she showed her temper when one of her men friends made an uncomplimentary remark about Grace.

"You will kindly stop talking in that manner," said Mrs. Grace. "Please remember he is my husband and he is a cripple at present, but I hope to see him well before a great while."

After this the friends of Mrs. Grace divided themselves into groups—those that could like Mrs. Grace with her husband thrown in and those who could like Mrs. Grace without her husband.

The impromptu reception on her arrival at the pier lasted for several moments, after which Mrs. Grace and her mother went by auto to No. 1600 South Sixtieth street, where Webster Opie, the seven-year-old blind son of Mrs. Grace, had been awaiting on the front porch all morning for the arrival of his mother.

Vermont a Political Merry-Go-Round; Governor Mead Talks of 1912 Mix-Up

Editor of Today's American Reflects, However, That State Has Been "True" Since '56.

GOVERNOR JOHN A. MEAD of Vermont, editor of today's AMERICAN, is a statesman and business man of strong opinions which he is by no means slow to express. One has only to state a question to the Governor of Vermont to get a prompt and straightforward answer.

Which is not always the way with men who climb high politically.

Today's Governor-editor would have reached a high place in journalism. Governor Mead has a delightful way of looking at a topic from a fresh and unexpected angle. You will note this in his editorial today on "Worry."

The Governor talked yesterday, to his friends on the AMERICAN, about a number of things, about the political situation, what Roosevelt may do, the woman in politics, Mayor Fitzgerald's suggestion of a meat boycott and the success of the American athletes at Stockholm.

These are Governor-Editor Mead's opinions on all of these live subjects, as a stenographer put them down:

"You ask me," Governor Mead said to one man in the office, "if I think the new party, the Roosevelt party, will cut any appreciable figure in the Nation. I do not know as to that; I hardly look for anything of the kind in Vermont.

"At the same time, I never knew a time when Vermont was so mixed, so confused, politically, as the State appears to be at the present time.

"Moose" 4th Party in Vermont.

"The fact is that in Vermont the Roosevelt party comes along as a fourth party. To begin with we have the regular old party candidates, Democratic and Republican.

"Then the Prohibitionists hooked up with the Grangers, naming as their candidate for the governorship an extremely popular citizen who has been at the head of the State Grange for a number of years. I haven't observed much gossip of this combination in the newspapers, but I should say that the Prohibitionists-Grangers are not unlikely to poll a heavy vote.

"When you add to this situation a fourth party, the Progressives, and hear that Roosevelt is coming in, to speak at Rutland and elsewhere; that the Democrats will follow with their stumpers, and that the Republicans propose to keep close on Roosevelt's heels with the best orators in the country, you can realize that for the next few weeks Vermonters are likely to be busy picking out a candidate for the presidency."

Governor Mead was asked what about the adoption by the Progressives of the "Votes for Women" people. At first the Governor-Editor was inclined to treat the question whimsically.

"Seems as though they had the advantage of us there, doesn't it?" said Governor Mead. "I think we ought to be jealous."

But instantly the Governor was serious.

"A Conservative People."

"No," he said, "I'll tell you. I don't look to see much come from the woman in politics, this year, anyhow, here in the East. What it may amount to in the West is another question.

"Up in Vermont we are a conservative people. We are slow to change, slow to rush after strange gods. You remember, of course, that it was up here that Horace Greeley began, in the town of Poultney, some fourteen or fifteen miles from my own city.

"Greeley had followers up here who simply were here by him. All through Vermont men read the New York Tribune to get Greeley's views; and while those are slanderers who say that Vermonters read the Tribune today, and believe that Horace Greeley is still its editor, there is a suggestion in the slander of the truth that Vermont is steadfast.

"And so Vermont, ever since the organization of the Republican party in 1856, has been a Republican stronghold. Just think of her Republican record! Never—not even once—since the year 1856 have the Democrats of Vermont elected a Representative in Congress, a United States Senator, or a Governor!

"I say that it is going to take a terrible shake-up, a veritable upheaval, to change this condition. In the second week of August I see no indication of such an upheaval."

High Prices and Common Sense.

Various other topics in the news of the day were suggested to the Governor as they came along. Finally, somebody spoke of the ever-mounting price of beef, and Mayor Fitzgerald's suggestion that the best way to bring it down is not to eat it.

"Visit the Western States and you will see not nearly so many cattle as you saw out there fifteen years ago. Three months since, I

GOV. JOHN A. MEAD.

Fat Reduced 73 Pounds

Mrs. Wright Got Thinner and Healthier Every Day.

The friends of Blanche Wright, the widely known and popular entertainer, were amazed at observing her as she gradually became thinner until reduced to an agreeable figure. She had become decidedly fat in the course of a few years and now she gradually lost weight until the scales proved she had got rid of 73 pounds of superfluous fat.

She is a busy, ambitious woman and had tried various methods of reducing weight, all in vain. Mrs. Wright took pills that were advertised and which she got at drug stores, she tried a "drug-less" treatment and dieting, rubbed vaseline things on her body and experimented with numerous other remedies without success. But at last she found just what she sought, a genuine self-treatment method that any fat person of either sex can easily follow. It is a safe and reliable way to get thin. This guidance of fat improves the health, beautifies the figure and lengthens life. Any reader who would like to know the secret can learn it free of cost by writing to Mrs. Blanche Wright, 1004 A, Waterloo, Ind. Better enclose a stamp for her reply. She has nothing to sell.

crossed the Continent for the fourteenth time, and I found myself asking what had become of the cattle. At the great cattle-shipping points their numbers had fallen off noticeably. Meanwhile in the past half-century the population of the United States has increased by about 60,000,000.

Problem in Few Words.

"It seems to me that here you have your high-price-of-meat problem in a few words. Vastly fewer cattle; millions of more meat-eaters."

"Then you don't think much of Mayor Fitzgerald's proposed boycott?"

"That might work in Boston," said the Governor, "I'm sure it wouldn't work in Vermont. We know what we want, in Vermont, and usually we have to have it."

Governor Mead was much interested by the reported presence in town of some of the American participants in the Olympic games at Stockholm.

"I followed them day by day in the newspapers," the Governor-Editor said, "and with the rest of their fellow-countrymen rejoiced in their victories.

"It was truly wonderful, the work of our boys at Stockholm, and yet, when you bring reason to its consideration, perfectly natural.

"I say this because we have, here in the United States, more different racial foundations than any other people in history. This should make for good.

"Blood That Tells."

"Go about in Vermont and talk to men who know, and they will tell you that, in order to get the best results, you have got to continually introduce new blood into your stock. This is true of horses, cattle, of all animal kind.

"And so it is 'blood that tells,' in my opinion, and blood that told the story of American successes at Stockholm. At the rate of 1,000,000 a year the ambitious men and women of every land have been coming to America. Intermarry, in and out, through and through, with the result that we have the advantage over all the other peoples of the earth. We combine the good qualities of the English, German, Irish, French, Russian and Swedish, because we are truly a mixture of all.

"The result must finally be the development here of an American race which will be the best in the world mentally as well as physically."

140 ARE MASSACRED.

Butchery of Bulgarians by Turks Lasts Three Hours.

ISKUB, European Turkey, Aug. 10.—Details of the massacre of Bulgarians by Mussulmans on August 2 at Kotschana, fifty miles to the southeast of this city, show that the butchery lasted three hours, in which more than 140 Bulgarians were cut to pieces.

The trouble began with the explosion of a bomb in the market place, when it was crowded with people. Five Bulgarians and six other persons were killed. Four minutes later a second bomb exploded, in the same place, causing further deaths. Soon after word bands of armed Mussulmans appeared on the spot and carried out a wholesale butchery of Bulgarians, lasting three hours, while the Turkish officials were looking on.

WARNING ON MEXICO BY TEXAS GOVERNOR

Serves Notice on Uncle Sam He Will Drive Out Guerillas if Government Doesn't.

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 10.—Governor Colquitt last night telegraphed President Taft and the War Department demanding that the United States act quickly in repelling the invasion of Mexican rebels at Sierra Blanca, Tex. He announced today that if no reply came by noon he would order every Texas ranger and the entire cavalry force of the militia to the border. In his telegram, after quoting from Sheriff Edwards' message from El Paso County notifying the Governor of the raids on Texas ranchers, the Governor said:

"Please advise me if the United States government will give protection and repel this invasion. If it does not do so promptly I shall repel the invaders with State troops. Answer quick and definitely."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10.—Brigadier-General Steever, commanding the American troops at El Paso, Texas, today informed the War Department that he has received the following message from Governor Colquitt:

"I have a telegram from Sheriff Edwards advising me that the Mexican rebels are raiding the Texas side of the river. Please advise me if you will give protection for Texas people and property. If not, I shall order my militia to take charge of the situation. I shall order four troops of cavalry on a special train. Advise me quickly."

General Steever replied that he had sent a detachment of troops to Fabens and one and a half troops of cavalry down stream. He also sent troops by rail today into the regions where disturbances are reported. General Steevers' reply concluded:

"Certainly I will give protection to Texas people and property, and if necessary will put additional troops into the field."

WOMEN SAVE CHILDREN.

Three Carry Out Imperilled Youngsters at Revere.

Rescues of children by three women featured a fire which caused a loss of $1,000 and destroyed the two-story wooden frame cottage at No. 72 Neponset avenue, Revere, occupied by Mrs. H. Oilgivie and four children.

The fire was discovered by Mrs. Oilgivie. Picking up her eight-months-old girl, Mildred, and grasping a nine-year-old boy, Eugene, by the hand, she rushed out of the building and gave the alarm. Mrs. Weiner of No. 63 Sagamore avenue, ran into the cottage and rescued Mrs. Oilgivie's two daughters, Phyllis, three years, and Alice H., three years, who were too frightened to make their escape. A neighbor, Mrs. Dunn, followed Mrs. Weiner into the cottage and, with difficulty, carried out a trunkful of clothes and other belongings of Mrs. Oilgivie.

HARBOR POLICE HUNT FOR MISSING GIRL

Theory Now Advanced That Three-Year-Old Sadie Kaplan Was Kidnapped.

An unusual search was made last night by the Chelsea police and the harbor police of Boston in motor boats for three-year-old Sadie Kaplan, child of Mr. and Mrs. George Kaplan, of No. 501 Broadway, Chelsea. The police said the little girl must have been kidnaped. They learned that she was last seen with a man, a stranger in Chelsea.

The little girl was playing near her father's dry goods store on Broadway, Chelsea, when she is believed to have been arrested by a stranger and lured away. The man was seen crossing a bridge toward East Boston. He was described as tall and wearing dark clothing.

The Boston police were notified. One theory was that the man was employed about the harbor, possibly on one of the dredges. This led to a search by police in motorboats. The entire harbor was scoured, but no trace of the missing child was found.

At 1:30 this morning Chief of Police White of Chelsea and twelve patrolmen, carrying lanterns, searched the marshes near Eastern avenue and Chelsea Creek, in the belief that the missing girl might have been slain.

At Bass Point, Nahant, late last night an auto with three men, bit Charles Gill of Somerville. The unconscious victim was lifted into the car which raced away at high speed. Although search was made by the Nahant and Lynn police, no trace of the Gills, the auto or the injured man was found.

Charles Gill, the victim, was walking along the roadway near the Relay House, with William Gardiner of Nahant. A touring car sped around the corner from Wilson road and struck Gill. When Gardiner attempted to pick him up the trio in the car pushed him aside and lifted Gill into the car.

"His brothers [illegible] the same way. Our motto has always been 'live and let live,' and we have practised and preached that all our life. I have never insisted that my son take up the teaching of Socialism, nor have I taught it to his brothers, but they have accepted it from infancy almost, and it seems perfectly natural that my son should also preach it from the pulpit."

KATHERINE ANDREWS BRIDE OF H. E. FRICK

Pretty Wedding for Brookline Girl and Baltimore Man in St. Paul's Church.

Among the most important of August weddings was that yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock of Miss Katherine Andrews, daughter of W. [illegible] E. Andrews of No. 44 Edgehill road, Brookline, and Henry Edgeworth Frick of Baltimore.

The wedding took place at 5 o'clock in St. Paul's [illegible]. The ceremony, which was largely attended, was performed by the Rev. Carroll Perry, rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Leonard K. Storrs, D.D.

The service was exceedingly simple. The bride, who wore [illegible] gown of white satin, trimmed with rich lace, and carried a bouquet of orange blossoms, had as her matron of honor Mrs. Effingham Lawrence of New York, formerly Miss Dorothy Gookin of Bay State road.

Mr. Frick had as his best man, Albert C. Richie of Baltimore, and the ushers were Oliver Andrews, a brother of the bride, Henry [illegible] South of Quincy, John [illegible] of Dedham and [illegible] Kent, whose marriage to the bride's sister Louise Andrews took place in the early Spring.

A reception was held immediately after the church ceremony at the home of the bride's father on Edgehill road and was attended by intimate friends and the two families.

After a motor trip through the Berkshires the young couple will be at home [illegible]. Mr. Frick is connected with the Fore River Ship Building Company in Quincy.

Airships a Big Feature of the Operations of Troops in Mimic War

Uncle Sam's [illegible] Connecticut is on [illegible] heard the bugle [illegible] the militiamen to [illegible] entraining for Derby [illegible]

Massachusetts sent 3,500 of her best soldiers. Maine sent her crack Second Regiment under command of Colonel Frank M. [illegible]. Vermont sent her First [illegible] of youngsters from the hills. The Bay State regiments that left for the seat of war last night were the Second, [illegible] Ninth and [illegible]. The infantry was augmented by the First Company Signal Corps, First Field Hospital and First Ambulance Company.

With 1,800 troopers [illegible] constitute the Red Army under command of General Frederick A. Smith of the Central Army Division. The Red Army according to the plans, is to invade New York. But this is not so easy, because New York is defended by the Blue Army [illegible] General Edward J. McClernand of the Pacific Division.

Massachusetts Boys Leave.

Early yesterday afternoon the Massachusetts troopers began to make preparations for leaving. In the South Boston district there was a great rumbling of the big ammunition and supply wagons enroute to the South Station. The Ninth Regiment, the first detachment to get away, entrained at [illegible] at the South Station. The soldiers were given a royal send-off.

Shortly after noon yesterday Adjutant General Pearson, accompanied by Colonel Smythe, inspector-general, Colonel Sweetser of Eighth Regiment, Major Williams, Medical Corps and Major Noyes of the Governor Foss staff left the State House in automobiles for the seat of war.

The Maine contingent [illegible] Portland last night [illegible] the great sham war [illegible] the history of the country.

The aeroplane is already a factor in the manoeuvres, for last night the buzzing of the engines from the [illegible] of the air sent by the Blue Army could be heard over the camp of the Reds. Theoretical the city of New York is to be reduced to ashes. Railroads are to be destroyed, but of course theoretically. To use that word theoretical again, there will be many widows and orphans in this city and other New England towns after tomorrow.

Endure Hardships in Field.

The Bay State boys, and in fact the soldiers from all over New England, are well equipped for the arduous duty. The hardships of war, with the exception of feeling real bullets, will be endured, so that the war game will not be a continuous round of pleasure.

It became apparent that the New Englanders will get into action early today, when it became known last night that two troops of the Tenth Cavalry of the Blue Army, under Colonel C. H. Grierson, were camped two miles east of Moose Hill, or not more than four miles from the camp of the invading army. There is also in this camp one regiment of infantry and a hospital corps.

The headquarters of the Red Army are today located in Orange, Ct. The New Englanders, with the exception of the Connecticut troops, will be pushed onward from Derby early today.

Practical Lessons of War.

Before leaving for the camp of the Red Army yesterday Adjutant General Pearson said:

"The value of the war game lies in the application of the lessons learned in the armories and in the books. It is putting into practice the theory of war. It gives the officers training in the handling of large bodies of troops away from the base of supplies and away from transportation facilities.

"This war game will give the troops as good an idea of war as it would be possible to secure without the actual killing of men. It really separates the essential features from the non-essential. In former years the war games were really contests and developed into tests of physical endurance on the part of the men. This year's game will be one of instruction.

[illegible] in that branch of the service, and I think the flying machine will be the dominant factor. The New England [illegible] with tomorrow and the work will be in [illegible]

Mobilize at Derby

[illegible] Army [illegible] New York and New Jersey troops [illegible]

The war really started yesterday afternoon, when the Blue Army heard that the Bay State boys and soldiers from other New England States were on their way to Connecticut. There was great activity [illegible] check the advance of the Reds. Motor cycles with [illegible] sped over the roads, telegraph instruments on the hill tops clicked and the entire army became like a gigantic beehive.

The key to the situation is the water supply [illegible] of New York's 5,000,000 people and the city must [illegible]. It is probable, therefore, that the engagement [illegible] will take place in the neighborhood of the great reservoir.

The regular troops in the field are the Fifth United States Infantry, the Tenth United States Cavalry, two batteries of the Third United States Field Artillery and several companies of the United States engineers.

No Dress Parades This Year.

The National Guard troops consist of the First and Second Brigades of New York, including the Seventh, Twelfth, Sixty-ninth, Seventy-first, Forty-seventh, Twenty-third and Fourteenth regiments of infantry, the First and Second regiments of cavalry, the First and Second signal companies, the Twenty-second engineers, the First and Second field hospitals and First and Second ambulance companies; the First Brigade of New Jersey, including the First, Fourth and Fifth regiments of infantry, the First and Second troops of cavalry, Batteries A and B, field artillery, signal company and First Field Hospital, the First and Second Brigades of Massachusetts, including the Second, Fifth, Sixth and Ninth regiments of infantry, the First Company, signal corps, First Field Hospital and First Ambulance Company, the First and Second regiments of Connecticut infantry, with the First separate company of infantry signal company, field hospital and ambulance company, the Second Regiment of Maine, infantry, with sanitary troops, and the First Regiment of Vermont, infantry, beside the aeroplane corps.

The men are equipped with only their khaki or olive drab uniforms, shelter tents, camp tools, blankets, haversacks and other equipment for light and heavy marching order. No dress parades or ceremonies were scheduled.

One About the Cross-Eyed Girl and Bacteria That Is Really Rippin'.

MAJOR MAYNARD AND KING

His Majesty Compliments and Congratulates a Veteran of the Civil War.

T[illegible] arrived in New York yesterday and some of them came over to Boston last night, while the remainder will arrive today. They promise Europe as all right.

So, if you see a group of men any day now with their heads together in a bunch, today at the corner of a street corner and if they break out into hearty laughter, it is safe to say that the surrounding, [illegible] are having a time.

The [illegible] spread all over Europe. They [illegible] monuments and places of historic or architectural interest. They attended banquets and heard French and British speakers make speeches and tell stories.

Major [illegible] Maynard [illegible] had the distinction of being complimented and honored by both [illegible].

In Faded Blue Suit.

Major Maynard differed somewhat from his comrades in appearance. He wore a suit of blue. On his breast was pinned a medal that attracted the King's attention, as well as the faded suit. Turning to Lord Desborough he asked what the medal was and the significance of the faded suit of blue and soft felt hat.

The [illegible] medal noted Major Maynard for bravery during the Civil War, and corresponds with our Victoria Cross. And Lord Desborough [illegible] without room [illegible] to Captain Appleton to request the Major Maynard be [illegible] to his presence. The King turned and walked swiftly across the [illegible] and to where Major Maynard was standing at the end of the line. He said:

"Major, I am proud to meet a man who wears a medal that corresponds with the one which [illegible] gave for acts of valor on the battlefield. I am proud to meet a man who stands before me wearing the faded blue coat in which he fought to preserve his country."

Then he continued talking in a conversational manner and asked the Major about his age. In the Civil War.

The Major [illegible] somewhat taken back by being singled out from his company for the honor of speaking personally with a King, explained to the King what the medal was for and told him of his service in the Civil War. Then he shook the proffered hand of the King as he passed on to grasp the hands of [illegible] comrades.

Hit by a Snow Ball.

Lieutenant Walter L. Tousey had a small scratch on his hand when he landed in Boston and was asked how he received it.

"I was hit by a snow ball," he replied.

"Sure you don't mean a high ball," exclaimed incredulous friends.

"No, we were throwing snowballs and I got hit, thats all."

"Say, we aren't greenies if we did stay in Boston. They don't have snow in Europe in the Summer time."

"This said the lieutenant, was upon the summit of Mt. Rigi, where snow is perpetual. We climbed it and [illegible] a [illegible] fight. There were quite a party of us.

WASHINGTON THOMAS HUB'S RICHEST MAN

Wealth Estimated at $50,000,000—Who the Next Nine Are in Order.

FOSS AMONG THE LIST

White La[illegible] Taxpayer [illegible]

[illegible]

Who are the ten richest men in Boston? Here [illegible] an estimate of their [illegible]

Washington [illegible]
Thomas	$50,000,000
Thomas N. Hall	40,000,000
Robert Winsor	30,000,000
Sidney W. Winslow	30,000,000
Col. Wm. C. Gaston	30,000,000
William Whitman	20,000,000
Frey Ayer	15,000,000
John D. Jordan	10,000,000
George E. White	9,000,000
Eugene N. Foss	7,000,000

Wealth is better distributed in Boston [illegible] in any city in the United States in proportion to its population, in Boston and surrounding districts there are [illegible] millionaires.

But those who are conservative in their estimates and know many things from the inside would classify the ten richest men as above.

Of those, who pay the largest tax in Boston are not the wealthiest. Many [illegible] invested in other ways and [illegible] places that are outside this city.

The [illegible] taxpayer in this city is [illegible] H. Wade, president of the Potter [illegible] and Chemical Company. He is taxed [illegible] on real and personal estate valued at $4,000,000.

Foss Taxed on $2,000,000.

Mrs. Isabel Anderson, wife of Larz Anderson, United States minister to Belgium, is taxed on $2,317,900 real estate. Gover[illegible] is taxed on real and personal property [illegible] to the valuation of more than two millions of dollars.

A. Shuman ranks as one of the largest taxpayers in Boston, coming fourth in the list, and pays taxes on $1,767,800 of real and personal property. Other large taxpayers in Boston are Washington I. [illegible] $1,600,000; W. K. Porter, $1,[illegible] Jonas [illegible] $1,426,000; Fred Ayer, $1,400,800; Henry B. Williams, $1,[illegible]; George A. Gardner, $1,321,000.

[illegible] are many in Brookline and other [illegible] whose wealth goes well up into the [illegible]. But their money is so invested [illegible] it is difficult to reckon how much [illegible] individuals can claim.

Chicago's Richest Men.

J. Ogden Armour	$100,000,000
Harold F. McCormick	40,000,000
Cyrus H. McCormick	30,000,000
John J. Mitchell	30,000,000
Julius Rosenwald	25,000,000
Edward Morris	20,000,000
James A. Patten	20,000,000
Samuel W. Allerton	20,000,000
Charles Deering	15,000,000
E. F. Swift	12,000,000
Total	$312,000,000

But down in New York they do have the [illegible] fortunes. Here is the list of [illegible] richest men and their estimated [illegible]

John D. Rockefeller	$1,000,000,000
Andrew Carnegie	500,000,000
J. P. Morgan	300,000,000
William Rockefeller	250,000,000
George F. Baker	225,000,000
James B. Duke	200,000,000
James Stillman	200,000,000
Henry C. Frick	150,000,000
W. K. Vanderbilt	150,000,000

The total is $3,000,000,000, on which the income at 5 per cent a year would be $150,000,000.

RHODE ISLAND IS STIRRED BY CHEAP PRISON LABOR SCANDAL

State Gives Chicago Contractor Labor of 300 Men in Penitentiary at Cranston, Who Make Shirts That Cost 2½ Cents.

"Little Rhody" Didn't Take Much Notice Until the Shirt-Making Warden, "Jim" McCosker, Devised New Plan.

Now the State Is Wondering if This Kind of Competition with Free Labor and the Labor of Poor Women Isn't Wrong.

Three hundred convicts in the Rhode Island Prison at Cranston are employed at shirt-making in competition with the labor of free women.

The shirts are made for a wholesale concern in Chicago.

Twenty-nine cents a day per man while the State of Kentucky gets 55 cents a day per man and the State of Michigan 85 cents a day per man for the same work.

Under the contract the Rhode Island prison must turn out 375 dozen shirts every day. The output amounts to about 1,200,000 shirts a year.

When you look back of this prison, back of the contract, to the poor women who live, somehow, by shirt-making and consider what this sort of competition must mean to them and their children, you begin to wonder why modern conditions do not develop a great modern poet, to sing about them and make the world think again.

Competition Wiped Out.

Chairman William A. Schofield of the Rhode Island Board of Control and Supply, which has begun an investigation of the Chicago contract, says it is small wonder that in Rhode Island an industrial commonwealth which makes about everything, there is not a single shirt manufactory. How could one live against the prison competition? State competition!

Consider for a moment the easy picking of the lucky Chicago contractor. The State of Rhode Island furnishes Shop.

Light.
Heat.
Power.
Transportation of the raw material.
Transportation of the finished product.

And what does the contractor furnish? Merely:

Machinery.
Raw material.
30 Cents a dozen for shirts ready-to-wear.

Investigation Thorough.

Experts say that in factories where free labor is employed the same shirts would cost from $1.35 to $1.65 a dozen for labor alone. In addition, of course, the employer of free labor furnishes shop, light, heat, power, transportation, all that the great State of Rhode Island throws in with shirts at two and a half cents apiece, or thirty cents a dozen.

It is small wonder that the State of Rhode Island is stirred up about the contract. The investigation promises to be thorough. The feeling is general that there is something wrong.

Information has already shown that until a short time ago the Rhode Island law appeared to have been broken every day by a "profit sharing" plan said to have been devised by the warden of the prison.

300 Prisoners at Work.

Mr. McCosker was formerly chairman of the State Board of Charities and Corrections. This was the board which made the original five-year contract with the Chicago people.

Two years ago Mr. McCosker was made warden of the State Prison, an appointment over which his board had some control.

Last Spring, on recommendation of Warden McCosker, the Board of Charities and Corrections renewed the Chicago contract. Then came along a State Board of Control and Supply, one of the achievements of the Foster administration, to take over the purchase of supplies for State institutions and the sale of prison-made goods.

PRISON-MADE SHIRTS STIR RHODE ISLAND

There are 300 prisoners in the penitentiary at Cranston. All of them work in the shirt factory except when they are ill. The Chicago contract calls for the labor of 250 men daily. All are at work on men's and boys' shirts. The prison must make 375 dozen a day, the average for each man being twenty-one shirts.

In the penitentiaries of some States a way has been found to make the prisoners do more work by punishing them. McCusker, with the sanction of the State Board of C[illegible] and Correction, devised another way.

Rhode Island Deceived.

McCusker called it a "profit sharing" plan, which sounded good and deceived many Rhode Islanders.

One can readily understand that at two and one-half cents apiece the lucky Chicago contractors cannot get too many shirts. It is quite like finding a fortune in the street.

Warden McCusker had it announced in the prison that hereafter all the money that came from Chicago by monthly check, above the sum of $2,000, would be distributed among the prisoners.

Nature's [illegible] this proved a great [illegible]. The weekly product began to soar. Many weeks the check was as high as $[illegible], which meant [illegible] bonus to each of the men. What must it have meant to free women in other shops facing this competition?

The new Board of Control and Supply proved fussy, however. It was in [illegible] called to Mr McCusker's attention that the State of Rhode Island has certain statutes, and that one of these—Section 360, Chapter [illegible] provides in [illegible] that the [illegible] Board [illegible] pay to prisoners a [illegible] of NOT MORE than 10 per cent upon the expiration of [illegible] sentence.

McCusker's defence was that he hadn't known that he was really violating a law of Rhode Island.

Sounded Philanthropic.

The Board of Supply and Control put an immediate stop to the "profit-sharing" plan and presently found themselves on the defensive before a certain unthinking part of the population which took it for granted that anything that meant $3 a month to prisoners must be [illegible] philanthropic. "Profit-sharing" [illegible] a way of sounding philanthropic.

It turns [illegible] according to the information gathered in Rhode Island yesterday by a reporter for the AMERICAN, that the firm which [illegible] Rhode Island twenty-one cents a day for the labor of its prisoners pays Wisconsin eighty-four cents a day for the same sort of labor.

The Board of Control and Supply promises to look into this. An effort will be made to make the Chicago people pay a fair price. If Rhode Island got the Wisconsin rate of 84 cents, for instance, the prisoners at Cranston—allowed 10 per cent. of their earnings under the law which has been quoted—would get as much money as they got when McCusker had them "speeded up," under his profit-sharing arrangement.

Some in Rhode Island have expressed a fear that tuberculosis might be spread from the prison shirt factory. This danger will be investigated, too.

Chairman Schofield of the Board of control says he is [illegible] to the entire system.

Says Mr. Schofield:

Shirt making is of no value to these prisoners. It is woman's work. It brings these men out of prison without a trade. It unfits them for other work. After a term at shirt making the blacksmith, machinist, carpenter, comes out unfitted for his old trade.

The system is utterly and entirely wrong. But since we find it in operation, and cannot change it [illegible], we [illegible] do our duty and see that the prisoners of Rhode Island shall not be exploited by contractors.

Let me show you some shirts made in the prison at Cranston.

Chairman Schofield unrolled a parcel. It contained three shirts, one of silk, another of satin, the third of a cheaper material.

Notice the stitching, said Chairman Schofield. Isn't it [illegible] that this work [illegible] contract [illegible] only 2½ cents? Free labor [illegible] ate it under 12 or 15 cents."

"Unfair to Prisoners."

The Sunday AMERICAN reporter called on Mr James B. Williams, of the Rhode Island Associated Charities.

Said Mr Williams:

"Of course, we do not approve of the shirtmaking industry at Cranston. [illegible]

"It isn't right to put prison labor on the market as Rhode Island [illegible] In any [illegible] of the [illegible] keep [illegible] goods out of the open market.

"Our prison industries should be varied. It is horrible to think of 300 grown men driven to making shirts for a private corporation, which, after all, pays the State little or nothing for them.

[illegible] that we [illegible] in the system at Cranston. I know that the Board of Control and Supply is earnest and capable.

What are the people of Rhode Island going to do about it?

THE EMPEROR OF CHINA HAS A BAD DAY

His Royal Highness is most melancholy—out in the Franklin Park Zoo, children—For he is moulting and the conduct of those flamingoes is most disturbing to one of such high birth and breeding.

THE Emperor of China is very, very sad at Franklin Park. He [illegible] don't show.

When you go out to the Park today, Children, to see the birds in the new bird cage, which is the first part of the new Zoo to be ready, you just notice the Emperor of China.

And why, Children, do you suppose the Emperor of China is sore and who is the Emperor of China at Franklin Park, anyhow?

The Emperor of China is the white peacock. He comes from [illegible] though there are half-a-dozen or so common peacocks on the grounds and in the [illegible].

And talk about a melancholy Emperor!

It's just like this, Children. Suppose you were [illegible] but a white peacock. Suppose you were renowned for your beauty, for your glorious, snowy tail and for the hundreds of beautiful eyes which are embossed upon your tail feathers like the [illegible] pattern on white damask satin.

You know what the eyes are on the tail of an ordinary peacock. They are the many, beautiful colored spots on the tail feathers, which look like so many big optics.

You might not think that the white peacock—those tail feathers are all white, like the rest of his plumage, would [illegible] any different from [illegible] that [illegible] eyes would show [illegible] the white [illegible].

[illegible] They [illegible] the white [illegible] white satin table cloth that she uses when company comes.

But they are not beautiful now. The Emperor of China is moulting. He has shed most of his long tail feathers. He has a tail, it is true, but nothing like what he will have when his feathers have all grown again.

And just at this time, Children, it is most mortifying to His Royal Highness, the Emperor of China. For he is a royal bird. He is descended from a long line of title ancestors, who were flying in China hundreds of years before the Great Chinese Wall was built.

This white Chinese peacock at Franklin Park Zoo is the only white peacock in the place. He feels the dignity of his [illegible]. He feels that it is up to him—especially with so many other birds in the same cage—to uphold the honor of the [illegible] peacocks.

And all he has to keep up the fame and glory of white Chinese peacocks is a few lonesome tail feathers instead of a big, beautiful sweeping tail, with hundreds of satin damask eyes gleaming and glistening in the sun.

It is very provoking at this particular time, Children.

[illegible] new Zoo at Franklin Park. The first part of the Zoo [illegible] bird cage. The bear den is not ready. So the birds are introduced to the public and to you, Children, [illegible] before any of the other animals. They let the birds into the big cage and everyone was ready.

[illegible] for the Emperor of China, the white Chinese peacock—to shine in all his glory, to dazzle all with his snow-white plumage, to raise his crest and spread out his gorgeous tail before all.

But how are you going to spread out a tail that has a feather gone here and there and which isn't anything like what it ought to be?

[illegible]

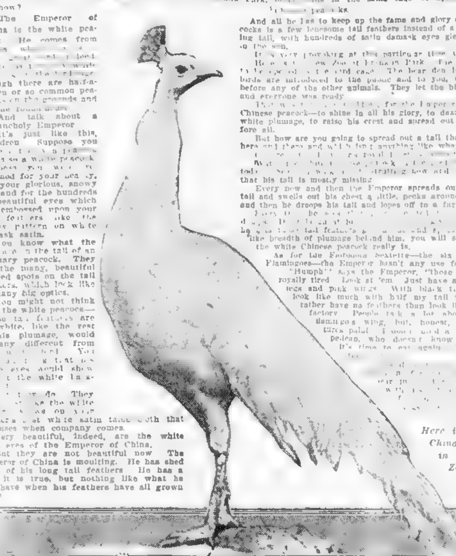
[illegible] Franklin Park today [illegible] that his tail is mostly missing.

Every now and then the Emperor spreads out the remains of his tail and swells out his chest a little, pecks around over his shoulder—and then he droops his tail and lopes off to a far corner and sulks.

[illegible] he [illegible] tail feathers [illegible] like breadth of plumage behind him, you will see what a royal bird the white Chinese peacock really is.

As for the Famous Sextette—the six pink-winged African Flamingoes—the Emperor hasn't any use for them at all.

"Humph!" says the Emperor, "those flamingoes make me royally tired. Look at 'em. Just have a good look. All pink legs and pink wings. With black tips, too. I may not look like much with half my tail feathers out, but I'd rather have no feathers than look like a fire in a lobster factory. People talk a lot about the pink on the flamingo's wing, but, honest, I believe the creatures paint. I don't mind a big, stupid boob, like a pelican, who doesn't know anything but when it's time to eat again. But deliver me from [illegible] good natured [illegible]



Here is the Emperor of China as photographed in the Franklin Park Zoo, where he has just taken up quarters.

This gentleman was riding on the front seat of a buss with the driver and got into a terrific jam. Directly opposite was another buss whose driver seemed inclined to blame the first driver for the jam. He was quite eloquent. The first driver said nothing but stooping down picked up a piece of string held it up and dangled it.

This set the second driver into a perfect fury. Oath after oath, each more awful than the preceding, rolled out, and then the jam gave way and the busses parted.

"What made him so mad?" asked the passenger.

The cabby was chuckling heartily. "Did you see me shake the string at him?"

"Yes, but what of it?"

COMEDIANS HAVE TO TRAIN THEIR FACES

Actor in "The Million" Describes How He Exercises His Facial Muscles.

Eccentric comedians must have well trained muscles in their face, say the physicians, or they cannot portray widely different characters with conviction. One of the most striking examples of development along this line is Taylor Holmes, the leading actor in "The Million."

"Early in my career," says Mr. Holmes, "I began to exercise the facial muscles [illegible] I have good control [illegible] not necessary to be in perfect condition all around to have control of the head and face muscles, but constant exercise to [illegible] is imperative. I take each muscle [illegible] and work it out before a [illegible] forehead and eye-muscles first; [illegible] the cheeks and mouth and the [illegible] jaw muscles running down [illegible] the three. Just a few minutes every morning, keeping steadily at it for about three months, will show surprising results.

"In depicting the bibulous and cynical doctor in 'The Million' I have to hold my face in an unnatural, strained position throughout the four acts. I could never accomplish this if it were not for its muscular condition.

"In a grouch all the points of the face turn down—in joy, up—but there is [illegible] joy in Lorimer Walsh. He is sore at everything and everybody, snarling, complaining, disagreeable when good luck befalls others and constantly unhappy and unreasonable except at those times when he admits his own deficiencies."

Four Societies to Join in Canobie Lake Music Festival.

Saturday and Sunday after Labor Day, September 7 and 8, a music festival will be given at Canobie Lake Park, N. The festival will consist of four concerts, two matinees and two evenings. Sir Arthur Sullivan's "The Golden Legend" will be produced the first night, and "The Messiah" on Sunday evening, with the Boston Festival Orchestra and eminent soloists. The soloists who will assist the chorus are Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams of Boston, soprano; Miss Mildred Potter of New York, contralto; Paul Althouse of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, tenor, Stephen Townsend of Boston, baritone, and Frederic Martin of New York, bass. YOUNG SHAW MERRY AS REAL BAKER BOY get the impression that his father was just a boy, too, and his mother only a lively, fun-loving New England girl.

After a bitter struggle in the courts this boy has been given finally into the custody of his mother. She is Mrs. Keno Marble. Her former husband was Senator James F. Shaw. New England was stirred by the developments in the Shaw home, enhanced by the fact that the father of Mrs. Shaw, H. Fisher Eldredge of Portsmouth, N. H., took the part of his daughter.

After the breaking up of the home the [illegible] the possession of the [illegible] The father wanted him. The [illegible] wanted him. The grandfather would have been glad to take him and provide for his future.

But the sagacious Superior Court of Salem, after looking into all the facts, reached the conclusion that "a boy's best friend is his mother"—and she got him.

And young Shaw, emulating the thrift of his grandfather, has gone into business [illegible]. Any day of the week and [illegible] of weather, the boy may be seen driving around the streets of the little Cape Cod town, the Summer home of many prominent New York and Boston people, on a bakery route with [illegible] the aid of Grandpa [illegible] money.

Regular Bakery Wagon.

A regular bakery wagon bearing the name of Kendall Green bakery and in smaller letters on the side, "E. P. Shaw," is known from one end of Chatham to the other. About every resident of the town patronizes the wagon and the keepers of the little grocery stores also are customers of young Shaw.

Trailing along behind this baker's wagon, with the boy whistling away on the seat, are generally three or four dogs of [illegible] breeds. The dogs are the especial [illegible] of two of the oldest and [illegible] New England families.

[illegible] the father was allowed the custody of the boy for six [illegible] his mother had him six [illegible] most bitter fight [illegible] for the absolute control of this boy. The mother won. The boy according to the lawyers in the case liked to be with his mother, but has just as much regard for his father.

The trouble in the Shaw family back in 1910 startled the fashionable world. The wife was found at Santa Barbara, Cal., by detectives.

In the hurried elopement and flight across the country went this boy. He was then eleven years old.

Hustled Back and Forth.

In the past three years this boy has been taken across the country by his mother in flight and brought back again. He has been taken to Europe by his father [illegible] at a Boston hotel [illegible] contempt of court.

"The boy likes them, and so we keep them."

Chatham has a Summer baseball team. Down there they call it a wonder. Marble is captain and plays first base. Mr. Eldredge, who is generally interested in the Summer sport anything that is going on in Chatham, gives up [illegible] of his time and considerable money to have his son's team [illegible] every other summer [illegible] team on Cape Cod, and they have [illegible] taking care of them pretty successfully thus far.

The house the Marbles occupy is one of the oldest in the town. Last Summer it was used as a tea room, but was not a success until Mrs. Marble took hold of it. It is very tastefully decorated and arranged inside. Japanese rooms, rooms full of knick knacks and souvenirs, cut glass and china, abound, in fact it is a sort of small variety store. All the articles for sale are of the type found only in the best stores of places much larger than the little fishing town.

Mrs. Marble is her own clerk and carefully waits on all the customers, even to serving tea and cream on the broad, screened verandas.

Young Shaw is a pretty busy youngster, but he finds time to get to every ball game and is a royal rooter for the home team.

Next Summer may find him in a different occupation than that of baker for Mr. and Mrs. Marble, it is understood, already have leased one of the fashionable Summer hotels on the Chatham shore and will take charge of that next season. Just what Eldredge P. Shaw will do in this new life has not been determined, but he may be a "bell hop."

Over at Grandpa Eldredge's place, that makes out from a little cove at Chatham port, is a good sized Summer house that [illegible] for his grandson. This play house was [illegible] a [illegible] portable house [illegible] put together in such a manner that the entertainment of guests is no hardship for the four-year-old [illegible] has a prominent place [illegible] estate [illegible] Eldredge mansion. It is used now chiefly by several other grandchildren of Mr. Eldredge, who spend their summers at Chatham.

Mrs. Marble at the time of her marriage to former Senator Shaw was one of the most prominent society girls of Portsmouth, N. H. She is a woman just past 30. Today in Chatham about everyone is agreed that the mother and her son are "making good." They are admired for their pluck and the boy is one of the most popular youngsters in the town.

STATUS OF DAKOTA DAN AS MASON ONE OF THE PUZZLING FEATURES OF RUSSELL CASE

IS DAKOTA DAN a Mason?

He says he is, and Rides to give the grip.

Many doubt him.

Prominent members of the order in and around Boston, but a few of the thirty-second degree, say they have put to the test the Kansas widow's claim to the Russell fortune, and thus far the latest sensation in one of the most notable family puzzles on record, and that he has failed flat.

Now that rank ought to know. But Dakota Dan admits he has no credentials, he says they were destroyed with other valuable papers in the big fire at Minneapolis last winter.

And of course, with those in charge of the case—Senator Russell of Mississippi, Grand Master Masonic jurisdiction, Boston—no bona fides, or alleged absence, of the name of Dan Rice appearing in the lodge at Nichelville, N. Y., where he claims to have been initiated under the name of Daniel Blake, to back him.

In short, Dan and disinterested affidavit aver, Dakota Dan" has "shown himself so far as his Masonic qualifications are concerned, to have passed through the ordeal but little if at all short of the query Wilde.

Well, it was carried at Nichelville in 1867 that he was what became of the records?

Dakota claimant's most ardent friends. If he has listed either as "Blake or Russell they are unknown. If he could, I have been under some other name.

Positive He is a Mason.

Dakota Dan appears to be positive he was a Mason under the name "Daniel Blake," and says he preferred to drop the name of Russell because his father was a Mason, and as he left home at fifteen in rags, with him, he feared he might be identified.

The associated lawyers in Nichelville assert that it would be proper to assume the name "Blake," which was his mother's maiden name and he could and they told him it would be all right.

Quite hard as to whether he might not have been registered under some other name, if any of the absence of any record of "Daniel Blake Russell" or "Daniel Russell," a name adopted temporarily and soon forgotten, the claimant from the grain country said that he had been known as Daniel Blake, and Dan Doyle and the first papers from Fresno as "John John Blake, Attorney, alias John Doyle."

A great deal of their lives by the residents of Nichelville were spent that the name of Dan Rice, years, for the purpose of shift names. Neither was any reason for calling for the Dakota Dan of correspondents. Yet quibbling would not be the present [illegible]

And what is there anything to hide or be ashamed of? What would the past produce against a man or both?

If such be the case, he had been initiated in Mason in Nichelville as far back as 1867, under the name of Daniel Blake or Daniel B. Russell," it matters not, as Dan has risen. The Nichelville Lodge is now dormant in northern New York took up the matter

No Record Found.

Here is what the correspondent wired back:

Nichelville, N. Y., Aug. 10.

Editor AMERICAN:

W. Merrill master of Elk Lodge No. 377, Nichelville, says that Daniel Blake or Russell never petitioned that lodge and says whole thing has been loosed up by him before in Nichelville.

F. T. SWAN

Yours in if records of this nature could be produced by Dakota Dan, knowing that he had used the name of Blake or Russell years before any will contest, was thought of and long before his father's death, it could clear one obstacle from his path, but that obstacle remains after investigation, notwithstanding that the Dakotan has the Masonic grip and password and is proclaimed a Mason by men high in the score order hereabout.

It would seem to be easy that his ineligibility in the order, owing to lack of time and the remoteness of his domicile, may have rendered him an honorary member of the Nichelville lodge, and that the records may have been invalid, but there should be some method of ascertaining from the Grand Lodge or elsewhere, whether Daniel Blake or Daniel Russell was ever duly accepted and enrolled, even if subsequently dismissed or honorably discommoned.

New York, N. Y., Aug. 10, 1912.

Editor Sunday AMERICAN:—Solicitors counsel, Attorneys Simpson and Sheldon, tried to and failed.

Senator Lea le A. Simpson of Dakota even went to Nichelville in person accompanied by Dakota Dan a year ago, but was not able to locate any records according to Dakota Dan himself.

But we did find men who remembered Masonic Lodge in Nichelville, N. Y. Records here at Masonic Temple in complete—Do not show names Daniel Blake, Daniel Blake Russell, James D. Russell or Thomas Doyle

New York American

Dakota Dan realizes as vividly as anybody, if not more so, the value of procuring the Masonic records, but up to date he has been unable to. His present sitting with me at lodge meetings," explained the ranchman yesterday. "It's a queer mess. I don't know what to make of it and Senator Simpson didn't put me to sea to me he was convinced that somebody had been fired. Money had been freely circulated up that way as well as to Malone and other settings of upper New York State and I feel certain those records must have been covered or doctored

"I know how bad it looks on that score. You say your correspondent did not unearth anything and that former Master Merrill didn't know of any record of a Daniel Blake or Russell?

"Well, I'm a Mason! If anybody doubts it let them step into any private room of ball and try me out. I'll convince them on the spot. I'm a third degree Mason I passed the 'Sheriight,' I did

"It isn't my fault and shouldn't be chalked against me. If I can give the grip and signs I must have joined somewhere; that's a bet. Well, the only color I ever remember joining so far as Nichelville is concerned is Elk Lodge at Nichelville and that was back in 1867, three years after I left home. The records must be somewhere

"Somebody up that way ought to be honest enough to stand by a brother Mason It would be mighty unfair to have me [illegible] Could I have used some name other than Russell or Blake? No. Yes, come to think of it, I was known among the boys in some of the camps as 'Tom Doyle,' but only for a very short time. For a few years after leaving home I was known as Daniel Blake, but after I pushed into the West I was always known as just 'Daniel Russell.'

"I remember the night we fellows came down to the Nichelville lodge. I don't remember right it was New Year's and I am positive it was in 1868. I was employed as timekeeper at the time for Hobson. The camp was at Tupper's Lake, a good fifty miles from Nichelville. We came down from the camp by train as far as St. Ridge's Falls and there hired a rig at Cook's livery stable.

Lodge Over Village Store.

"Cook ought to remember me. He was a big man. We drove over the road in his hitch to Nichelville. The lodge rooms then were over a village store. They have been changed since. It was Elk Lodge, No. 377. I can't recall who the master was, but I do know that Munson was junior master and when Simpson and I were there Munson remembered me. So did several others.

"But they couldn't recall me by name, though they knew my face at once. Dr. Walker, the druggist, and John Frasier also remembered me. I think the second visit from camp we attended Saratoga Springs lodge. There may be records there and there ought to be at the grand lodge headquarters.

"So I was initiated as 'Daniel Blake.' It couldn't have been under any other name. I wouldn't be apt to use Doyle. I lost my Masonic card and my Odd Fellowship credentials together with other valuable papers in the Hinckley, Minn., fire, which made matters worse.

Sears-Vanderbilt Drama Scene Heiress Swims Amid Jellyfish!

ELEONORA SEARS AND HAROLD VANDERBILT.

Ringless Hand Her Only Answer to Query on Engagement.

Are Eleonora Sears and Harold Vanderbilt engaged?

No; because people are never officially engaged until the cards are out and the lady displays a diamond solitaire of more or less magnitude.

But are Miss Sears and Mr. Vanderbilt in danger of getting engaged, officially and indissolubly? If you would like to know, read the following true tale, and remember that the actors in it are members of great families worth many millions and quite unable to amble around as Johnny Jones and Mary Smith.

The scene is at West Beach at Beverly Farms, a beach which is as private as a remote locality and an aristocratic beach corporation can make the ocean's edge.

Here the Sears family owns a bathing pavilion, a commodious building surrounded by a wide porch.

About 11 o'clock yesterday the Sears automobile rolled up to the pavilion and Miss Eleonora Sears, a girl friend and Harold Vanderbilt, who is stopping at the Sears estate, stepped out.

"For the last time, are you coming in athletic Boston girl, and rushed into bathing?" asked Miss Sears.

"Nope! The waters too cold," replied the descendant of Commodore Vanderbilt.

"Then you can wait for us," replied the the bat, quote

Mr. Vanderbilt wore white trousers, a blue serge coat, a gray golf cap and a contented expression. He perched himself upon the porch rail and waited.

There was a strong breeze from the sea which had driven into West Beach about one million jellyfish. The receding tide had left thousands of them stranded and they were so thick that the beach attendants were shoveling them into carts with snow shovels. They whitened the whole surface of the water and made the ocean look very un inviting.

Most of the society people who use West Beach evidently thought so, for there were no bathers and only a few nursemaids with children upon the sand

Miss Sears came out ready for her bath. The heiress wore a faded blue bathing suit and black cotton stockings. Her light fluffy hair was supplied by a cap and she looked very attractive.

"Say," remonstrated Mr. Vanderbilt, "that ocean is alive with jellyfish. You can't go in there.

"I adore jellyfish," declared Miss Sears "Watch me go in."

She picked out a spot where the white streaks were most noticeable and plunged The next thing the jellyfish knew they were being tossed about by the fearless bather While she was bathing the reporter approached Mr. Vanderbilt and asked to know if he were engaged to the lady of the jellyfish.

"Of course I won't answer such a question," he replied "It's very embarrassing to have reporters bobbing up all the time It's not right to ask such questions."

Miss Sears was coming up from the water and, as Mr. Vanderbilt retreated, the lady was asked if she would deny the report of her engagement. She laughed, held up her hand, which was ringless, and disappeared into the bath house.

The reporter noted away confident that his question was answered because Miss Sears wore no rings. But then he remembered that ladies in bathing usually remove their rings, so he was back where he started.

There is one thing certain, however, Miss Sears and Mr Vanderbilt are very chummy

CANON HENSON COMING.

English Clergyman Will Preach in Boston in October.

Canon Henson of Westminster Abbey, London, is coming to this country and will be in Boston the latter part of October

The Canon made a stir during his last visit to America about three years ago and was boycotted by many of the Episcopal clergy of Massachusetts on account of his radical churchmanship and his severe criticisms.

He will preach at Appleton Chapel, Harvard, and give five lectures at Andover Seminary.

During his stay in Boston, he will be the guest of Professor Max Kellner of the Episcopal Theological Seminary.

MANY GO ABROAD.

Number of Bostonians Among Passengers on the Canadian.

The Leyland liner Canadian left East Boston yesterday for Liverpool with a number of Bostonians on board. Among them were Alexander S. Porter, Mrs. A. M. Peabody, Miss Mary M. Peabody, Miss Helen Peabody and Rev. G. Winfield Hunt. Mrs. Peabody and her daughters are to spend a year in Europe. They will travel and study.

FLOATING HOSPITAL BUSY.

Trips Arranged for Every Day and Night This Week.

Trips on the Boston Floating Hospital have been arranged for every day and night this week. This is George W. Armstrong day, to be followed by the Bunyard's Day night. Tomorrow the trip will be financed in memory of the late Colonel Albert A. Pope, and Wednesday night by the Boston Lodge of Elks.

BOSTON WILL GREET BUSINESS LEADERS

Members of Foreign Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade Coming.

Boston will be host to the most important and influential gathering of Ambassadors of Business that city has ever had within her gates in a few weeks.

Leading members of the chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade of the world are coming here by hundreds to be the guests of the city and of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Judging by the plans that are being made for their entertainment when they start homewards to their respective countries they will each record the name of Boston with kind and abiding memories.

For Boston is going to do herself proud on this occasion, as she always does when the right men have hold of things, and give the town an opportunity to put her best foot forward.

The business leaders who are coming here will represent Great Britain, France Belgium, Germany, Spain, Italy, Austria-Hungary, Russia, the different countries of South America, Canada, South Africa and Australia.

Result of European Tour.

Their coming to America and to Boston is largely the result of the tour of Europe made last year by the members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce during which visits, the chamber men, notably Joan H. Fahey and E. A. Filene, invited the commercial leaders of the different cities to come to Boston, see the city and its historic surroundings, make a cruise of the Boston Harbor, so that all may judge of the city's standing as a port, and then go through some of the vast industrial plants, whose products have made a respected name in the factories and marts of the universe

There is to be lots of business, but not all shall be business.

The visitors are going to have the time of their lives and quite the third generation their families will be talking of that Yankee time after the visitors go home.

There will be automobile tours of scenic and historic Boston, of the park system and of the city's splendid boulevards from the Blue Hills to the sea.

Trip to the Beaches.

There will be trips to the beaches with stops now and again on the way to give the travelers a chance to stretch their legs and to enjoy the scenery.

There will be dinners and luncheons in town—with the top notcher at the Copley-Plaza and breakfasts and luncheons out of town, including two big spreads with some genial formality thrown in to save the solidity of the feed. One of these will be in Quincy, where the Fore River Ship building directors will spread the wands and the Bethlehem Steel talk modestly about the best battleships on the seven seas. Then, Quincy, of course, those that are built in Quincy and the other shipyards of America

The Colonial Club people are going to do the handsome at their great place in Cohasset, where the pine and cedar clouds of fragrant tobacco smoke will furnish inspiration for the most bewitching story of commercial adventure ever yet fallen from the lips of man.

The Boston Elks' program will be the steamboat excursion down and around Boston Harbor and along the North and South Shores. General Francis V. Greene, Colonel H. L. Kincaide and Walter C. Fish will be members of the Electrical Exhibition to be held in Mechanics Building.

Brilliant Electrical Display.

Coming as a brilliant climax to the days of sightseeing by the business leaders from abroad will be the Electrical Exhibition to be held in Mechanics Building.

This will be the greatest show of its kind in America and consequently became an illuminating agent.

During the exhibition, it is planned, to make Huntington avenue one blaze of artificial day from Copley square to the Boston Opera House.

The managers of the exhibition are considering also the lighting up in gorgeous fashion the navigable waters of Charles River Basin.

Sub-Committees of the Boston Chamber of Commerce are working with energy and system to bring into shape all the features planned for the visit of the big men of progressive citizens of other countries who are to be the guests of Boston and her merchants

The official card of invitation which the Chamber of Commerce has sent to each of the foreign chambers is one of the finest examples of lithorgraphic art that has come from the press.

BOSTON'S BEST FIRE GUARD FOR BOSTON

Water Front Area Is 47 Miles, Where More Than $60,000,000 In Property Stands.

"Boston is not likely to have a conflagration such as visited Baltimore and San Francisco.

"The erection of fire proof buildings in the so-called danger zone and the high efficiency of our fire department, makes Boston safe from big fires.

"The waterfront area covering 147 miles, and where more than $60,000,000 worth of property is guarded by the three fire boats. The new firehouse station at the Northern avenue bridge will make it possible for the firehouse to cope with any sort of situation which might arise.—Fire Commissioner Charles E. Cox

THAT the great waterfront area in this city with its docks and warehouses will, with the completion of fire house at the Northern avenue bridge, be the best guarded of any port in the world, is the statement of Charles E. Cox, Boston's fire commissioner

For more than five years the bluejackets and Fireboat 44 have been housed in cramped quarters at the end of Central wharf. The new house, the most unique of its kind, will be ready for occupancy another month. At that time the fireboat will be one of the naval end of the department and will have a dock of her own Her decks will not be scraped by dirty piers.

Also when the fireboat is berthed at her new house it will mark a new era for [illegible] Fire Commissioner Cox [illegible] the new fire for its admirable location. The dock was built at a cost of $2,000 and the house in which will lie the fireboat cost $17,000. The fireboat will then be distributed in such a manner as to cover every part of Boston's waterfront. Admiral Ritchie, or District Chief Ritchie, who is in command of the squad now, will remain in East Boston aboard Boat 47

Boat 31 Stays In North End.

Boat 31 will remain at its berth near the North End Park. In explaining why the new site was selected, Fire Commissioner Cole said: "The Port Directors are not in so much to improve the water front in South Boston and in Fort Point Channel that the new house was built there in order to have a boat in readiness should a fire start in that section."

"If the naval end of our department is going to be increased—by new Arnbouts," asked the reporter.

"I see no reason at the present time for adding new boats to the department. Although the water front is growing, like other sections of Boston, the new docks are fireproof, which, of course, lessens the fire hazard. In a few years I expect to see the entire water front of Boston lined with fireproof docks and warehouses. I think the day of big fires in Boston is ended."

Chief Engineer W. E. Eaton, who will be in command of the new fire station at the Northern Avenue bridge, is of the same opinion in regard to big fires.

Pra ses Location.

"The new house is going to give us a splendid position. You see we are bottled up here on Central Wharf," said Captain Eaton. "From the Northern Avenue bridge we have a view of the entire harbor front and will never have difficulty getting under way in response to an alarm." Captain Eaton is in command of thirteen men.

To get any of these men to talk about the new fire boat or the new engine and house is a difficult matter. They refer everybody to the commissioner.

"What is the object of the work you are planning for your department?"

Mr. Cole was quick to answer. "Realize the most important work in the department at present is the foundation pens [illegible] the number of [illegible]." Why does Boston have the largest fire loss of any city in the country per capita?"

The Commissioner is frank to say that the trouble is with our laws regulating construction of buildings.

"You see," he said, "in the down-town section of our city there are hundreds of old buildings that are anything but fireproof. They ought to be torn down and laws governing the erection and even maintenance of buildings that do not satisfy the fire commissioner

DRINK HABIT CONQUERED

Simple, Inexpensive Remedy Said to Quench All Desire for Liquor.

NEW YORK, July 27.—In view of the astonishing success of a formula recently discovered, simple home remedy for the liquor habit, a group of New York prominent men have secured the American rights and have formed the Renova Company, No. 200 Broadway, Room 809, New York, to distribute it by mail. A sample of the remedy is sent free to interested persons who write for it. It can be given with equal success with or without the knowledge of the drinker. Press and pulpit should give wide publicity to the matter.

It is reproduced in the Boston American at the instance of the Renova Distributing Company so that all interested may know about and take advantage of this great opportunity. If anyone of your acquaintance ought to quit drinking, urge him or his friends to write at once.

QUEER YANKEE GIRL IN ENGLISH PLAY

Frederick Johns Discovers an Amusing if Impossible Comedy in London.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

LONDON, July 12.—"The American Girl" has again been libeled by the serious and stolid Londoners in their effort to understand her.

The latest [illegible] at the [illegible] Theatre, under the direction of Mr. Charles Hawtrey. Mr. Hawtrey and Miss Mona Limerick [illegible] thought it would be wanted to present to [illegible] a young woman who should illustrate all the conventions and even the common decencies, yet still be respectable and virtuous. So he made his heroine an American.

And it is an interesting commentary upon the state of mind of the English of today that they find nothing reprehensible in [illegible] Ann, because she is an American, although Americans would not approve of it at all.

And is a grotesque libel upon the American girl. No self-respecting flapper would act as she did for [illegible] words even in London.

It [illegible] for the winning personality of Billie Burke and as Aspen [illegible] could tolerate the conduct of Ann.

An [illegible] opening Englishman [illegible] woman, deliberately [illegible] engagement and a newspaper [illegible]

And the British audience washes it [illegible] That is the miracle wrought [illegible] genius of Miss Hawtrey. A [illegible] of an actress would refuse a role [illegible] at least as [illegible] an abomination.

Ann's Atrocious Habits.

Ann has habits that are atrocious. She soaks herself in a certain expensive perfume until she cannot occupy a room without causing it to reek of it.

She enters [illegible] by fire-escapes. And that is one of putting on a nightgown and going to sleep in a man's [illegible]. And yet—well, here is the story.

Edward [illegible], son of a British clergyman, has written a novel. It has had an astounding success, although all the women declare that the love scenes are ridiculous.

This is not strange, for Eddie has never been kissed. At the beginning of his mother he proposes to Evangeline, a minister's daughter, over the telephone, and is accepted. Evangeline is very practical she is, as Ann later styles her, prunes, prisms, potatoes, poultry, poodles.

Shortly afterwards, as Edward is alone thinking rather sadly of his matter of fact engagement, Ann enters—by the fire-escape.

She is a newspaper interviewer, so she says. She is also a young woman whom Edward had pulled out of the river at Henley a few days before.

It is evident from the first that she is going to love Edward. Equally evident here is the first [illegible] the Star Spangled Banner. To make an American girl fall in love with a man, mutt, book, rat and dope like Edward is something we must not forgive. And yet Edward looks at [illegible] to his parents and his [illegible].

Ann makes herself at home and Edward is paralyzed with fear of her. She walks into his sitting room and preaches him for wearing a nightshirt instead of pajamas. Positively American conduct!

Sorry He Proposed.

She causes him to tell about his engagement, drifts contrives to make him admit he is kind of sorry he proposed, and then, as an [illegible] option of a girl who would accept a man over the phone.

Nevermind openings in the audience did not occur.

When he discovers he is sorry that he is engaged she says she will get him out of it. She invites herself to tea next afternoon to meet the fiancee, and exits in a [illegible].

Father, who has identified the owner of the [illegible] perfume, has to be [illegible], and is. Then they serve Ann alone to deal with Edward. She puts on a nightgown over her dress, lets her hair down, and proceeds to keep up her end. Even [illegible] who wins a husband so much [illegible] due to forgive Edward comes back, the [illegible] quarrel, and the English girl is caused away by the Yankee. Imagine a British audience standing this, but it does, and likes it.

REVELATIONS IN THE STANDARD OIL LETTERS

(From Hearst's Magazine for August.)

Personal. October 13,1904.

My dear Senator:- In fulfilment of our understanding,it gives me pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $25,000.and with good wishes,I am,

Yours Truly,

To Hon Boies Penrose, 1331 Spruce St., Phila., Pa.

(Sgnd) Jno. D. Archbold.

"The understanding" must have been complete and the achievement notable to warrant so gener ous a recognition of Senator Penrose's "intelligence and integrity."

Here follow, reproduced from HEARST'S MAGAZINE for August, a few of the many letters from John D. Archbold, of the Standard Oil Trust, to Senator Boies Penrose and others.

Like the Oil Letters printed in previous numbers of HEARST'S MAGAZINE, they are illuminating and amazing.

In the previous chapters we have seen the widespread and powerful influence exerted by the Standard Oil Company to secure the election of their own pliable agents to positions of public trust.

We have seen the enormous amounts of money expended by the Standard Oil Company [illegible] to obtain political [illegible] to place [illegible] men in public office.

We have seen the same effort and the same [illegible] used to keep [illegible] servants [illegible] people out of positions of power where they could be used for the protection of the people and for the prosecution of the illegal and oppressive trusts.

Active in public life today and active in the service of the trusts is Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania.

A thin writing there is a contest in Pennsylvania between the machine led by Penrose and supported by the Taft administration and the Progressive Republicans of the State.

In this contest the Standard Oil can be counted upon to come to the support of Penrose both because of his past services and because of its future necessities.

Senator Penrose has always been a valuable and highly trained agent of the Standard Oil in public life.

In the preceding article we have seen how he was elected to the Senate by Standard Oil and how he served them, and in this article we shall see how he continued to serve the Standard Oil and what generous recognition he received for his services.

The Fullness of Precaution.

In 1900 the United States Industrial Commission was holding a so-called "investigation" into the trusts. In May of that year we find the following letter written by Mr. Archbold to Senator Penrose, then of Pennsylvania, perhaps the most influential member of the commission:

May 17, 1899.

Hon. Boies Penrose,
1331 Spruce street,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Senator:

I don't expect it is at all necessary to bother you again regarding the Washington matter, but Mr. Wardwell in the morning in receipt of the enclosed letter from the Secretary of the Commission, urging him to appear before them in June. I have said to him that he need give himself no uneasiness about it, and that the understanding is clear that none of our parties are to appear in June. As I think I have told you, Mr. Wardwell is in poor health and is planning to leave for Europe. I have thought best, however, to send this to you out of the fullness of precaution.

Apologizing again for troubling you in the matter, I am,

Yours very truly,
Jno. D. Archbold.

Early in 1900 the commission began at work on its report. This was important, for recommendations were to be made upon which laws were to be enacted. It was so important that Mr. Archbold sent to Committeeman Penrose long telegrams of instructions which the Western Union Telegraph Company obligingly carried without charge.

And to make sure that there were no mistakes about it, Mr. Archbold sent the contents of the telegrams in letters, of which the following is one:

January 5, 1900.

My Dear Senator:

Corporations should not be required to make public the names or holdings of all stockholders. It is an unjust, unnecessary inquisition into the private affairs of individual stockholders and serves no public good. If demanded by creditors, State laws now provide the means of obtaining the information. Private corporations should not be required to make public items of receipts and expenditures, profits and losses. A statement of assets and liabilities is all that can benefit the public. Items of receipts and expenditures, profits and losses can only benefit the competitors.

I beg to acknowledge also with many thanks your favor of January 1st, the enclosures accompanying which I beg to return you herewith. Was very sorry not to see you here last week, but, as you know, I was away on a little vacation.

Sorry to learn today of the report of the committee on the Quay case, but still hope for favorable action by the Senate.

With thanks for all your courtesy, I am, Very truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold.

Hon. Boies Penrose,
Washington, D. C.

Can anything show more clearly than this correspondence [illegible] which was being investigated was that of considering the interrogation that it was desirable what [illegible] called and when, and that it was further determining what should be incorporated in the report of the committee and what should not be incorporated in that report.

Mr. Archbold reads carefully the report made in deference to his desires as to testimony and in accordance with his suggestions as to [illegible].

Mr. Archbold read the report and gave it the sanction of his approval.

Read the following hearty indorsement of the report made a few months later. A reply was given:

26 Broadway, New York.
February 21, 1900

Hon. Boies Penrose,
Senate Chamber, Washington D. C.
My Dear Senator:

I have your kind note of yesterday with enclosures which latter I beg to return herewith. WE THINK THE REPORT IS SO FAIR THAT WE WILL NOT UNDERTAKE TO SUGGEST ANY CHANGES.

With many thanks, I am,
Very truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold.

All Fixed Beforehand.

The above letter deserves to be studied with the utmost carefulness and thoughtfulness. Observe that the date of the letter was February 21, 1900. The [illegible] of the commission was not sent to Congress until the first day of March, 1900. [illegible] to [illegible], [illegible] the [illegible] was [illegible] to Congress was submitted to Mr. Archbold and was returned to Senator Penrose and approved by the head of the particular trust that had been under investigation.

Among the distinguished [illegible] Republicans whose names were attached to the report to give it weight with the voters was Nelson W. Aldrich, who lost the last election to the United States Senate bought for him by the trusts.

The Hon. John J. Gardner of New Jersey, another public friend of the people and secret friend of the trusts, also signed the document.

Remember Gardner. In the course of the Standard Oil correspondence we will meet him again.

The Industrial Commission in an excess of zeal went even further than the tone-gagged wishes of Archbold on the question of permitting the corporations to keep the names of their stockholders secret. On the first page of the report we find this.

It should be kept clearly in mind through all the discussion that great capital or a great combination of capital has no necessary relation to monopoly, although it seems that a virtuous monopoly may be impossible. Good will comes from great capital.

The commission reported against over-capitalization but decided that the Standard Oil Company was not over-capitalized. It defended the trust for selling oil cheap abroad than in the United States on the ground that such a policy was necessary to capture the market.

Mr. Archbold is not only a moral man, a deacon in the church, but a patriot. So just before leaving his office to take part in the patriotic ceremonies of the Fourth of July he wrote the following letter:

July 3, 1901.

Hon. Boies Penrose,
Philadelphia, Pa.

My Dear Senator:

Following the lamentable death of Senator Kyle, we are very strongly of the opinion that you should take the chairmanship of the Industrial Commission. This seems eminently fitting from every point of view. Your name as chairman would undoubtedly give to the report exceptional assurance of integrity and intelligence; you are the ranking Senatorial member of the Commission; the interests of your State are pre-eminent in the matter; and lastly, and we may hope not unfairly, we make it as a strong personal request.

May I venture to ask for an affirmative answer by wire, so that we may do what seems possible to aid in the matter.

With kind personal regards, I am,
Very truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold

Mr. Archbold, Penrose being unable to accept, [illegible] Colonel Clarke recommended by Penrose.

Read the following:

August 19th, 1901.

My Dear Senator:

My attention is called to the fact of the appointment of Senator Thomas R. Bard, of Ruename, Cal., as a member of the Industrial Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Senator Mantle, of Montana.

Should further information be determined effort will be made at the meeting early in September by the Democratic and disgruntled members of the Commission to make political capital against the so-called trusts. Senator Bard can be counted on for sensible action in regard to this question, an effort should be made to have him present at the meetings. It is very desirable also to have him favor Col. Clarke for the chairmanship. Can you reach him, and will you do so?

Very truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold.

Hon. M. A. Hanna.

The Standard Oil Company has been called one of the greatest organizations in the world. The [illegible] In beginning to be seen through the facts revealed in these Standard Oil letters. It organized National and State governments [illegible] secure appointments of minor officials.

The faithful Penrose is the agent through which the Standard Oil operates not only in the United States Senate, but in the State Senate of Pennsylvania.

[illegible] a [illegible] S. [illegible] ally [illegible] [illegible] of the Senate of Pennsylvania at the instance of the Standard Oil [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and Mr. Archbold writes Senator Penrose urging him to secure the reappointment of Honorable E. W. Scudley and presents "his qualifications for the position."

Of Course He Goes In.

Mr. Archbold "will esteem it a personal favor" if Senator Penrose will aid Mr. Scudley's reappointment.

26 Broadway, New York.
November 24, 1902.

My dear Senator:

I most earnestly hope that it is in the line of your intention and desire to favor the reappointment of Hon. E. W. Scudley as Chief Clerk of the Senate of Pennsylvania. His qualifications for the position need no word. I am sure, at my hands. I will esteem it a personal favor if you will aid in his re-election.

Very truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold.

Hon. Boies Penrose, 1331 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Needless to say that the "personal favor" was granted and that Mr. Scudley is again [illegible] Chief Clerk of the Standard Oil Company's [illegible] Senate.

Mr. Archbold and the Standard Oil [illegible] [illegible] substantial rewards upon their political servants. They distributed their secret certificates of deposit in small or large amounts according to the importance of the character of the service rendered.

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] certificates of deposit for a thousand dollars. [illegible] Senators Pile Frazier received certificates of deposit for $15,000. The Standard Oil was liberal, but discriminating, exacting, but always appreciative.

[illegible] from Pennsylvania received [illegible] certificates of deposit duly proportionate to their services, as the following letter addressed to Congressman Stone will show:

(Personal) October 11, 1888.

Hon. C. W. Stone,
Warren, Pa.

My dear Sir:

Referring to our conversation of yesterday, it now gives me pleasure to enclose your certificate of deposit to your favor for $2,000. I have also written the letter suggested.

Truly yours,
Jno. D. Archbold.

The Understanding Complete

The largest certificate of deposit yet recorded is contained in the following letter sent to the Hon. Boies Penrose at his home address in Philadelphia and marked personal.

26 Broadway, New York.
(Personal) October 13, 1904.

My dear Senator:

In fulfilment of our understanding, it gives me great pleasure to hand you herewith certificate of deposit to your favor for $25,000, and with good wishes, I am,

Yours truly,
Jno. D. Archbold.

Hon. Boies Penrose, 1331 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

In publishing this letter we relieve the standard fill of all canons of legralities. It gives Mr. Archbold "great pleasure" to hand Mr. Penrose a certificate of deposit to his favor for $25,000.

Mr. Archbold adds his "good wishes," and says to the Senator that the certificate is "fulfillment of our understanding."

The understanding must have been complete and the achievement notable to warrant so generous a recognition of Senator Penrose's [illegible] integrity.

REGULAR "MIDWAY" ON DEVONSHIRE ST.

Fakirs Make It Their Headquarters While Waiting for Rockingham Park Fair.

Quaint old Devonshire street, the usual home of staid New England stock brokers and business men, has been turned into a midway these days, where freaks of all kinds and descriptions, who are usually seen under canvas, are daily passing in review. Seen in their street clothes and minus the blare of the bands of a circus and out of the light of the torches they seem just like other humans, and infinitely more keen in a financial sense.

There is the strong woman, who tosses a dozen men about as if they were toothpicks, the bearded man, who is "exhibited for exhibition purposes only"; the snake charmer who lives and has her being in a cage of reptiles; the side show "barker" who tells from the outside what is to be seen on the inside, the "candy butcher," the ice cream cone man, the restaurant man, who carries an eating "joint" under canvas to feed them, the "skill man" and a multitude of minor business men who follow the sun in its course around the various fair grounds.

The word has gone out among them that there is to be a fair and horse show in Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H. beginning August 20, and they are all eager to get an allotment of space on "Looney Lane."

That's what they are calling the "midway," and the freaks will have among the color of the Equitable building loose days are providing a free show for the elevator men and the office boys. The locator of the enterprise, a disguised broker, is in doubt whether to run an ostrich farm when the strong man is introduced to him, and he's a bit dubious as to whether the snake charmer should be met on terms of equality.

His manager, "manager of concessions" to quote the official title, is James F. Kerr who knows some of the freaks well enough to call them by their first names. He is armed and equipped with a blue print that represents 4,000 feet of land. These are all blocked off in spaces of five feet in exactly the same manner as though a new town was being established, and each 5 feet of space represents money that must be paid by the "fakirs" in "Looney Lane" before they can open up and do business.

And these "fakirs" know just exactly what they want and they also know where they want it. They won't pay for just what they get and not a penny more. For instance the strong woman will not take a location that will be anywhere near the snake charmer, and the "paddle wheel man," who has an aquarium that will give you a stuffed doll if the wheel stops at the right number, doesn't want to be located next to the "living skeleton" and there is the "buy back" man, who will give you a dollar if you don't want a watch, who doesn't care where he is as long as there are people to talk to.

Each of these and the haggerman, the "whillabera," the ones who stand in a crowd before a tent and tell of the rush inside; the "boosters," who help the business when help is sorely needed, and the "spielers," who mount the platform and tell you of "all the rare and wonderful curiosities" to be seen on the "inside" and these and many more are strolling Devonshire street these days while the passers-by hold up their hands in horror

TOO LATE

After you have given orders to an undertaker to go ahead with the funeral arrangements, it is too late to argue about prices. He can charge anything he wants and under the law he can collect.

The time to think about the cost is before you engage your undertaker. Have the entire charges understood and agreed upon, in advance. Then any attempt to add to the contract price will be illegal.

My terms for taking entire charge of burial are less than those of any other undertaker in Boston. My services—in dignity and solemnity, and the equipment I supply—cannot be equalled by any other firm in New England. Read my plain offer and see me before you decide upon the undertaker who is to take charge of the body of your loved one. Any religious denomination.

GRAHAM SPECIAL $75 FUNERAL

Black broadcloth casket, trimmed, strong outside box, laying out, shaving, bathing and dressing remains, embalming, pedestals, rugs, chairs, floral piece or crepe for door, candlestick and candles when required, elegant hearse, two coaches, advertising death in newspaper, personal services in arranging and conducting funeral, with attendants, and use of our parlors.

This funeral duplicated by any other undertaker would not at least $100.

Autopiano Taken by the Chas. S. Norris Co. in Exchange for the Famous The World's Most Wonderful Player-Piano THE Autopiano

The Autopiano unites in a single instrument a high-class upright, which can be played with the hands (the old way), and the player-piano, which is played with the perforated piano music roll (the new way), thus enabling anyone, young or old, to render in a finished manner any musical composition. The construction of the Autopiano is most durable, and, unlike others, who use rubber tubes in construction—in the Autopiano lead tubes are used and are indestructible. Its sweet tone is unequalled.

A great many people have in their homes what is practically a "dead piano." No one knows how to play it—son and daughter who used to play and entertain the family have married and the piano is now merely an expensive ornament. Now is the time to get an Autopiano—put in the music roll, start it—that's all you have to do.

Will play for you (without any knowledge of music or playing on your part) the world's greatest music, new and old. All opera and popular music prepared for the Autopiano as soon as published.

THEY ENDORSE THE AUTOPIANO

Stumbling Blocks Are Stepping Stones

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

(Copyright, 1912, by Herbert Kaufman.)

Of course, you are as competent as the man ahead of you. He is not your better by a single natural gift—he came into the world with the same equipment as yours; but—

He used himself to greater advantage—he learned how to handle his strengths and to manage his weaknesses.

He gained control of his forces and devoted them to tasks which would yield a maximum of result with a minimum of strain.

He studied himself until he saw where his best chance lay and how he could seize his opportunities and fit them to his personality.

He didn't wait for fortune, but was shrewd enough to realize that the world has nothing to give for the asking, but all to bestow on the man who "wants something, who knows what he wants, who wants it hard enough, and who gets it."

He doesn't wear the badge of his experiences—the strong never proclaim their humiliations and disappointments, and setbacks—that's why they win.

They smile their obstacles aside.

They bare only their courage to the crowd and they bear pride and cheer in the open.

You lag behind because your eyes are on the wreckage in the rear. You can't forget that yesterday is not to be remembered.

You squander vital, throbbing, fertile impulses upon dead events.

You are sound and sane, but there is no spark of initiative to set you in motion.

All that any man needs to make him bigger, to speed him farther, to send him higher, is sufficient self-respect to shame him out of his inadequacy.

Cease wishing for greatness and struggle for it.

If you had encountered a few serious trials, you would be a broader and better citizen today.

We grow only through travail. We find our depths, discover our wits, and waken our stalwart qualities when we dash for the top and crash to the bottom.

Hesitation, fear and timidity nullify thousands who could have been giants had they not been cowards.

MAYOR AND FINANCE BOARD CHAIRMAN GIVE VIEWS IN STREET LIGHTING CLASH

Boston's system of street lighting has involved Mayor Fitzgerald, the Finance Commission, the City Council, the superintendent of Public Works, and the Chamber of Commerce in a labyrinth of claims and counter [illegible] that [illegible] hardly know what the whole [illegible].

NEW OFFER REDUCES COST

A [illegible] appropriated $300,000 for [illegible] the street lighting service [illegible] contract had expired. It has been temporarily renewed several times because of the failure of the Mayor and City Council to agree on a new contract.

Now the proposition before the Council is whether this $300,000 shall be used for other purposes such as the East Boston waterfront park, additions to the City Hospital, a new infirmary, new police stations and more sewers and streets, or whether it shall go to purchase the Graetzin lamps for the suburban and park lights.

Favors Old Contract.

Mayor Fitzgerald favors a renewal of the old contract, with the promised reduction of $1.50 per year on every lamp used.

The Finance Commission, of which John A. Sullivan is the head, wants to spend the $300,000 to install the proposed new lamps. The Finance Commission says that by this action the city will save $15,000 each year on lights for ten years and in fifteen years have the lights paid for.

By MAYOR JOHN F. FITZGERALD:

Boston is very well lighted at present, and nobody except a few are objecting to the system now in force. The $300,000 available for lighting improvements can be better used. We have calls for improvements all over the city that would require the expenditure of two million dollars. We can't allow them all. This $300,000 would help out. We want the East Boston waterfront park, additions to the City Hospital and Infirmary. We want new police stations, new sewers and more streets. [illegible] that the expenditure of this $300,000 for the [illegible] lighting plant would be [illegible] sibility.

I cannot see how a new service would save the city money and [illegible] anywhere near the [illegible] today. It would [illegible] abandoning a sure thing for an [illegible] and untried experiment [illegible] the assurance that [illegible] order of things will be [illegible] of the city of Boston. [illegible] I have that assurance [illegible] swayed, regardless of the influences high or low, [illegible] come from other sources.

Sullivan Assails Mayor.

By JOHN A. SULLIVAN, chairman of the Finance Commission:

The [illegible] where Mayor Fitzgerald is simply [illegible] looking not [illegible] in our street lighting service but the establishment of [illegible] street lighting plant in Boston that in ten years will pay for itself and save the city $15,000 a year during that time. Whatever the Mayor's motives may be, whether or not he favors the company that for years has enjoyed a profitable contract, the fact stands out [illegible] that the Mayor is a barrier to progress. The testimony even of the head of the Department of Public Works, the Mayor's own appointee, is in line with that of the experts and engineer that the Finance Commission have employed.

These new lights have [illegible] Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury and have given satisfaction. It is not a question with those who have inves[illegible]

By HENRY E. HAGAN, member of the Chamber of Commerce Committee:

The Mayor is trying to lead the [illegible] that the money should [illegible] for other purposes. He says there is a crying need for [illegible] and playgrounds. We [illegible] we also maintain that [illegible] was appropriated for [illegible] lighting system [illegible] should be used for [illegible].

For [illegible] reason not known to him [illegible] the Mayor wants to have [illegible] contract continued [illegible] that some of his friends are interested in the company.

We do not now expect to have the new lamp while the present Mayor is in office. He has tried to discredit everyone who has appeared in favor of the system, as well as the City Council, Commissioner Rourke and all his subordinates. He has no [illegible] moral or honorable right for maintaining his attitude.

Boston is not a badly lighted city at present, but we want the best. This plant can be erected in six or eight months, and in fifteen years it will have paid for itself in saving the cost of the middleman's profits.

This new lamp has an advantage over the present arc light in that its inverted hood will throw the light on the ground where people need it instead of lighting up the [illegible].

LAWSON MAY DEFY WARD SOCIETY AGAIN

Everybody along the South Shore from Thomas W. Lawson down to the Midway fakirs is awaiting the Marshfield Fair, which will take place on August 21, 22 and 23.

Thomas W. Lawson is reported to be intending to defy Secretary J. Frank Chase of the Watch and Ward and give away a [illegible] from his farm to some lucky ticket holder. Lawson was dragged through two courts last year before he was acquitted, [illegible] is to take chances again, it is said.

The main attraction of the fair will be horse racing for which prizes aggregating $1,800 are offered. There will also be a horse show and the usual [illegible] of a country fair.

Begin Grading the Grand Trunk Line

SOUTHBRIDGE, Aug 10.—The work of grading the line of the Southern New England road (of the Grand Trunk) on the Palmer end of the line, which will connect with the Central Vermont in Palmer and run to Providence, was started this week in East Brimfield, six miles west of here. The grading is in charge of the Middletown Construction Company, a subcontractor for the John Marsh Company of Chicago.

Workmen have been clearing the right of way for the last month, but did not start grading until the steam shovel arrived the first of the week. The concrete abutments for the steel bridge in Palmer are under way.

Harvard Bridge Fire.

For the second time in three weeks the Cambridge side of Harvard Bridge was on fire yesterday. Yesterday's fire was but a slight one and was quickly extinguished. A cigarette thrown from a passing car is thought to have started the fire.

BOSTON TAX RATE TO STAY AT $16.40

Boston's tax rate for 1912 will remain the same as last year, $16.40 per thousand, unless the City Council at a special meeting makes additional departmental appropriations.

The assessors yesterday transmitted their figures to Mayor Fitzgerald on the valuation of the city and the rate of taxation.

Mayor Fitzgerald declined to make public the figures following established custom, until the City Council should hear them and determine whether extra appropriations should be made or not. Additional appropriations would increase the rate at least ten cents per thousand.

Although additional appropriations to certain departments are asked for in connection with park, sewer and bath improvements, there is little chance that the City Council will grant them.

The tax rate will remain accordingly at $16.40 per $1,000.

N. B. the Dock Parson Has a New Address

The Dock Parson has moved. This is important, because generally when he is wanted he is wanted mighty badly and quickly. His specialty is the artistic tying of nuptial knots.

The Dock Parson in private life is James A. Burns, J. P., traveling passenger agent of the Cunard Steamship Company. He had lived for many years on Bennington street, East Boston. He has moved to No. 1088 Saratoga street, East Boston.

The first couple to find him in his new home were Miss Fannie Mo[illegible]son of Prince Edwards Island and Henry Morgan of Roxbury. They were married with the Dock Parson's characteristic swiftness and dispatch.

The Grand Jury indicted [illegible] for murder in the first degree. On June 30 he shot Paolo Di Cologero. Di Cologero died subsequently in the hospital.

MIDDLEBORO, Aug 10.—Alvin C. Howes, who has been a prominent member of the Republican party for many years and moderator at town meetings for several terms, being elected as a Republican to that office, has turned down the office under Republican regime and joined the Bull Moose faction right out in the open. He was one of the Massachusetts delegates to the Bull Moose convention at Chicago last week. In an open letter of resignation as moderator to the selectmen, Mr. Howes states that the course that has been pursued by the Republican party does not appeal to him and that he was in accord with the Progressives. He resigns his office as moderator that he [illegible] Republican so that he will not violate any obligation incumbent upon him as a member of that party.

NANTUCKET AND THE AUTO

A Town Meeting to Decide if Cars Will Be Allowed There.

NANTUCKET, Aug 10.—Let it be known right here once for all and for everybody's benefit that the town meeting next March will be some meeting. The big question to be decided, one far more important than the question of free admission to the Panama canal, is whether autos will be permitted on the island. Nantucketers have been averse [illegible] owing to the fact [illegible] fire truck certain [illegible] the restrictions [illegible] must be lifted. The [illegible] paper, The Inquirer and Mirror, is [illegible] considerable space to the subject. The town is divided on the question.

CHICAGO CUBS BEAT PILGRIMS 11-10 IN BUSH LEAGUE GAME

Tail-Enders Give Runners Up for National League Title One of the Hardest Battles of the Year; Pitchers Thick as Flies

In one of the wildest exhibitions of baseball ever staged in this neck of the woods, the Climbing Cubs, after almost three hours of struggle, finally managed to pull a defeat on the Pilgrims yesterday by the bush league total, 11 to 10. There was every brand of baseball on top, good and bad, but the latter was so predominant that it washed away what ever good taste the former might have left in the mouths of some 8,000 witnesses.

Pitchers were as plenty as office seekers at Washington and before the curtain fell four Windy City performers and a quintet of Bostonians had taken some part in kaleidoscopic proceedings. Cheney, Richie Fitzsimmons and Lavender were the bottle flingers, while the locals showed Hess, Donnelly, Brown, Dickson and Perdue. Not one of the bunch was good enough to win much favorable comment, though Lavender did manage to hold off scores during his tenure of office in the closing stanza.

Umpires Were a Feature.

Quite the feature of the game was the work of the umpires, Finneran certainly handing it out to the Cubs in the field, while Rigler was the centre of a storm of bleacherite abuse for his decisions on balls and strikes.

After the game, Manager Chance of Chicago, with a number of his players, engaged in a warm debate with the arbitrators, with several hundred excited "fans" as an audience. For a time it looked as though trouble were impending, but the affair finally blew over. And a non-partisan onlooker could hardly blame the visitors for kicking, for they certainly were on the short end of all the close decisions.

The battle between Sweeney and Zimmerman for leadership in the batting list of the circuit attracted more attention than the game itself. The Cub cluster gained quite a bit in the percentage column, tearing off three safeties in his three trips up while "Cap'n" Hill was unable to register a hit, though he was credited with being at bat twice, one of his appearances ending in a walk and the other two in healthy sacrifice flies which helped materially to swell the Fifth total.

Schulte and Safer Stars.

Schulte and Safer were the "big noises" with the stick for the visitors. Each connected safely thrice, the former sticking in a homer, with two on, as his big bit, while the latter edged along with a couple of vicious triples. Titus, McDonald and Kling each had three to his credit, but none of the trio worked into the extra base column.

There was nothing stirring in the first, though the hostilities did threaten by means of a walk and a couple of safeties. Sharp fielding delayed the slaughter, however.

In the second the Chances gently pried the lid off with a single tally. With one gone, Evers strolled and watched Archer pop. Cheney was hit, and then Miller undid a one-base blow that chased the little second baser home. Schulte was also hit in this stanza, but the resultant full house availed nothing when Downey bumped into a force out.

Nothing daunted, the home tribe came back, and when all was said and done the count was four. Titus started by walking. Then followed, with startling rapidity, a hit, an out, three more base-winning hits and a sacrifice fly and the above-mentioned counters.

How the Cubs Made 'Em.

But the trifling three run lead lasted but an instant. Six lusty wallops, including two triples and a four-baser, mixed in and shaken up with a couple of outs, a walk and a wild pitch, sent half a dozen markers into the Cub refrigerator. Incidentally it marked the passing of Hess, also Donnelly, and the injection of Brown into the mix-up.

Cheney appeared no more for Chicago, Richie taking up the burden. Before he was derricked in the seventh he was assaulted for a total of six runs and seven hits. Meanwhile, in the Pilgrim pennant seekers had pounded in two more off Dickson, who had superseded Brown.

Three runs in the seventh, which marked the passing of Richie, gave the Pilgrims the lead as far as saw things up, Perdue was chased in to fire in the eighth. He allowed but one hit, but that was a triple, introduced after a pass, and made it even all again. A sacrifice by Johnny Saier, the triplee, over, and the scoring for the day was ended.

When the ninth inning was on, Boston had just one man left on the bench—Catcher Rariden. Every other player on the list had been pressed into service. Tyler was away in New Hampshire, after his strenuous work Friday, and O'Rourke was nowhere in evidence.

Which leads one to think that it mightn't be a bad idea for Manager

GREAT BOSTON CROWD CHEERS OLYMPIC HEROES

Lively Contests Mark Return of the Laurel Winners From Stockholm.

It was a glorious day for the returning squad of victorious Olympic athletes yesterday at the great athletic carnival held under the auspices of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks at Fenway Park.

The great crowd which filled the grandstand gave them a warm welcome home, and the scene as the victorious athletes gathered in the centre of the playing diamond, after a parade around the field, each carrying an American flag, surrounded by Mayor Fitzgerald, Governor Tener of Pennsylvania and the members of the Elks' committee and athletes, was an inspiring one.

The athletic champions stood together and ripped off repeated cheers. It was their response to the welcoming they received from Boston. The reply they had was the cheer with which the American team carried the day at Stockholm. Here it is:

"Rah, Rah, Ray —
U. S. A.
A-m-e-r-i-c-a —
America!"

Warm Welcome to Athletes.

The Ninth Regiment Band, seated at first base, played the "Star Spangled Banner" while the Olympic athletes and the crowd rose, uncovered and sang the inspiring air.

The cheering was tremendous, and the athletes carried away with them an idea of the warm spot they hold in the hearts of Bostonians by recognition of the great athletic honor they brought back to America.

Referee George Y. Toohey introduced each athlete to the crowd. First came George Hedpath, and then in order Alvah Richards of the Brigham Young University, Salt Lake City; "Jim" Thorpe, who won the all-round Olympic championship; Fred W. Kelley, the Southern California University athlete, who won the 110-metre hurdles at Stockholm; Albert Gutterson, the B. A. A. lad who broke the Olympic record in the running broad jump; Gustav Strobino, Howard S. Drew, Oscar Hedlund of the B. A. A.; Ayer E. Whitney of the B. A. A., Edward Bowers of the B. A. A., J. P. Nicholson of St. Louis, H. W Holden of the B. A. A., Dick Pigott and Andrew Sockalexis.

Thorpe the Hero of the Day.

Big "Jim" Thorpe came in for cheer after cheer for his great all round work in the athletic contests of the afternoon. He proved a glutton for work.

Sockalexis, too, was cheered heartily for his great sport in the 5,000 metres run. Richards, of the Salt Lake City University, got a fine reception for his great jumping, although he was beaten in the running high jump by Thorpe.

The athletes were welcomed home in a neat speech by Mayor Fitzgerald. Mayor Fitzgerald said:

I want to say, as Mayor of the city, how proud I am to have the opportunity to say a word expressing the gratification of the people of Boston that America for the fifth time in succession, was winner of the Olympic games, and to thank these young men, and through them all the other athletes who enabled America to gain prominence for the fifth time.

I believe no other nation's athletes have won the Olympic games but those of the United States, and therefore, the responsibility upon these young men who left our country a few short months ago to go to a foreign shore and vie with the greatest athletes in the world and to come back victorious, was great.

Everyone of us is under the deepest obligation to them, and therefore I thank you born in behalf of the citizens of Boston for what you did for America, for bringing in the American flag first.

Mayor Thanks Athletes.

You are entitled to our thanks, and as Mayor of the city, I gladly give it, and hope that your future may always be victorious, and that you may go down in life with the affection and the regard and the love which you deserve.

Not only the American people, but the people of the civilized world should admire manly sport and perfect gentlemen in that sport. I now ask everyone to rise and give three cheers for the athletes in old Boston style.

The athletic games were exceptionally well conducted, and the field was the cleanest seen around Boston since the Olympic tryouts held in the Stadium last June.

Although it was near 5 o'clock before the first event was started, the gathering of 5,000 or more Elks and their friends were well repaid for their long wait.

Two Victories for Redskin.

The star of the meet was James Thorpe of the Carlisle Indian School, considered the best all-round athlete in the

10,000 See Carmen Win 25-Mile Race

Beats Wiley and Collins in Motor-Paced Race at the Revere Beach Cycle Track.

In the presence of 10000 people, the largest crowd that has witnessed a bicycle race at the Revere track in ten years, Clarence Carmen won the twenty five mile motor-paced race, defeating George Wiley by three lengths, and Elmer Collins by one quarter of a lap. Wiley rode the best race, but trouble with his motor lost him the event. Carmen took the pole at the start with Collins in second position and Wiley on the outside. Carmen was first to catch his motor with Wiley second and Collins third.

The riders remained in tale position up to the ninth mile when Wiley attempted to pass Carmen but lost his motor and Collins won into second place. In the ninth mile Wiley made an attempt to pass Collins but lost his motor again.

In the twentieth mile the riders were all in the stretch and furnished some exciting finishing. In the last mile the riders set out at a furious pace, but Wiley lost his pace in the last lap and finished sitting up.

RED SOX TAKE 3D GAME FROM DETROIT, 4-1, IN FAST FINISH

Wood Outpitches Willett, but the Bostonians Never Score Until the Sixth, When They Come With a Rush and Win

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 10.—Eighteen hardy athletes went through an afternoon's hard work in the mud, at Navin Field today, and the result is that Joe Wood, the marvelous young Boston pitcher, is one notch nearer a world's record in games won and the Red Sox took their third game in a row from the Tigers, 4 to 1.

Search through the baseball dictionary fails to reveal a word to discribe accurately the exhibition that was staged on Navin field. It was a cross between water polo and cross-country running for most part.

The infield is soft and rough, the outfield was a good imitation of the great lakes. Ball rolled through the mud for legitimate singles that went for doubles because they bogged down before arriving at a waiting fielder's hand, runners were thrown out from the outfield on hits that looked like homers and triples.

Played In Heavy Rain.

All the time a rain was stopping down upon the players, or clouds were swooping down upon them threatening a sudden drenching.

Tiger fans hoped for a downpour after the first half to end the game with a Tiger victory. Jupe Pluve was more kindly disposed to the Red Stockings, however, holding off his severe showers while the Sox accumulated enough runs to win.

Joe Wood had a hard day to work. The ball was wet constantly and much time was spent in drying it. Except in the first inning he pitched great ball. He hit McDermott, the first Tiger up and walked two others, Jones and Lonlon.

McDermott was buried stealing second, as Yaw went in for him. Crawford forced Jones and Veit and Sam made a pretty double steal.

Then Wood settled down, fanned the next man and was steady the rest of the game. He allowed the Tigers seven hits, but kept them scattered. In two innings the Tigers got hits; in four they went hitless. All of their hits were useless.

Willett Worked Well.

Edsse Willett worked in the box for the Tigers and worked well. Hits combined with errors put him to the bad towards the last of the game, however. The Sox took advantage of Detroit errors to make their hits mean runs. Nine hits were separated from the Boston Optoun.

Wood surpassed Willett in strikeout. Ten whiffs were recorded in Joe's favor. Tiger after Tiger failing to comprehend the "kid's" speed and curves.

In every inning but the third and fourth Wood fanned one or more batters and in these frames the Tigers went out one, two, three. Thus it can be seen that he it not been for his lack of control in the first innings, Jennings' men would have had little chance to view the sun.

In the second, fifth and ninth innings two men whirled unaffectively. Walter Johnson's rival had the Tigers on his sturdy hip.

Afeld there was such comedy, the jungle furnishing the greater part of it. Any errorless fielding went as brilliant today. The Tigers had to scratch their heads hardest for fielding adbis, four errors being charged to them.

Ogslaw was the worst offender. H committed only one, but it meant two runs Yerkes and Speaker had singled in succession to start the sixth. Then Lewis attempted a sacrifice bunt to Ogslaw, who

SPEAKER'S MOTHER WANTS SOX STAR TO QUIT GAME

BUT JOINS TEAM AND—WELL, SINCE HE'S A HERO PERHAPS IT'S ALL RIGHT

TRIS SPEAKER AND HIS MOTHER, WHO HAS JOINED THE RED SOX, PHOTOGRAPHED FOR THE SUNDAY AMERICAN

Tris Speaker and his mother, who is accompanying the Red Sox, photographed for the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

Mother of Red Sox Star Prefers Home with Her Son to the Limelight of the National Sport

WHEN the victorious Red Sox come home tomorrow the most important personage in the party will not be a ball player at all—but the mother of the most important baseball player of them all, the mother of Tris Speaker.

Mrs. Speaker comes because her son—Tris is only 23, and still a boy, although he is the "biggest" player in the best team in the American league, and perhaps in the world—has urged and urged her to spend her Summer days with him, and she has finally consented.

Although her son occupies one of the proudest positions in the greatest and most wholesome sport of them all, Tris Speaker's mother doesn't like baseball. Why? Because she would rather have her boy—her baby, she calls him—come home and live "like we used to live before he began to play."

The mother of the best ball player of them all never wanted Tris to go away from hime. She was actually horror-stricken when she herad that the Boston American baseball team had "bought him" for $800 four years ago.

"Buy My Son! Why That's Slavery!"

"Why, that's slavery!" she said. And she never would consent to his going until the whole system of baseball contracts was explained. Which was perfectly natural, for there are still thousands of grown-up, died-in-the-wool "fans" who imagine that the custom of purchasing releases is a species of slavery and who never can understand it at all.

And $800!

Imagine the feeling of any mother. Eight thousand million dollars would not nearly represent the value of a single hair in her son's head.

But they convinced Tris' mother or rather Tris convinced her, and she consented to sign the contract—he was eighteen, a minor, and could not enter into a baseball contract without her writen consent.

You could not buy that contract from Jimmy McAleer for $50,000 or any other price today. And in return for it, Speaker receives about $1000 a month, and every day he plays ball he is worth more. He'll get it, too.

Still Speaker's mother shakes her head!

It was the eighth inning Tuesday at Cleveland. The score stood three all and Jackson, the speed man of the Naps, was on second base. Griggs singled to centre and the game seemed sure. Then "Spoke" Speaker dashed in, grabbed the ball on the run and made a perfect throw to Catcher Cady, cutting off Jackson.

For a moment there was silence. Then suddenly appreciation surged like a wave over a thousand fans, and the stand rang with cheers for an alien player.

Just back of the plate sat a little elderly woman. Through the tumult she looked straight ahead and calmly smiled. When Speaker threw the ball, her white head nodded approvingly.

In the evening the white head pored over the sporting edition, and the little woman's finger traced out the record the day's plays, slowly, laboriously, one by one.

"They tell the story of a great player," said a young woman newspaper writer, "and he's your son. Aren't you pleased and proud?"

The little old woman's bright, blue eyes filled with tears. It was a moment before she answered.

"I am pleased with his success"—the words came slowly—"and proud of him always. But—he is my baby. I want him for myself—and he belongs to everybody.

"We have a quiet little home down in Texas. It's a very little home, with sunflowers in the back yard and morning-glories over the porch at the side. I want Tris to come there and live quietly, like we used to live before he began to play. I never wanted him to play, you know, but he was always set on it. Why I remember:

That First Sunday Game.

"It was Sunday morning. A little boy waved 'good-bye' to his mother as with a penny clutched in one chubby hand and a Sunday-school quarterly in the other, he set out for church. Four hours later he came home, minus the penny and quarterly. He was also minus cap and coat, one shirt-sleeve was slit from top to bottom, and blood was coloring a sock.

"I beat 'em, muvver" he was shouting, wrinkling his scratched and grimy face into a grin. "Two home runs and a single—I made 'em, an' we beat!"

"Well, you won't beat 'em again on Sunday, anyway," said Muvver. And forthwith she administered chastisement.

It was Summer at last, and the college boys had come home. With them had come from the Polytechnic Institute at Fort Worth, Outfielder Tris Speaker, known to "fans" as the most promising of college ball players. He was nineteen now, and had grown tall and manly. But to his mother he was still "Baby."

"I'm going to be a ball player," he told her again and again. "You and brother and sisters—all eight of them—can say what you like. It's for me—and I 'm it."

The grand stand at Waco, Texas, was filled to capacity, for it was the first day that Tris Speaker was to play, and he had many friends. In the front row was "Muvver," disapproving, but resigned. What the men out on the field were doing was incomprehensible to her. Some one hit the ball and ran, and sometimes the people who were watching shouted. But it didn't matter much what they did. Her baby was out there striving for the best, and with all her heart she was wishing it for him. And it was his, finally, for when the game was over "Speaker!" was the name the fans shouted.

The days of the minor league were over, and for four years the name "Speaker" had appeared on the roll of the Boston team. On this day in the early Spring the grand stand was filled, for matters were reaching a crisis in the league standings. And in the last inning it was found that Speaker had saved the game as he had saved many before it. Then it was that the "fans" affectionately dubbed him "Spoke" Speaker, for to him belonged the credit for the standing of the Boston team. He was a big ball player now, one of the biggest in the American League. And only a few years before he had been playing on the sand lots around Hubbard City, Texas.

He Could Do Anything

"I always knew he could do it," said the little white-haired woman Tuesday night. "He could do anything he set out to do. Why, when he was seventeen he managed an oil mill all by himself."

Her eyes glowed with pride as she went on reminiscently.

"He has been my baby all his life, but he has been my man, too. His father died when he was nine years old and Tris has taken care of me since then. He did all sorts of things when he was going to school—odd jobs that brought in a little and helped a lot.

"He was a smart boy, too, for he was only seventeen when he graduated from the Polytechnic Institute. He is handy with machinery, that's why I wanted him to be a mechanic.

"I tried to be interested when I saw he was bent on playing. Women don't go to the games out in Texas. But when he played I went to watch him, though I didn't know a home run from a foul fly.

"When he came East—well, I just had to come, too. I couldn't stay away from him a year.

"I know a little about the game, now. It comes to you if you watch it closely. But some of the mistakes I made at first were funny.

"I remember once in St. Louis, when Joe Wood, who was pitching, was hurt by a ball striking him on the wrist. Tris invited him to dinner that night, and I spoke about the accident, and asked who was injured.

"'It was Mr. Wood,' Tris said, and I laughed.

'I answered that I thought it was a player of the other side."

Mrs. Speaker's eyes twinkled as she told the story, and the little mournful droop of her lips was gone.

"I did other things worse than that," she confided, "but I won't tell about them for I don't like to be laughed at."

Half Your Vim

May Go to Waste Without an O-P-C

An O-P-C suspensory, with the average man, will double his vitality.

Every man who wants to keep at his best should wear an O-P-C.

There are countless men who lack endurance—lack poise and power—simply for want of an O-P-C.

A week will tell you what it means to you.

The O-P-C is the scientific suspensory, famous for 20 years. Our book tells why you need it—what it does. Write for it now.

All druggists guarantee you satisfaction with an O-P-C. No. 2, Lisle, 75c—No. 3, Silk, $1.00. Mailed direct from 43 W. Twenty-Fifth Street, Chicago, if your druggist will not supply you

Can You HONESTLY Say Your Tobacco NEVER "Bites"?

Tobacco bites when it burns too fast, and tobacco, like any other material, burns FASTER the DRYER it is.

There is only ONE way to take ALL the bite out of tobacco, and that way is to keep ALL the moisture and flavor.

The manufacturers that have been trying to make your tobacco CONVENIENT by "granulating" or "slicing" or "shredding" it have been doing so in spite of the fact that the ONLY way to keep the moisture and FLAVOR is to keep the tobacco in the "plug" form of compressed leaves protected by a NATURAL tobacco leaf wrapper.

The result of making tobacco CONVENIENT has been hundreds of MIXTURES and ARTIFICIAL flavors that are as far from the REAL tobacco taste as winter hay is from new mown grass.

But these prettily packed tobaccos ARE very CONVENIENT, and thousands of men enjoy them because they have NEVER smoked a REAL tobacco.

If you are one of these, you owe it to yourself to at least TRY the old-fashioned method of tobacco smoking.

Get a plug of Master Workman, take the minute that is necessary to whittle off a pipeful, and then judge for yourself whether you haven't discovered a smoke secret worth knowing.

BEVERLY YACHTS IN CLOSE FINISHES

Club Regatta Off Wing's Neck a Great Success; Girl Skippers a Feature.

BUZZARDS BAY, Aug. 10.—There were twenty-three boats started in the regatta of the Beverly Yacht Club [illegible] Wing's Neck [illegible]

[illegible]

There were six starters in the 21-foot class, which was sent out over course No. 10, a triangular course of 12¾ miles. The Skate got the start, followed by the Saracen, which was disqualified in the finish for starting ahead of the gun.

The Skate showed up finely on the first leg to Dry Ledge and on the reach to Scraggy Neck. The Foraminifer was a close second but had not enough speed to overhaul the leader.

The finishes between the Foraminifer, Saracen, Terrapin and Selwonk were very close and nearly all were bunched when they crossed the line.

In the sonder class the [illegible] were sent out over the same course as the 21-foot [illegible] did not make as good time by nearly three minutes. Again the Peg, Galen Stone's sonder of last season, headed the field all around, although driven pretty hard by the S[illegible]. There was a hard fight between the Saille VIII, the Heller [illegible] and the Seacon, both old rivals, but the Stackpole craft was a trifle fast for the Saille in the moderate breeze.

The Crane Class, which is creating much interest, especially among the ladies of the yachting circles, was sent out over the special course to Scraggy Neck and Bird Island buoys, a distance of eight miles. In this class there is much sport between the girl skippers, who are learning the art of seamanship fast.

Again Miss Pris[illegible] Crane sailed her Lestris to victory, finishing nearly two minutes ahead of the Austin boat, the Pioneer. Miss Crane, who is the daughter of the designer of this class, is keen to take chances with her trim craft, and every time she makes them count as a good calm. Miss Elizabeth Coolidge, with her Water Witch, and Nannie Flonberger, with her Pain, also sailed a good race, but could not touch the Lestris for speed. Young Joshua Crane, with his Charmion, tried to head the Nab[illegible], but was outsailed by two seconds.

Thorpe not only won the high jump, but won second place in the running broad jump and third place in the special invitation 110-metre high hurdle race.

He probably would have won a place in the 100-metre dash but in the first heat when leading at the 50-metres mark he slowed down and looked over his right [illegible] the rest of the field [illegible] Howe of the North Dorchester A. A. The 100-metre dash was the first event of the track and field sports to take place. Howard P. Drew, Springfield, winner of one of the semi-final heats in the 100-metre dash at Stockholm, but who was unable to compete in the final heat of that event because of an injury to his leg and Irving T. Howe, North Dorchester A. A. were on scratch in this event. The result of the first heat has already been told.

The second heat was won by S. A. Rice, running unattached, with J. E. Menzies of Brookline Gym., second. The third heat resulted in an easy victory for Drew, H. D. Jameson coming in second in the fast time of 11 1-5 seconds.

The final heat was closely fought all the way but Drew breasted the tape a couple of inches ahead of Jameson and Howe, respectively, in the fast time of 11 1-5 seconds.

Reidpath Beaten Out.

The 400-metre race found Charles Reidpath, Syracuse University, winner of the same event at the Olympic games, on scratch. He was troubled with a slightly strained leg and although he ran a very pretty race, had to be contented with third place.

F. W. Kelly of Maynard, with a handicap of 19 yards, and Francis P. O'Hara, B. A. A., with 11 yards, won first and second places.

The 800-metre run found another of the Olympic athletes in H. W. Holden, B. A. A., running from scratch, with J. M. Burke of Powder Point School.

This race was a heartbreaker because of the classy field and required the straining of every muscle on the part of the low mark men to overtake those ahead.

Burke and Holden had a close race over every inch of the course, but Burke nosed out a winner with Holden second and W. S. Ryan, B. A. A., third in 1.58 4-5 seconds.

Kelley Wins High Hurdles.

For the 1,500 metres run the best milers in New England answered the call of the clerk of course, the most prominent being Oscar F. Hedlund, another Olympic athlete and New England one mile champion, A. L. Donahue, Powder Point, Wm. McVicar, North Dorchester A. A., and J. A. Powers, P. A. A., set the pace in this race, and it was anybody's race with Powers leading and McVicar and Donahue alternating in second and third place, until the last hundred yards when Donahue drew away from McVicar and led him in by a couple of yards. Powers won in the very good time of 4.06 2-5 sec.

The 100-metre high hurdle race was an invitation affair, the competitors all being members of the American Olympic team. F. W. Kelley, Orange, California, winner of this event at Stockholm, was returned the winner with J. P. Nicholson, St. Louis, Mo., second and James Thorpe, Carlisle, third in 16 3-5 sec.

The last running event and the one that evoked the most enthusiasm was the 5,000-metres run. Among the entries in this event were the following Olympic Marathon runners: [illegible] Strobino, So. Pat[illegible] A. C.; Andrew Sockalexis, North Dorchester A. A.; Clarence DeMar, North Dorchester A. A., and Richard Piggott, North Dorchester A. A.

Joe Silva, B. A. A., soon took the lead, followed closely by Sockalexis and Saklad of the North Dorchester A. A.

CLARKE LEADS BIG FIELD AT WOLLASTON

Open Tourney Attracts Second Largest Entry List of Season.

One hundred and twenty-five golfers participated in the open tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair yesterday. Ninety-six of these players handed in cards of varying quality. With the exception of the Hatherly tournament of last Saturday's Wollaston meeting, yesterday was the greatest one-day tourna ment of the season.

An old member of the home club, Wellington Clarke, won first honors, playing in the nostrong and scoring a 75, which was not bettered throughout the day. Francis H. Long, A. G. Lockwood, C. M. Hart, W. Perkins, S. K. Sterne and others followed closely second to lowering Clarke's record. I failed perhaps because of the high wind which swept the links during the afternoon.

Mr. Clarke was out in 41, coming home in 34. His 2 at the fifteenth was a bit of good putting and at the third, thirteenth and sixteenth he took three's, putting particularly well. His card follows:

Out ..... 5 4 4 5 4 4 5 4 4—41
In ..... 4 4 4 5 4 4 4 3 5—38 79—11—68

H. B. Emerson of the Hatherly Golf Club won the first prize, playing 82 19 63. Many other high handicap men were well under 70 net, which showed the worth of the new system of handicapping which is in order throughout the

In the Class B, professional, Frank King of Denver won the first heat, and Johnny King of Newark the second. The third was not run. No time was taken. Albert Carlson of Providence won the elimination sweepstake from Freddy West, and Henry Webber of New Brunswick rode an exhibition mile in 4-4-5 seconds, about 10 seconds lower than the track time.

SWEENEY AND ZIMMERMAN RACE NECK AND NECK TO LEAD NATIONAL LEAGUE PILGRIM AND CUB IN GREAT BATTING DUEL FOR TITLE

	Games.	A. B.	R.	H.	Average.
Sweeney, Pilgrims	101	405	56	148	.365
Zimmerman, Chicago	97	382	65	142	.372

The above is the way the two rivals stood last night at the end of the second game of the Cubs-Pilgrims series.

BILL SWEENEY of the Pilgrims and "Heinie" Zimmerman of the Cubs are fighting a live battle at the South End park for first batting honors of the National League.

They are a few points apart, and their relative standing is likely to change daily.

It is one of the most interesting races seen in a long time in the old league, and, next to the quarrel between the Giants and Cubs over first place, furnishes a spectacle for the "fans" who follow the fortunes of the National.

It reached its climax last week when Sweeney first tied Zimmerman and then, by hitting five times in five times at bat, passed the man who had been in front for weeks.

The next day Sweeney did not hit at all, nor did Zimmerman. Zimmerman came to Boston with the Cubs, tied with Sweeney. Up to that time the fighting had been at long range. When the Cubs came to Boston, the battle became a face-to-face affair—or, rather, a bat-to-bat affair, with the advantage in favor of Zimmerman, because the Pilgrim pitchers do not measure up to the strength of the Cub pitchers, and the Pilgrim fielders do not class with the Cub fielders. They held their tie for a day, but yesterday Zimmerman passed Sweeney.

This, therefore, was not a fair test of their relative merits, but it was the real start of a combat which will excite died-in-the-wool "fans" to the end of the season. Neither Zimmerman nor Sweeney is likely to have those slumps which frequently occur to good batters, so they will likely fight it out to a finish.

This race furnishes an interesting light upon batting. Zimmerman and Sweeney are exponents, respectively, of two different systems. Zimmerman is a free, natural hitter. Sweeney is a brainy place hitter. Zimmerman bats with his hands, as it were, and Sweeney with his head.

Both have keen eyes. Zimmerman is a clouter; Sweeney a student. Sweeney is a natural hitter, too, but he has gradually grown out of the swinging style and now uses intelligence more than accident and directs his hitting.

Zimmerman hits at almost anything and clouts the ball, apparently, wherever it happens to go. Sweeney goes up to the plate, sizes up the pitcher, tries to work him and then, when he gets what he wants, usually places the ball about where he tries to place it.

Sweeney does not try for long hits, while Zimmerman does. If Sweeney thinks a long hit is most desirable and thinks that he can "get away with it," by attempts one; but usually he tries to place the ball just over the infield and, preferably, to the right side of the diamond, for that is the best way to advance base runners.

Zimmerman hits 'em any old place, trusting to Willie Keeler's idea—followed by the "late lamented" batting king, "Honus" Wagner—that "there won't be nobody there." And quite often there isn't.

Sweeney mixes up his style, too, so that he has the pitcher guessing, instead of letting the pitcher have him guessing.

Big Week of Tourneys on Links at the Various Clubs

Golf at the Essex County Club has taken on a different [illegible] since Herbert Ross, a professional of highest merit and authority on courses, took the superintendency of the links.

At last the prime desire has been to make the course a good test of golf, and [illegible] of the club. This desire [illegible] with the subsequent commission on golf, with land and money enough [illegible] long-looked-for links every year and bringing it nearer and nearer the ideal course.

New Addition to Course.

One notable addition to the course is the land in the vicinity of the first fairgreen to the left. The recent purchase of this has assured the added length desired for the fourth and fifth holes.

This property at present makes a corner of woods fringing the first hole fairway. By cutting down trees the green for the fourth hole may be placed on the clubhouse side of the brook, which runs [illegible] way to the first hole.

It is [illegible] the second shot to the fourth hole considerably more difficult, especially for anyone who does not get a good drive off the tee.

This facilitates the tee to the fifth hole being put across the brook so that drives [illegible] the [illegible] to the green [illegible] to drive to [illegible] the [illegible] is proposed to run [illegible] to the [illegible] to the [illegible] a pond above green, and to make a new [illegible] hole straight down the valley in line with the fifth hole, thus eliminating the steep climb up the hill.

Many Improvements Laid Out.

The present [illegible] has been the subject of much controversy. Professionals have passed their opinions on it, and Alex Campbell of the Country Club does not like the layout.

The green is at fault, for it is so laid that it is well nigh impossible to lay an approach put dead.

The rearrangement and new layout of the holes are the latest developments at Essex, only in part, however, of the many changes which have produced one of the most artistic as well as best golf courses in the country.

Studebaker "20" that toured from Miami to Montreal.

Ploughing Through a Florida Swamp

FISH WIGGLE IN THE WAKE OF CAR

Auto Splashes Through Florida Swamps With Water Over Running Board.

Firm in the belief that, in the very near future, the national government will see its way clear to give definite aid to the improvement of certain through lines of highway, many influential motorists in the Atlantic Coast States have enlisted under the banner of the International Highway Association to secure early attention for a route from Miami, Fla., to Montreal, Canada.

Originally it had been intended to explore the route with a party of four cars. This quartet left Miami together June 19, but found, ere the going as much as Palm Beach had been passed, heavy rains had flooded the Florida swamps and the hog holes were almost impassable to heavy, high-powered cars. Sixty three of them gave up the battle, one only continuing. This was a Studebaker "20," owned and driven by [illegible] J. Martin, a Miami real estate dealer.

Mr. Martin's car splashed along steadily. At times the water was above his running boards for miles at a time. Fish wiggled along in the wake of the car and alligators poked out their long snouts to watch the unusual sight. At times shell roads gave a pleasant variety, but not until Southern Georgia was reached did the going show permanent improvement.

Martin's Studebaker "20" went over the Blue Ridge of Southern Virginia in a downpour similar to that which came so near annihilating last year's Glidden tour, but emerged unscathed on the Shenandoah Pike, the "Road of a Thousand Toll Gates." Thence the route led through Philadelphia, New York, Albany and along Lake George and Lake Champlain to Plattsburg. The frontier was crossed near Rouses Point, from which the route led to Montreal over a fine new road built by the Canadian government.

The trip of 2,301 miles consumed nineteen running days, which could have been cut materially, had the roads been in even normal shape. Mrs. Martin and A. J. Sheldon of Miami were with Mr. Martin all the way. Two tire punctures caused the only delay for repairs and Mr. Martin's proudest boast is based on the fact that the entire trip was made with no extraneous help to the busy motor under the hood.

Mr. Martin, on starting his return trip, will motor by way of Detroit, Cincinnati and Atlanta.

NEW YORK OFFERS FORTUNE FOR RACE

Boillot and Winners of All Vanderbilt and Grand Prize Events Are Eligible.

An effort is being made to arrange a 500-mile match race between David Bruce-Brown, twice winner of the Grand Prize race, and Georges Boillot, winner of the last French Grand Prix, by the officials of the new Metropolitan Motor Speedway, which is now in course of construction on the Newark Meadows. The inducements are so alluring that the Frenchman, who will shortly receive the formal offer in France, can hardly afford to refuse. A prize of $25,000 is offered by the Speedway Association for the winner.

It is proposed to hold this event at a early date next season, but the match will not be confined merely to these two drivers. The race, with this pair as a nucleus, will be an invitation affair and all winners of Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races in this country will be eligible to compete. Winners of former French Grand Prix races, such as Lautenschlager, Szisz and Nazzaro, would be invited as well.

This means that such stars as Ralph Mulford, Harry Grant, the 1909 and 1910 winner; Louis Wagner, the daring Frenchman who won the 1906 Vanderbilt Cup race and the 1908 Grand Prize; Victor Hemery, the dashing winner of the 1905 Vanderbilt Cup, and George Heath, the amateur who won the first cup race held in America, should he desire to "come back." George Robertson, the 1908 winner, while one has retired permanently and probably would not compete. Joe Dawson and Ray Harroun, who won the 500-mile race this season and last respectively, would be invited. Dawson's eligibility depending on his being reinstated by the A. A. A. by that time.

Included in the list would be the winners of the Vanderbilt Cup and Grand Prize races next September, also the winner of the opening 500-mile race at the Metropolitan Motor Speedway next May.

Such a race would be a real battle of eight or ten real champions and a thriller from the word "Go."

AN AUTO DUEL.

Regal Roadster and Big Touring Car in Head-on Crash.

Duels have been pronounced relics of bygone days but here is one that bears the distinction of being strictly modern. The contestants were two motor cars, one a powerful six-cylinder touring car; the other a small two-passenger roadster.

It was shortly after midnight, the scene being on the Ocean Boulevard near Coney Island Creek, Brooklyn. The two-passenger Regal was coming from Coney Island when suddenly there appeared in view this mammoth touring car. Both cars were carrying their capacity at the time of the accident, and four people from the larger car had to receive medical attendance.

This larger model, which was the property of the New York Transportation Company, had to be taken to Manhattan on a heavy truck, while the smaller Regal returned to the city under its own power and apparently none the worse for the experience.

Public Have Good Idea of Auto Value

Matheson Expert Says that Dealer Has Got to Keep Faith.

"There is no article of any kind," so says L. W. Holt, factory representative of the Matheson Automobile Company of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., who is here for a short time in the interests of the company, "whether it be an article of general utility or something that is used for special purposes or on extraordinary occasions only, that will hold its place on the market unless it can make good.

"Competition in every field of industry and manufacture is so strong and the purchasing public so critical that natural law of the fittest will survive is practically applied to man-made articles.

"This is particularly true of the automobile. The automobile that does not come up to the standard created by the most reputable [illegible] in the country proved by [illegible] and severe tests and [illegible] by [illegible] guarantees, will fail to be [illegible]. In like manner the factory that does not keep faith with the dealer, even though it manufacture good motor cars, must suffer, because where there is no faith the honor of the maker, the first essential to success, mutual confidence, is wanting.

"The car that makes headway in the present fierce competition must have the qualities that in a special manner appeal to the public. The public today is conversant with all that concerns an automobile. The average prospective buyer can almost tell at a glance whether the automobile is worthy or not.

"These facts considered, and the added fact that this territory has been one of our good markets for four-cylinder cars since 1903, and our Silent Six since 1909, is one of the reasons why we established our factory branch at 644 Commonwealth avenue and put in a service station for the convenience of the owners of Matheson cars, of which there are many in New England. We believe that a service station and branch is a great asset, not only to ourselves, but principally to the man who buys an automobile at this time.

"We have learned from experience that the buyer of an automobile likes to buy direct from the factory branch, as he feels that in so doing, the factory, to a great extent, is in close touch and will give him better service than otherwise. We are striving to carry out this policy and have been rewarded by a good business throughout the season of 1912, with prospects for 1913 never better."

LOZIER REORGANIZED.

Henry M. Jewett of Paige-Detroit Co. Is New President.

Plans for the reorganization of the Lozier Motor Company of Detroit and Plattsburg, N. Y., were completed at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors in Detroit.

H. A. Lozier, president of the company, has resigned and has been succeeded by Harry M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company and a Lozier stockholder since the establishment of the company in Detroit. Raymond B. Fosdick, Commissioner of Accounts in New York City, has been elected to the vice-presidency of the company and will also fill the office of treasurer. E. P. Earle and H. A. Kahler, prominent financiers of New York, were made members of the Board of Directors.

Proper Washing of Auto Is Important

Soaps That Contain Alkali Will Eventually Eat Off Varnish.

The proper washing of automobile bodies is a very important work and one which has been almost entirely overlooked in many sections of the country, so far as giving instructions to chauffeurs as to how this work should be done. It is safe to say that the operation of washing a car is least understood of all work in car maintenance.

The use of soap in washing an automobile is unnecessary and ill advised where the washer thoroughly understands his business. It is common practice to adopt the easiest method of removing dirt. The easiest method is to purchase a good strong soap. This, with the use of water, at times almost hot, removes the dirt in the easiest manner. It has the drawback, however, of removing the varnish. One washing of this character will not remove the varnish, but a dozen washings will dull it and a few months will remove it, so far as the lustre is concerned.

Best Castile Recommended.

The use of the best imported castile is recommended. Laundry and toilet soaps are to be avoided. Automobile soaps, some good, some bad, are made expressly for washing cars. They are made in both the soft and the hard soap variety. The proper soap, principal ingredients of which are pure potash and oil, will properly clean a car, and will have no bad effect on the lustre of the car. Soap that contains alkali, either sodium or potassium hydrate or sodium carbonate or potassium carbonate, are naturally bad for varnish.

The temperature of the water used is most important. Hot or even warm water should not be used; neither should extremely cold water be used. Proper temperature is from 60 to 70 degrees Fahr. Where a hose is used, care should be taken that the force of the water is only sufficient to carry the stream six or eight inches beyond the end of the hose. The use of a fast running stream drives the grit, dust and dirt into the varnish. The use of the sponge and chamois following picks up the grit and scratches result. In selecting sponges be careful to select the best and only those guaranteed free from grit and particles of shell.

Proper Way to Wash.

Properly to wash a car with soap, first dissolve in a pail of water sufficient soap to make a good suds. Then in the washing operation use the suds, sopping it on from the sponge instead of rubbing the soap on a wet sponge, or, what is worse, rubbing it on the surface of the car. Before applying the suds the car should be rinsed thoroughly with water, using a gentle stream.

This is important, as all particles of grit and dirt must be removed from the surface before applying the sponge. Apply the suds liberally where the parts are dirty, then rinse off with clear water and a fresh sponge, flowing the water below the sponge to insure that any grit and dirt that may be left on the surface is washed away before the sponge has a chance to pick it up and scratch the surface. After the final sponging the surface should be dried with a clean, wet chamois.

In washing the chassis, the same method is in order, except that it may be necessary to use a stronger suds. Where cars are in use over oily or muddy roads frequent washing is necessary, and this washing should be done as soon as possible after the car leaves the road, as when the oil or mud dries on the car it is very difficult to remove. It will damage the varnish, it being impossible under certain oil and mud conditions to remove all the stains. In this connection it is important that neither the bonnet nor radiator is washed while it is hot, as to do so will [illegible] lustre, ruining it in a very short time.

Touring in Canada.

Motorists going into Canada must be careful to arrange their customs bonds and report at the frontier posts of both countries whenever they cross the border. There is a controversy at present between agents for American and foreign made cars doing business in Canada, and charges of smuggling have been made to the Canadian and the U. S. Customs officials. They are in consequence, keeping a close surveillance on cars crossing the border.

Motorists Study The Tire Problem

Radical Change in Their Attitude Towards This Equipment Brings Results.

"It used to be the contention of expert repair men," says J. M. Gilbert, General Manager of the United States Tire Company, "that about fifty percent of the pneumatic tires consigned to a final resting place on the junk-heap were not actually worn out but had succumbed to the deteriorating influences of abuse or neglect, perhaps both.

"Within the past two years a very radical change in the attitude of motorists toward their tires has been noticeable. Tires no longer are the last thought of the driver. They are getting the attention they deserve by virtue of their importance in car equipment and the expense to tire maintenance.

"The result is that, whereas, a few years ago half of the money expended for tires was wantonly wasted, the percentage of waste at this time is decidedly less."

TO DOUBLE OUTPUT.

Mitchell Agents Are Enthusiastic Over 1913 Models.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings ever held by the distributors of the Mitchell car has just been closed, and the representatives go back to their several homes firm in the belief that they will easily double their sales with the new models. So strong was this assurance that the company has already issued the shop orders doubling the output of 1912.

Every section of the United States and Canada was represented in the gathering of these 150 distributors, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia and from Maine to California.

The policy of the company is "quality and then quantity." They have always believed it better to build a thousand good machines than 10,000 which would be only ordinary as to quality.

Nova Scotia Roads Are in Good Shape

Tourist Made 31 Miles an Hour in "Land of Evangeline."

Those who wish to tour through the "land of Evangeline," which has proved very popular this year, will find the roads in excellent shape, according to the latest report from the Nova Scotia representative of The Touring Club of America on an inspection tour. [illegible] was able to average thirty-one miles an hour between Digby and Yarmouth, which covers the most delightful part of the Peninsula, known as "French Coast."

This would indicate very excellent dirt roads. He says there is one bad spot between Windsor and Halifax, about ten miles, where speed of twelve miles an hour is necessary. The trip from Halifax to St. John can easily be made in a day and a half, a distance of a little less than 300 miles; the roads will be found good, except for about thirteen miles, through the mountains.

First Warren Car.

Wishing to learn the location of the first Warren [illegible] the work it was doing, Lucius J. Wilson, vice president and general manager of the Warren Motor Car Co., of Detroit, wrote to the Aschaf Motor Car Co. of New Orleans, La., original purchasers of the [illegible] and it was learned that the car was still in the service for which it was sold—that of trailing missing convicts in the territory surrounding New Orleans.

R-C-H Has Big Foreign Shipment

Ship One-Fifth of Cars Sent Abroad From Detroit in Six Months.

During the first six months of 1912, 2,208 automobiles were shipped from Detroit to points outside the United States, according to figures recently compiled by the Detroit Board of Commerce. Of these 502, or over 22 per cent, were R-C-H cars going to all parts of the world.

These figures are remarkable in view of the fact that the R-C-H has been on the market but nine months. What makes it even more remarkable is the fact that in this period was practically the first six months of R-C-H production, yet in that time the corporation shipped one-fifth of all the cars that went abroad from Detroit, the greatest automobile producing city.

Farm and Ranch Tour.

Frank J. Mooney, advertising manager of the Hupp Motor Car Company, has just returned from Texas where he participated in the "Farm and Ranch" tour of 750 miles from Dallas to San Antonio and return for the Holland trophy. There were three Hupmobiles in the tour, one of which, a 32-horsepower touring car, finished with a perfect score. A second car, one of the 20-horsepower models, did 400 miles with one penalty [illegible] quit on account of a damaged magneto. The third was the official press car, in which Mr. Mooney and Sales Representative James O. Harris made the trip.

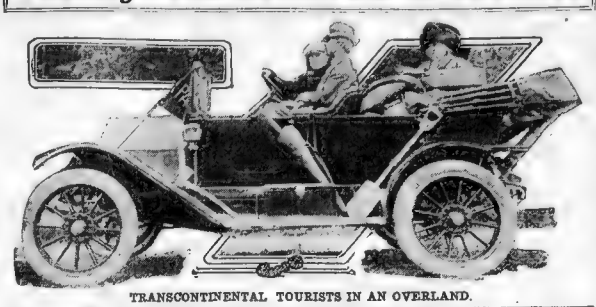
Touring From California to the Hub



TRANSCONTINENTAL TOURISTS IN AN OVERLAND.

TOURING ACROSS COUNTRY TO HUB

Plunging in mud, wallowing through sand of the deserts, climbing mountains, fording streams and overcoming other obstacles, a thirty-horsepower Model 59 Overland touring car is now wending its way toward Boston, having left Santa Barbara, Cal., on May 21.

Dr A F Binstead and wife of Wheeling, W. Va., who are making the transcontinental trip, are those type of democratic Southerners who love to "out o'doors" it and who believe in long-distance touring as the greatest of medicines.

Dr Binstead is not endeavoring to make any records, except to capture all the fresh air, pine and hemlock essence and scenery that lay along the route. In fact, the trip is being made by short daily trips, "and in fact by pigeon's own words, "We are touring as well tourists should tour—going fast enough to get ahead, but not too fast to see something along the way."

The tourists, after leaving Santa Barbara, turned their car toward the old "forty-niners" overland trail, passing through Nevada, Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio.

Dr Binstead stopped in Toledo to inspect the manufacturing plants of the Willys-Overland Company. He will carry from Toledo cards for the townsfolk of West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The trip is up to a record as their is every reason to find fault with the car and that it is such as if ever, that a thirty horsepower machine has ever made a transcontinental trip.

NOVEL TIRE PLAN.

Bonus to Be Given Chauffeurs to Keep Down Tire Expense.

No matter how skillfully an automobile tire is built, and regardless of the excellence of the materials that enter into it, there is often a great variance in the results obtained with the one make of tires by different drivers of similar cars, under circumstances which are closely parallel," says J. C. Matlack of the company that makes Apex tires. "This condition it is logical to charge to the personal equation of the driver and to assume that the majority of tire troubles may be prevented by caution in handling the car.

"It has been suggested by several owners that it would be interesting to note the effect on the life of tires if a general movement on the part of owners to put in operation a system of bonuses paid to their chauffeurs for good tire performances. It might be arranged so as to allow the drivers a million tire-miles more than the tires making the drivers responsible for the good condition of the tires and allowing such one to retain for himself anything he could save out of the amount allowed to him annually."

OVERLAND MUSICIANS.

Band Composed of Auto Makers Have Long Trip.

With twenty-five cities on their itinerary visited, the forty-two piece brass band of the Willys-Overland Company of Toledo, Ohio has demonstrated that factory workers, who, six days of every week in the year are engaged in building automobiles, can make themselves prominent in strictly high class music, a contention which has long been combatted by musical critics the country over.

The band started on a vacation tour of one month as guests of John N Willys, president and owner of Toledo plant, June 12. On their return, Friday, they had visited twenty-five of the principal cities of the West. The route taken them through twenty States and over 9,000 miles of railways. In every city visited, record breaking crowds have turned out to their concerts in the municipal parks and the audiences were liberal in their appreciation.

NEW FISK PLANT.

Rubber Company Will Double Factory Capacity.

The Fisk Rubber Company are making extensive additions to their plant in Chicopee Falls in order to take care of the increased demand for automobile tires, tubes and bicycle tires.

The contracts have been let to the Fred T. Ley Company of Springfield for two buildings—the building 250 feet long, ninety feet wide, six stories and basement. Another building 200 feet long, sixty feet wide, four stories and basement. Necessary rubber machinery, boilers and engine for the power plant are to be installed which will increase the present capacity about 50 per cent. This extra capacity will necessitate the employment of 600 or 700 more workmen.

Buildings are to be completed and machinery installed by November 1, 1912.

POLICE TRAPS.

The Automobile Legal Association announces that the police are to put traps in wait for the following places.

CHELSEA—The Massachusetts Highway Association has approval of the following regulation made by the Board of Aldermen of the City of Chelsea: Between the hours of 6 a. m. and 12 p. m., all vehicles, including motor vehicles, travelling in an easterly direction in Chelsea square between Williams street and Cross street, shall pass to the south of the parks therein, and when travelling in an easterly direction on Broadway between Cross street and Bellingham street shall pass on the southerly side thereof. Between the hours of 6 a. m. and 12 p. m., all vehicles, including motor vehicles, travelling a westerly direction on Broadway between Bellingham street and Cross street, shall pass on the northerly side thereof and when travelling in a westerly direction in Chelsea square between Cross street and Williams street, shall pass to the north of the parks therein. Any person violating any of the provisions of these regulations shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty dollars for each offence.

WINTHROP—Several motorists have been summoned into court for a violation of the automobile laws, especially for overspeeding on Washington avenue and on Bennington street. Several have also been summoned into court for not sounding down and giving a timely signal upon approaching a corner where the operator's view of the road traffic is obstructed.

* * *

HINGHAM—Local police are constantly working a trap at the top of Old Colony Hill where there is a curve obstructing the operator's view for a very short distance. The officers insist that motorists must slow down to 8 or 10 miles an hour and blow their horns at this place. In going from Quincy to Nantasket the town of Hingham may very easily be avoided by taking right at North Weymouth and then left at Weymouth.

* * *

QUINCY—The police have erected large signs at the foot of the Adams street hill in going from Quincy to Milton warning motorists not to use the muffler cut-out in going up that hill, especially in the third zone, but notwithstanding the signs which have been conspicuously placed, several have been summoned to court and fined for a violation of this law and the police claim that they will continue to prosecute until the practice ceases.

* * *

ABINGTON—The police are working a trap between Brockton avenue and Treadwell's brook, in the centre of the town. Keep down to 15 miles per hour and blow horn at all intersecting streets where the view is obstructed until well out of the centre of the town.

* * *

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The authorities of Providence are still prosecuting motorists who exceed 15 miles per hour in the thickly settled sections of the city, frequently changing their traps. In order to avoid trouble, it will be necessary to operate below 15 miles per hour and to avoid violation of the street traffic regulations which are enforced and which are similar to those in other States.

Going to Put a Stop to Jersey Speeding

The Hon. Joh H. Lippincott, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, Trenton, N. J., is authority for the statement that a good deal of feeling has been engendered throughout the State, particularly in the rural districts, on account of the increase in violations of the Speed Law since the reciprocity bill went into effect.

Speed traps have been set at numerous points in southern New Jersey, and there is considerable talk of a serious attempt to repeal the reciprocity act in the next Legislature.

Such a course would be most regretable, and it is to be hoped that visiting motorists will use discretion, especially as far as speed requirements are concerned.

Tyngsboro Detour.

The notice which A. L. A. gave concerning the detour made necessary to go from Lowell to Nashua because of the repairs to the Tyngsboro Bridge can be improved upon as follows:

Go out on Princeton street, turn right on Wilder, left on Westford, left on Nichols, right on Middlesex street, past the railroad station and one-half mile beyond bear right following the river through Tyngsboro to Nashua.

MANY STAR PILOTS TO RACE AT ELGIN

Light Car Race Also Added, Making Five Events to Be Decided.

Speed fans who attend the Elgin road races this month will get more thrills for their money than ever before in the history of the Illinois speed carnival. Where four events were run in 1910 and 1911, five will be run on August 30 and 31, the promoters Monday deciding to add a race for cars under 2.40 cubic inches displacement to the program originally adopted.

The addition of the new event will run the first day in connection with the contests for the Aurora and Illinois trophies. It will be 96 miles in length and $500 will be hung up in cash prizes, $300 to be awarded the winning car and $200 to the driver who crosses the tape second. Four entries have already been assured—two Studebaker "20s" to be driven by Bob Evans and Jack Tower and two Herreshoffs to be nominated by the manager of the Chicago branch, W Wordingham.

The free-for-all and Elgin National trophy race, to be run simultaneously the second day of the meeting, promises to be an international battle for speed supremacy. Three nations are already represented in the list of entries—Italy, by Bruce-Brown's Fiat; Germany by Bergdoll's Benz, and America by Mulford's Knox and Hughes' Mercer cars. It is almost certain that Lozier will be on hand with two Peugeots, one to be driven by George Boillot, winner of the grand prix.

The management hope to secure the entries of Ned Whalen, who has a National; John DePalma, Ralph's brother, who is piloting a Fiat; Joe Nikrent and Eddie Hearne, stars of the Case team; Fred Duesenberg, designer of the Mason; and George Clark, who is barnstorming with a Mercer.

Ralph DePalma is now on the Atlantic coast and will arrive at New York any day. He is bringing back to America with him a powerful Mercedes which he purchased from the German manufacturer. There is not the slightest doubt but that he will drive at Elgin. Before he left to compete in the French Grand Prix, he announced that he would enter the Kane County speed carnival if nonstock car races were scheduled.

Caleb Bragg, who ranks as an "idle rich" with Bruce-Brown, Bergdoll, Whitbart and the other plutocrats of the game, is also a possible starter at Elgin.

EMPHASIS ON QUALITY.

Jackson 1913 Models Will Furnish a Surprise.

The Jackson Automobile Company is about to make a detailed announcement of its 1913 line of motor cars. There is an especial interest in the news the Jackson people will have to offer, as it is understood they are departing somewhat from conventional policy and will offer their friends a few surprises.

The innovations will not be in the nature of mechanical freaks or fancies, rather will the emphasis be placed upon quality, comfort, motiness, easy riding and a very complete equipment. The purpose has been briefly, to provide at medium prices the attributes that are commonly associated with the cars of the highest price.

The motor car owner wants his comfort; he also appreciates a motor that runs silently. To secure these features, along with strength, power and durability, has been the problem the Jackson people have been working on, a problem that involves many matters, from those purely technical and mechanical, to those of design and luxurious external equipment.

REPAIRING PUNCTURES.

Expert Advice Given by a Tire Expert.

When a tube is punctured, the first things to do is to find out if the puncture is in one wall of the tube only, or if both walls are perforated. Next a careful examination should be made to determine that no part of the article which caused the puncture has lodged inside the tube.

"Then select a rod para patch," says a recent Michelin instruction book, "considerably larger on all sides than the injury to be repaired and clean the patch carefully on its flat or unbeveled side with emery paper. Now lay the tube on a convenient flat surface, such as tot, dash or step, and with emery paper clean a space around the puncture slightly larger than the patch to be used. Coat both the cleaned surfaces with cement and after this has dried apply a second coat. In about ten minutes who the surfaces are still 'tacky' press the patch firmly in place taking care that the edges do not curl. If the patch is bevel-edged little difficulty will be experienced. Now tap the patch lightly all over its surface with some round, smooth object like the end of a tool handle. If done carefully this will exclude every particle of air and the cemented surfaces will adhere perfectly. Put a smooth flat-surfaced weight on the patch and leave the repair thus as long as practicable."

Stevens-Duryea

Announcement—The C-Six

An Entirely New Model

For nearly a Quarter-Century the Stevens-Duryea has exercised a distinguished leadership in the motor-world. We tell you below what this leadership is founded upon and how it is carried forward by the new Model C-Six into a leadership still broader and of vital interest to you.

It is founded upon the closest study of and devotion to the interests of the motoring public. We studied the needs of motorists—not merely their demands—and thus discovered and applied the fundamental and vital principles, known as Stevens-Duryea.

Up to this time our leadership has been mostly mechanical, and the results, in comparison with other fine cars, have been: more power delivered to the rear wheels; less strain on mechanism; greater comfort of passengers; less wear on tires; greater value of the car when resold.

But we have been studying still more deeply into the needs of motorists. We tried to think of a quieter car than had ever been built; smoother; more luxurious; with a new idea of comfort; and a new idea of beauty, bringing hood, chassis and body together in one harmonious unit.

We have accomplished all these things in the new MODEL C-SIX—and in harmony with Stevens-Duryea principles that we know to be right.

The New Quietness and smoothness have been obtained by an infinite number of improvements in detail of design, construction and machining, in the motor and its allied members. Easy care and uninterrupted service are ensured by the compactness and with even greater accessibility of all operating parts. Easy control of the car, with precision-instruments conveniently placed, offer confidence, safety, and knowledge of what the car is doing.

The New Kind of Comfort is obtained by a design of spring suspension that dampens the recoil effect of passing over an obstruction. To preserve perfect balance and prevent exaggerated lurching, the six-cylinder Unit Power Plant is mounted on a flexible three-point support. No sway or roll is communicated to passengers, who rest in an easy and comfortable position in a wealth of depth of upholstery with abundance of room. The patented adjustable rear seat in the tonneau—which may be raised, lowered, carried forward or backward—is instantly appreciated by those who have felt the strain of long tours in seats that do not fit the individual. Protection is afforded by a windshield which is made a part of the body, does not rattle and may be so adjusted as to thoroughly ventilate the driver's compartment. The top, when up, attaches firmly to this windshield without a gap, and eliminates the usual auxiliary supports of top and windshield. The doors are very wide. Such complete provisions for comfort have never before been offered to the motoring public.

The New Harmony of Design brings the chassis, hood, and body together in one beautiful unit. The hood rises and widens gradually as it extends rearward, its lines merging at the windshield with those of the body and being carried from this point in graceful curves to the rear. The effect of these lines is not interrupted by breaks in the upper rail, which, in the open cars, is continuously upholstered for the entire length. The mud-guards and aprons are rounded to give better protection and harmonize with the lines of the body. This original conception will instantly be recognized as the body design of the future.

SENATE DISCUSSES NATIONAL ROADS

Federal Aid Would Cost More Than Panama Canal, Says Lodge.

It is evident that there is a constantly growing [illegible] federal government before long should concern itself with the construction of trunk line roads thus [illegible] more convenient [illegible] interstate travel which, according to the American Automobile Ass[illegible] a greater at the [illegible] since [illegible] here.

It can [illegible] the money and construct the [illegible] or it can aid, stimulate and [illegible] to the local authorities [illegible] of road construction and improvement.

Senator Heyburn of Idaho believes "When the Government enters upon this class of work it should be for the construction of roads up to the standard of the highest use, not all at one time, but continuously, and gradually; not roads one part of which would be worn out before the other was constructed, but a system of progressive construction that would result within a reasonable time in a system of permanent good roads."

Senator W[illegible] of Mississippi is a contender for [illegible] construction. Said he: "You must make [illegible] road good, then you must make a [illegible] and then a [illegible] and then a fo[illegible] must be some scheme where [illegible] be done with fairness to [illegible] and the several sections of the country."

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts contends: "If we [illegible] upon the policy of federal [illegible] involve an expenditure of more [illegible] than the Panama Canal cost, and it ought to be done only after most careful consideration and on a broad, well understood, well arranged plan, so that for the millions expended we may get value in the return we desire in good roads."

OLD AUTO LORE

Early Impressions of Motor Cars Are Interesting.

Discussing old automobile lore with a group of "old timers" the other day, General Manager M. J. Hammers of the Abbott Motor Company said:

"It is an interesting diversion to me to search through the archives of past history and invention to get the early ideas and impressions of people and compare with the thought and trend of today.

"For instance, to read in old magazines and newspapers the first description of the steam boat or locomotive. The recent reading of a lengthy article that appeared in a leading monthly back in the 90's, describing and foretelling the future of the phonograph, proved a great amusement, but was eclipsed by a discovery made one day last week in looking over an exhaustive volume on 'Automobile Law' published in 1909 by a member of the St. Louis bar.

"The paragraph was headed 'Characteristics of the Automobile Law,' which one might think was written a century ago: 'In itself the automobile is harmless and characterless. It is only when human agency intervenes that it assumes characteristics peculiarly its own. It is capable of being driven at a high rate of speed; it is heavy, powerful, fast and generally noisy; its shape is unusual; it is propelled by a power within itself, and produces a puffing noise when in motion, and, if carelessly handled, may become as terrifying as it is dangerous. On account of its great weight and strength, it is capable in collision with an ordinary vehicle of smashing it without serious injury to itself.'

"This definition is hardly satisfactory to Detroit motorists, and it is safe to assume that the author is a more profound student of Grecian mythology than of the mechanical features of the automobile."

Horns Easy to Fix.

There is nothing so pardonable in the motorists as the habit of blowing his own horn—at the proper time. Horns that should blow and refuse to blow, it appears, can usually be made to blow with a very little simple tinkering. About seventy-five per cent of the horns which are sent back to their makers as totally incapacitated for further duty are fixed with a small screwdriver and a few drops of oil.

Lauth-Juergen Has Big Service Station

It Is Completely Equipped with Full Line of Truck Parts.

Manager Harmon has had [illegible] of success in introducing the Lauth-Juergen truck to a number of express companies, especially those that have [illegible] hauls and who have given up shipping by freight and are using the motor truck altogether.

"We have disposed of a number of trucks to transportation companies in the past month," says Mr. Harmon, "and we are constantly being besieged for data on the cost of motor truck transportation by merchants interested in the new method of saving time and money by using the commercial motor truck.

"We have just delivered a fleet of trucks to the People's Express Company, operating along the North Shore from Boston to Newburyport and Amesbury. The equipment consists of three three-ton trucks and one heavy duty five-ton truck. With this fleet of fast-moving and reliable power wagons the express company has discarded the railroad altogether. Thus only handling of the goods is necessary until they reach the destination, thereby saving the time of loading and unloading at the railroad terminals in Boston and at whatever point along the route that the goods were being shipped."

The Lauth-Juergen line of trucks include models of one, two, three, five, seven and ten-ton capacity.

BUY STUDEBAKER PLANT.

Havers Motor Car Co. Get Port Huron Factory.

Negotiations have just been completed for the purchase of the immense E. M. F.-Studebaker plant at Port Huron, Mich., by the Havers Motor Car Company, exclusive builders of moderate priced six-cylinder cars. The Havers Company will take immediate possession and push their plans for a greatly increased output for 1913 made possible by the large increase in factory facilities.

A. J. Murphy, general manager of the Havers Motor Car Company, says: "The acquisition of the E. M. F.-Studebaker plant is but one step in the carrying out of plans which our company has had under consideration for some time. The Havers 'Six' has made good in every sense of the word, under all possible conditions, and our faith in the six-cylinder as the car of the future which we put to the test when we were the first to place on the market a moderate priced six-cylinder car has been fully justified."

Making Ready for Grand Prize Race

Milwaukee to Spend $25,000 on Course for Big Automobile Meet.

The course over which the Vanderbilt Cup, Grand Prize, Pabst Trophy and Wisconsin Trophy events are to be run is being improved at a cost of more than $25,000, and the roads will be in great condition in September and drivers and others who have seen the 8.2-mile circuit declare it to be superb. It lies in one of Milwaukee's most attractive and accessible city limit districts.

More than 200 men already are rushing the work of fitting the road bed. Two of the largest and most effective road grading machines that could be procured are at work, also two sixty horsepower traction engines. On August 1 [illegible] was increased to more than 350 [illegible] machinery will be brought into use as needed.

The roads are the best of the macadam type. For the races they will be graded perfectly to a width of thirty feet for the entire distance of the course. To the macadam surface will be added three inches of No. 2 rock and two inches of crushed stone screenings. The whole will be surfaced by the application of a special grade of oil about seventy per cent. asphalt. The curves will be made safe and wide, the turn from Burleigh onto South Fond du Lac road having a sweep of more than seventy-five feet. Five concrete bridges and fourteen concrete culverts will be constructed.

LIGHTING PROBLEMS.

Electric Systems on Autos Are Hard to Adjust.

The use of electric lighting systems on motor cars was the occasion of several new problems, solutions of which were necessary before the highest efficiency could be attained. The most important of these was, of course, to find an entirely satisfactory method of adjusting the lights.

This difficulty has been overcome by The Locomobile Company of America, who have recently erected a specially constructed dark room. Heretofore, it was found to be impossible to properly set lamps except at night and only then when atmospheric conditions were favorable, but under the new method absolutely accurate adjustments can be made at any time.

To the uninitiated the matter of adjusting the lights may seem a very simple one, but such is not the case, as there are several points to be accurately determined: First, that the lights are in focus; second, that they strike the road at the right distance from the car; third, that they strike the road at the right angle from the car.

These points are of far more importance in connection with electric lamps than with those formerly used, for if the electric light is out of focus, black rings and shadows will appear. While these rings and shadows may not show clearly as such, the lamps would be classed as being of poor construction, when as a matter of fact, the only difference was in focusing.

Should the rays strike too close to the car the range is cut down and again the lamps would be considered as inferior when the real trouble lay in the fact that the angle of the lamp was wrong in a vertical position.

Pathfinder Car Completes 4,000-Mile Trip at Seattle.

The appropriately named Pathfinder has traversed some of the most strenuous highways on the continent on the first of its remarkable series of three transcontinental trips to be made this season. But to all appearances the car is just as sturdy and strong as the day it rolled through Central Park, New York city, nearly four months ago.

Want Motor Ills Cured Too Quickly

This Accounts for Much of the Slighted Work Done in Garages.

Why the automobile owner should be in such a hurry to replace or substitute a part is difficult to understand. The man who drives a team will take all sorts of time to doctor one of his horses, but if his automobile gets sick he wants it cured on the spot. This accounts for much of the slighted work that is done in the garages.

The repairmen are not to blame—at least not in every case. They are required to rush the work—to have it done on the minute, and not given time to do a finished job. Likewise they are hurried in the matter of diagnosing trouble, frequently reaching the wrong conclusion.

A neighbor, who owned a good car suddenly concluded that he would get better results—more power and speed—either of which were needed in any greater quantity than he had—by putting in a bigger motor. The factory, or makers of the car advised him not to make the change. But he knew more than they about it. Anyhow, he could convert the old motor into a wood-saw power plant. So he made the change, at an expense of three hundred dollars. As a result he had a big, poorly balanced, sluggish car that gave very poor service. In the end he replaced the original motor, and converted the new engine into a wood-saw. This man will have to saw wood a long time to pay for his experience.

Motor cars of the last few years are so nearly perfect, mechanically, that the troubles are nearly always of a minor nature—just little matters of adjustment. These troubles require a small measure of patience to locate and remedy. And it is seldom that they require more. To conclude that the coil or the carbureter must be removed and replaced with another; that the magneto is faulty and should be taken out, is merely to invite much greater trouble and a lot of useless expense.

Mensor Quits Boxing for Diamond Career

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 10.—Midget Mensor, who played around California in the days of the outlaws, has broken into the National League like a young comet out of a clear sky.

Mensor's work with Nick Williams in the Northwest League was so brilliant that a Pittsburgh scout came along last month and offered him a fancy figure for the Oakland boy. Nick closed the deal and Mensor reported to the Pirates and was put in the game at once.

Although an infielder by trade, Fred Clarke stuck the youngster in right field. In a game in Brooklyn, recently, Mensor got a double, a triple and a single.

Mensor is no bigger than a drop of water, but the Northern critics give him credit for being a wonderful little artist. His departure is said to have materially weakened the Portland club. Before Mensor became a diamond star he was something of a prize fighter. The Oakland [illegible] used to give up their good money to see him spar in the short bouts over there, and he was quite clever. If Mensor had a few pounds more weight his chances of becoming a major league star would be improved. The vast majority of the players up there are large athletes, but Mensor may get away with it, small as he is. Some have.

FAVORS UNDERSLUNG.

"The sum total effect accomplished by the United States manufacturers who have adopted underslung construction," says a British expert in a recent issue of the English journal, the Autocar, "is to lower the centre of gravity and thus prevent overturning.

"This advantage is especially noticeable in running up a winding hill or fairly steep gradient. Frequently there are hill of this nature, with corners clear enough as regards vision to take quite fast, but sharp enough to be distinctly awkward to negotiate. With the underslung the only limiting factor in cornering would appear to be the tires.

"The car under my observation in a recent three-day test was an underslung roadster exported from the United States by the Regal Motor Car Company. Starting in the heart of the London traffic after a preliminary couple of hundred yards on the second speed just to see that the engine was running as it ought to, the top speed was put in and the rest of the journey across London was accomplished entirely on the direct gear."

First of Overland 1913 Models Here

Connell & McKone Have Model 69-T on Exhibition in Salesrooms.

Connell & McKone, who handle the Overland line in this city, have received their first 1913 car, which is now on exhibition in their salesrooms at 555 Boylston street. It is a five-passenger car and is known as Model 69-T.

This is a popular-priced car that the Overland folks are putting on the market this year, and which they anticipate will be a big seller because of the value given for the money. In the past this car has been very popular.

In the 1913 model the wheel base has been lengthened to 110 inches. There has been a big improvement made on the brakes and Timken bearings are used throughout. The trimmings are of nickel and the car is fully equipped with top, wind shield, Warner speedometer and Prest-O-Lite tank.

The Boston distributors of this car are very enthusiastic over it, and although it has been on exhibition in Boston but one day a number of enthusiastic motorists have called at their salesrooms to examine it.

CONTROL BOARD ON STEERING COLUMN

Starting, Ignition, Lighting and Carburetor Control Within Easy Reach of Hand.

In response to the popular demand for a smaller six-cylinder Packard, a rakish, five-passenger consort to the "48" for 1913 has been produced by the Packard Motor Car Company. This car, known as the "38," has been developed step by step with the other six-cylinder Packards, but its manufacture has been postponed until the present season because of the pressing market for its larger prototypes.

The features most likely to attract immediate attention are the left drive and control, the positive electric self-starter and electric lighting system and the new control board, invented by H. B. Joy, president of the Packard Company. By means of this last named device, starting, ignition, lighting and carburetor controls are on the steering column within reach of the driver's hands.

The six-cylinder motor is of the L-head type, with a bore of four inches and a comparatively long stroke of five and a half inches. All valves are enclosed, making a notably quiet engine. Measured by the A. L. A. M. standard, the motor is rated at thirty-eight, but the brake test shows it will develop sixty horsepower. The wheelbase of the touring car is 134 inches, of the phaeton 138, of the runabout $115\frac{1}{2}$ inches. This car will turn around in a street forty-one feet six inches wide.

Among the features which have strongest appeal to the cross-country tourist, is ease of riding, due to the sensitive three-quarter scroll elliptic springs and the unusually deep upholstery.

The line of bodies for the "38" consists of five-passenger touring, five-passenger phaeton, runabout, limousine, landaulet, imperial limousine, brougham, coupe, imperial coupe and a limited number of four-passenger phaetons.

AN OLD KNIGHT.

Unnoticed in Chicago's endless array of taxicabs and livery vehicles is a Silent Knight touring car which was built by Charles Y. Knight in 1906, and has since covered the remarkable distance of 200,000 miles. P. C. Kohler, a taxicab operator and liveryman, has used the car in rental work for six years, and he says he has never made a replacement of any part of the motor.

Writing to the makers of Stoddard Dayton and Columbia cars, which also embody the celebrated Knight motor, Mr. Kohler says that his motor is as quiet and develops as much power as when it was new. He obtains fourteen miles to the gallon of gasolene and uses comparatively little lubricating oil. Being experienced with motors of all kinds and observing their work at close range in a strenuous service, Mr. Kohler's opinion and experience is a valuable addition to the indorsement of other Knight motor devotees.

BANKERS START A GOOD MOVEMENT IN BEHALF OF "PURE INVESTMENT LAWS"

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Aug. 10.—The market has withstood all the presidential shocks which seem due it this year, except election results, and with the governmental grain report for August out, now has a chance to take the most comprehensive stock of conditions which known fundamentals have provided since the first of the year.

With crop conditions as they are and the steel and iron trades in better shape than they have been in for years, with wholesale emporiums of the country crowded with buyers for merchants who see in the near future a revival of retail store business, and with about every other condition favorable to prosperity, it would appear to be about time for the security buying, which market prices warrant.

W. H. ROSS

MARKET DOES NOT RESPOND.

But the market has not responded to good tidings to date and has stayed narrow and dull in the face of about everything which ordinarily would tend to make it broad and active. It is largely expiating past sins on the part of promoters who sold securities which were frequently beneath quotation on any exchange and against whose activities the punitive hand of postal or other authorities was too long delayed.

The educational campaign which enlightened the public against the wiles of frenzied finance ought to have been conducted far enough to instruct them as to the value of good securities. If the money which the "get rich quick" swindlers hypnotized out of the pockets of the people was [illegible] to invest in the bonds and shares which are present or really [illegible] dividend payers, legitimate commission houses would now be doing much more business.

It is a good sign when American bankers [illegible] assemble in its financial capital and form an organization which one reporter of the proceedings said had for its purpose the enactment of "pure investment laws" and a careful scrutiny of all proposed [illegible].

Worst Bogus Shares Period.

If [illegible] in the past done more to protect the innocent and uninformed part of the population what to do with savings, the country would be better off [illegible] the public well if they had also shown up some of the "quick-richers" who took more [illegible] of the people through mining oil and numberless other worthless shares than was ever dug out of the ground by legitimate mining, well digging or any other form of industrial procedure. The 1907 panic was the culmination of the worst bogus investment period since the Mississippi [illegible].

It may be that margin trading will never be revived on the scale of former magnitude [illegible] who have saved a little money and would rather, were they better informed, invest it in securities than put it in savings banks for less returns are a mighty army and what cash they have accumulated would provide very flourishing business for banking and brokerage houses who obtained their confidence and would be content with a business small in detail but great in the aggregate. Some day there will arise somewhere in this country a banking and brokerage house which will be a kind of a Sears-Roebuck concern in its line.

Most of the moneyed class, so-called, are folks with really moderate incomes and have their assets anchored in securities [illegible] a stated income. It is as hard [illegible] The new crop is well read and [illegible] and given more to investing a [illegible] surplus in automobiles than in bonds or shares. It has discovered that it is harder to attain permanent prosperity in stock speculation than in politics. It would pay to add to [illegible] acquired wisdom the knowledge that good investments not only pay dividends, but can be turned into cash if cash is required.

The principal trouble with the market is that the small speculator and the small investor will [illegible] near it.

Never So Backward Before.

When those classes keep out when prices begin to go up they are doing something they never did before. That is a phenomena worth attention.

[illegible] are a good many enterprises in this country which are being held back because they cannot be financed up to growing needs. If the managements would inform the great public which has been acting economically for several years the difficulty could be solved. The swindling promoters knew better how to tap the pockets of the public than the organizers and administrators of honest, solid and remunerative industries.

Recent market declines indicate that the big interests which were hopefully expected to take a hand and stir it into activity are perfectly willing to let it remain as it is and to steadily accumulate stocks which are [illegible] lower than they should every time they decline a little. The interests have [illegible] adding to their holdings, no doubt [illegible] is one good reason why bear raiding has been so ineffectual.

Speculators who have the strongest gambling spirit have been, as ever, after quick action. They have been able to get plenty of it in cotton and grain.

Industrial Stocks Higher.

While a number of industrials are climbing to high price records and increases in dividends or extra disbursements are daily financial features for that list of stocks, railroads with few exceptions are neglected in the market, although they are the backbone of business and prosperity. But there are hopeful signs ahead for even the transportation corporations which have been flooded, frozen, taxed and warred upon until it is a tribute to the efficiency of their managements and employes that they have kept on paying dividends, not to speak of extensions and physical improvements. They will probably continue to meet charges, even if rates are not raised, with the immense traffic which is being prepared for them. Not only will the crops overtax them with tonnage for the Fall but provide more and more business after that in hauling the goods which the crops will buy.

Railroad men know their business and can see ahead. Nothing could be more indicative of a renewal of prosperity that is plainly noticeable instead of being only theoretical than the magnitude of equipment orders placed within a few months. Those for cars have been at a rate which if maintained will make the total more than 200,000 for the year, or almost as many as were called for in the two previous ones combined. Nearly 3,000 locomotives have been bought since January 1. Rail orders of immense total tonnage are being placed for delivery in 1913.

If roads could be sure of enough returns from the business they do to pay the higher wages which are asked and to meet the other additional expenses now faced, they would have no fear about earning adequate income for the capital invested in them. But there will have to be more profit in the transportation business in sight before there will be any stock market boom for railroad securities as a class.

Roads and all business interests for that matter, are entitled to a fair chance and there is no benefit to be derived by any cause in oppressing or bankrupting common carriers and industrial enterprises. It is not horse sense to stop a train run for everybody just to make a few rascals walk.

BIG L. & N. MELON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The rise in Louisville & Nashville today, it going as high as 165⅞ and closing at 165⅛, is due to the report that directors will recommend the issue of $40,000,000 new stock to shareholders at par.

The $40,000,000 will be spent to double track part of the road, and to make an extension. It is believed in banking circles here and Chicago that the road will cut a "melon" before long.

War on Great Lakes.

War on Great Lakes is forecasted by a London cablegram which says Canadian and English steamship lines with a combined capital of $10,000,000 will be merged to compete with American grain carrying vessels. The new ship trust will try to monopolize the Lake trade, but a new and commercial Commodore Perry may appear on Erie and the other big ponds.

Blow at Coal Dealers.

WATERLOO, Ia., Aug. 10.—There is a movement in Iowa to wipe out coal dealers. Operators of mines in this State propose to sell direct to consumers after October 1, and will open storage yards in various towns and cities. Des Moines retailers will fight operators by importing Illinois coal and cutting prices. It looks quite good for consumers in Iowa at present.

Domestic Money.

The local money market continues dull. Money remains easy on call, but time money is not so plentiful, and therefore firmer.

WHEAT SITUATION IN THE HANDS OF BEARS

More Cash Sales in Chicago Than Have Been Known in Years.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—With the appearance of the government August report on wheat, showing that we have raised 680,000,000 bushels, and the fact that exporters have at least partially withdrawn from the market for the time being, places the situation in the hands of the bears. Not in many years has there been as much cash wheat sold at Chicago and the smaller markets of the Southwest as has been the case this year.

Up to the first of this week foreigners grabbed everything in sight, and instead of backing away from the grain after having made large purchases they continued their buying and willingly paid full prices. It is generally believed by those who watch conditions closest that with the increased movement of Spring wheat there will be a withdrawal of some of the buying power and that this event may possibly cause values to weaken and decline.

Now on Export Basis.

We are now on a solid basis, and besides the heavy sales of wheat for shipment abroad there have been goodly sales of flour to go out of this country. It was given out on good authority that some of the wheat [illegible] at Duluth as well as at the other [illegible], was on the market, but that owners were not pushing the grain for sale. A fortnight ago conditions surrounding September wheat looked as if the shorts in that month were likely to receive punishment but the larger longs have sold considerable September and replaced it with May. Stocks of wheat in the hands of millers in the United States may be called small and flour supplies are only moderate.

Corn Futures Under Pressure.

September corn has attracted a great deal of attention of late because of the shortage in that future and the fact that stocks in all positions were not only small, but that they continued to decrease. The more deferred corn futures have been under more or less pressure from some of the larger traders at Chicago, and this had been brought about by improved crop condition in the entire belt.

The large open interest in oats, and which is again closed in as rapidly as the shorts are able without advancing prices sharply, has attracted the attention of the entire speculative world. It was expected by shorts that the movement of oats would be on an enormous scale by this time, but receipts have been retarded by the wet and unfavorable weather. Threshing has also been restricted.

The situation in hog products may be called somewhat healthier because of the better demand of certain grades of meat cuts as well as lard. Packers are looking for an improved business in cash products and at the same time they expect a falling off in the hog movement in the West.

ON BEHALF OF CAPITAL.

Strike on Harriman Lines from News Bureau Viewpoint.

The capitalistic view of the strike by shopmen on the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific, one of the greatest battles ever fought between organized labor and railroad [illegible], is presented by the Boston News Bureau [illegible] it says:

When the [illegible] Western roads began their campaign of [illegible] they picked out the Harriman lines to bear the brunt of their attack as being big earners and by so much the easier to put in the wrong before the public. The Harriman management promptly accepted the challenge, shouldering the responsibility of carrying on a struggle in behalf of all the railroads of the country, because they were better prepared than most to carry it on. The fight has been won and Judge Lovett says that while it has been very expensive it has not cost half as much as he expected when the issue was joined.

"That the earnings of the Union Pacific on its stock were reduced from over 16 per cent to a little less than 14 per cent, and those of the Southern Pacific from 9½ per cent. to about 7½ per cent., is of little importance compared with the satisfaction the officers and directors of the Harriman lines may take in having done the entire country an important service. This was no mere dispute over wages or hours of service. The Harriman lines made a really heroic stand against aggression on the part of reckless leaders of the shop unions that meant nothing short of disaster to both railroads and industrial concerns wherever it might prevail."

Brokers' Views

Hunt, Ellis & Co.—The political escutcheon is now completely decorated. The doctrines of all three political parties have been written down for our consideration and we are at liberty to draw inferences as to the outlook. Opinions as to the fortunes which awaits the various candidates is divers[illegible], but the trend of sentiment regarding the industrial and commercial outlook, garnered from all sections and all sources, is unmistakably one of optimism. The favorable conditions which abound on all sides [illegible] the belief that [illegible] the welfare of our country and employers with ever increasing force the truth that the nation's industrial and social [illegible] one political party [illegible] market is still largely a [illegible] that it rests on sound [illegible] to neglect than to extensive liquidation. As evidence of the steady improvement in prices the gratifying recovery of the rails may be cited. At the close of trading Thursday the average of 20 rails had climbed from a low for the year of 114.92 on February 5, to 122.20, a new level for the year and the highest point since July 31, 1911, when the figure stood at 123. In this advance is reflected clearly the bright crop prospects. Favorable reports from the grain belt have continued unembarrassed [illegible] improvement in cotton with now promises a yield of 14,000,000 bales, the [illegible] than ever fewer general harvest [illegible] The copper producers statement although showing an increase in surplus of nearly 4,000,000 pounds, can scarcely be considered unfavorable in view of July's record breaking refinery output of [illegible] pounds, which is nearly 7,000,000 [illegible] above the previous high total of 130,500,000 of March, 1912.

Hayden, Stone & Co.—To our way of thinking, there is just one dominant factor viz., the enormous crop yield that is now almost assured of being realized and the tremendous incentive to business that this is proving. This is the firmest possible foundation for true prosperity and larger values. Of course, there are mooting conditions, otherwise a large immediate advance would be in order. The principal restrictive influence is the money market. Banking interests naturally discourage any attempt looking toward a bull movement, as with our antiquated currency system such a move just now would create a dangerous situation. It would be far safer to wait for the return of crop moving money before undertaking any such campaign, and we anticipate that this is what will happen.

Wiggin & Elwell.—The market shows an upward trend, but the progress toward higher prices is disappointingly slow. Large financial interests are at the moment, not particularly aggressive in advancing prices. We think stocks should be purchased on favorable recessions and reasonable profits accepted.

L. M. Taylor & Co.—Market sentiment is still divided between optimism over the excellent harvest and uncertainty over the political situation. One thing to remember is that the copper companies have been making large profits for nearly a year and with every prospect of a continuance of high metal prices larger dividends must come.

Ohio Copper Earnings.

The July earnings of the Ohio Copper Company are placed at $36,000, but improvements are being made which will increase them. Four of the company's eight Chilean mills in the third section of the concentrator are operating. The entire section is expected to run at full capacity by Sept. 1. With three sections operating at capacity, from 3,000 to 3,500 tons of ore daily will be treated, on which earnings of $50,000 monthly are expected.

Wool Market Improves.

After President Taft vetoed the wool bill the wool market grew active and higher prices are looked for. The statistical position is strong. The new lightweight season has been accorded a successful opening. Buyers have shown unmistakable approval of the new Spring lines and manufacturers have done well.

Rail Buying for 1913.

Rail buying for 1912 delivery has commenced, three Western roads taking 180,000 tons. Not for several years has the rail market opened so early. In foundry pig iron also there is interest in 1913 deliveries, and on the whole the trade is looking farther ahead than for a long time.

MACHINERY TO CUT HIGH COST OF FOOD

New Agricultural Implement Companies Will Make Farms Yield More.

By BOERSIANER.

[illegible] necessity is no more than the mother of invention. She solves baffling problems. She bids fair to reduce the world wide high cost of living. With that wise foresight [illegible] after the events are past, economists may soon say the solution of dear living expenses should have been foreseen in the sudden and numerous formations of agricultural implements companies.

BOERSIANER

Within a relatively short time over half a dozen such organizations have been floated, and their floatations in each instance has been thoroughly successful. Their stocks were over-subscribed. The underwriters made excellent profits. All the companies had either something new to offer or they offered a most useful improvement on the old. The purpose of their machinery is to enlarge the crops; to make agriculture intensive as well as extensive; to raise better as well as more cereals, vegetables, fruits and so forth.

Will Help Increase Crops.

These promotions have been also a sort of financial phenomenon. Their underwritings were absorbed with the assimilative celerity comparable with the boom periods in oil stocks, iron and steel certificates, copper shares and, if you please, gold mine stocks.

"But in the case of agricultural implements the cycle has more useful and substantial promptings. While it may not accelerate the "back to the farm" movement, it will make farmers' lives more easy and even more productive. If intelligently exploited, the inventions owned by the companies will make one acre yield in the future as much, if not more, than two yielded in past.

That the agriculturist is making the en[illegible] is shown [illegible] sales of the various organizations. Naturally the American farmer is leading in all manner of experiments. He can well afford to experiment. Taken collectively, he is the richest of land tillers. His lot has become superior to the small tradesman and merchant of the cities, not to speak of the urban artisan. His position always has been more independent than that of those classes. Today he has more money than they.

Teaching "Stick Plow" Farmers.

But the improvement in farm life is spreading to other lands. The foreign plants erected abroad by the International Harvester Company are proving universally beneficial. The agents of this company are educating the stick-plow farmer and the old scythe gardner to use American machinery.

The American machine has invaded not only darkest Russia, Tartar Hungary and Orintal Turkey, but has entered dense Asia.

The cities, therefore may grow without hurt to the nation [illegible] reluctance of urbanite [illegible] be a disadvantage only to himself. He may prefer the poisonous atmosphere of the city to the pure air of the country—the detrimental result will be individual. The slang of the slums may pollute languages more than the sweet dialects of field and forests sweeten them, but the genius of the American inventor will make amends for economic drawbacks.

The new machine is the thing. It will answer the riddle of the high cost of living. It will do the work of multitudes of men and the earth will respond to it in double bountifulness.

LATEST ABOUT COPPER.

It is said that the price for electrolytic copper is firmly settled on the 17¾ cents basis and that producing interests will do what they can to prevent any further advance. They do not want a runaway market. It is reported from abroad that some English consumers are short of September supplies and renewed European buying is expected soon. It has fallen of late. Very little September copper can now be bought in this country and some producers have already booked two-thirds of the copper [illegible] sales have been comparatively small, but it has not been owing to lack of inquiry. Producers are as yet unwilling to make any sizable commitments for that month, although firm bids of 17¾ cents a pound have been made.

About all the August selling, which totals about 20,000,000 pounds to date, has been for domestic use. Regarding the London situation Henry R. Merton & Co., said on July 27: "The position of refined copper has altogether swinged [illegible] in favor of the producers who by maintaining their price [illegible] 17 [illegible] the present month, have at last succeeded in realizing this price again from manufacturers. This time it is the American buyers who have forestalled the European trade by taking fairly large lines from first hands for September delivery."

50,000 Harvest Hands Needed.

One serious situation confronting farmers in Northwestern States and Western Canada is the possible shortage of harvest hands. More than 50,000 men could be used in the grain regions now and a demand for more will come within a few weeks. The work is of the healthiest kind and the farmers pay and feed their help well. The Canadian Pacific, as usual, is doing all it can to help agriculturists along its lines. It will run harvesters' excursions from the Maritime provinces on August 12 and 28 and from the [illegible] of Quebec and Eastern Ontario on August 16 and 28.

To Look Into Labor Acts.

LONDON, August 10.—A move to settle labor troubles in England will be made when the British government sends to America Sir George Askwith chairman of the industrial commission of the Board of Trade, and famous as a mediator, to study the working of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act in Canada, and the latest industrial legislation in the United States.

The Stock of a Famous Curtain Factory at Half

MOULTON, FORBES & CO.
MUSLIN AND LACE CURTAINS
30, 32 KINGSTON STREET
BOSTON, MASS.
Aug 6, 1912

R. H. WHITE CO.
Gentlemen We have decided to accept your recent offer for the entire manufactured stock of foreign and domestic laces and scrims. This includes the entire stocks of the Mass. Curtain Co. and the Lester R. Moulton Co.—foreign lines, and our own—for accepting the offer is the enormous size of this order. Our unwillingness to cancel it is due to the fact that we think you are one of the few concerns in the country to handle such a lot, we are sure you will have a tremendous sale at the very low prices at which you can offer these stocks.
Respectfully Yours,
MOULTON, FORBES & CO.

Moulton, Forbes & Co., of whom we have made this great purchase (see their letter) are leading manufacturers of everything new in Lace and Scrim Curtains and are recognized the country over for reliability in well-made merchandise—and, while our purchase was a big one, the goods will go quickly, as they will sell at sight as soon as we place them on our counters because the prices are so low.

Large factories do not sacrifice stocks every day, and only because of the magnitude of the purchase we were permitted the use of their name.

It is not unusual to read in the Sunday advertisements of the sale of some factories' surplus stocks. It would take a great many of these factories running at their full capacity to supply the R. H. WHITE CO.'S regular DAILY selling.

EVERY DAY THEY NAMED A NEW DISH AFTER HER

THE ODD DILEMMA OF THE PARIS BEAUTY MONNA DELZA WHO WAS SO HONORED BY THE CHEFS THAT PEOPLE DIDN'T KNOW WHETHER SHE WAS A WOMAN OR A MENU

THE SMILE OF MONNA DELZA .

Paris, August 3.

MONNA DELZA is the daintiest beauty in Paris. Monna Delza never puts her feet on the earth. Monna Delza will only sleep in a bed that has belonged to a queen.

All Paris has paid tribute to the daintiness of Monna Delza. Hats have been named after her. Pieces of furniture and wearing apparel of all kinds have received the same honor.

Inevitably the cooks of Paris began to name their new dishes for her. It need hardly be said that chefs form a most important element in the life of Paris. Whenever a Parisian becomes famous he or she receives special consideration from the culinary artists of the city.

The first dish named in honor of Monna Delza was a dainty preparation of strawberries. That was very well. It was a tribute to her daintiness. Had not "peaches Melba" been created in honor of the great singer by the great Escoffier, and had not many other new dishes been similarly named after artists?

The next day the chef of a rival hotel responded with "cherries Monna Delza." There could be no objection to that. The game of naming dishes after Monna Delza was then started. It was kept up until it has reached a point where at least one dish a day receives her name.

Very early in the game all the fruits in the market had been linked with the dainty one's name. There were even "prickly pears Monna Delza," "bananas Monna Delza" and "crabapple jelly Monna Delza."

Before the fruits had been disposed of the chefs began to christen all sorts of pastry with her name. First of all the world was gladdened with "tartelettes Monna Delza." This was followed by "pancakes Monna Delza." Another surprise was "bombe Monna Delza." There was also "souffle Monna Delza" and "diablotins Monna Delza."

Very soon it became time to bestow the fair one's name on the more substantial ornaments of the table. The Elysee Palace Hotel made a bit at lunch one day by offering its guests a "duck Monna Delza."

The chef of the Hotel Meurice squeezed his brains in an effort to provide a suitable retort to this creation. He did it. He offered "goose Monna Delza."

The rivalry of the chefs had already ceased to give any pleasure to Monna Delza. When it reached the stage of "goose Monna Delza" it began to give her pain. She sat down and wrote a little note to the person responsible for this creation. It read:

"Sir—I thank you for your intention to honor me by attaching my name to a savory preparation of a useful domestic bird, but I shall feel more than honored if you will cease to use it.

"My pleasures lie chiefly in collecting objects of artistic beauty, and there is really no sense in associating my name so persistently with culinary delicacies. I fear that your patrons will develop cannibalistic inclinations when they see my name so constantly on the menu.

"Begging that you will accede to my wishes, receive, sir, the expression of my most distinguished sentiments.

"MONNA DELZA."

It was too late to accomplish anything by such polite methods. Even before the letter was received a "sirloin Monna Delza" from one establishment was struggling for popularity with a "tenderloin Monna Delza" from another.

"Lobster Monna Delza" became the rage as a late supper dish. All the boulevardiers insisted on having it. They said it started them splendidly for a sleepless night.

One after another the birds received the name of the adored one. There was "chicken Monna Delza," "quail Monna Delza," "partridge Monna Delza," "pheasant Monna Delza" and "turkey Monna Delza."

All kinds of soups were named in honor of the beauty. Inevitably among these was a "puree Monna Delza." This was particularly annoying because "in the puree" has a sense similar to the old American slang expression "in the soup."

Provincial restaurant and hotels seized upon the magic name. In faraway Marseilles they called a new variety of bouillabaisse after her. It contained paprika and little crawfish in addition to the old ingredients, giving it a wonderful scarlet appearance.

"Leg of lamb Monna Delza" made an enormous success with the customers of a very popular restaurant on one of the eastern boulevards. These customers are middle class and working people. This particular way of preparing the leg involved the use of a great deal of garlic, which pleased the customers immensely. They called it the perfume of Monna Delza. When the news reached the ears of the beauty she fainted with agony. She cannot endure anything but the most delicate perfumes.

When she recovered from this shock the beauty determined to act. She engaged one of the most eminent firms of lawyers in Paris. The firm wrote on her behalf to the popular restaurant, stating that she would take legal action unless her name was immediately removed from the bill of fare. At the same time the law firm intimated that legal measures would be taken to stop all other restaurants from using her name.

The popular restaurant paid no attention to the letter. It is doing a glorious business with "leg of lamb Monna Delza." The common Parisian out for a Saturday evening feast will order it every time.

Some lawyers believe that Monna Delza cannot legally prevent the use of her name. The question seems never to have been decided. She declares that she will employ every legal resource to stop the shocking association of her dainty name with coarse forms of animal food.

The House of Tragedy Scores Again!—Next?

How Death, Ruin, Suicide, Family Dissensions Have Dogged the Tenants of Fifth Avenue's Richest Palace for a Generation

AGAIN the house of tragedy has scored! It is the palatial house at No. 871 Fifth avenue, New York, at the upper corner of Fifth avenue and Sixty-eighth street.

Mrs. Amil L. Barber, widow of the "Match King," died suddenly the other day on the train from Washington to New York. She was elderly, but up to the moment of her death apparently in vigorous health.

Years ago she was mistress of the fateful house on Fifth avenue. Its evil influence is credited by the superstitious with being far-reaching. When her husband, Amil L. Barber, was at the height of his great money making career, he purchased this house from its original builder and greatly enlarged it.

While occupying the house, Mr. Barber became involved in all sorts of litigation and trouble. He lost a considerable part of his great fortune. He was sued by women on mysterious grounds and was sad worried. He became a chronic invalid and went away from New York.

Misfortune followed him, and the superstitious attributed it to the influence of the house of tragedy. His only son, Le Droit Langdon Barber, a dashing young fellow, died suddenly in the prime of life six years ago. Mr. Barber's health then began to fail, and although he had been a man of exceptional vitality and vigor, he died three years ago.

Toward the end of May of this year young Mrs. Le Droit L. Barber, widow of the only son, jumped out of the window of the Barber mansion in Washington while suffering from melancholia, and was dangerously injured. She was much loved by both her father and mother-in-law, and it is supposed that the long series of family misfortunes was responsible for her unhappy condition of mind.

This tragic episode occurred only three weeks before the sudden death of the elder Mrs. Barber.

There are as many rumors about the mansion as there are about many old European castles and manor houses. There are tales of ghosts and mysterious deaths.

What disasterous influence can a senseless house of stone and wood have upon its human inmates? What relation can there be between the untimely death of one owner and that of another owner who never knew the first? "None" the reasoning man may answer. Yet New York persists in associating trouble with this house.

Originally a smaller house occupied this corner of sixty-eighth street and Fifth avenue. It was built by Howard G. Seward. When the foundations were being dug on of the workmen was killed by the falling of some timber. His widow, a woman with gypsy blood in her veins, haunted the grounds, and one day when the owner, Howard G. Seward, was inspecting the work, she faced him and cursed him and his house. "You will never live in it; it is a house of sorrow," she shrieked. "You will die before the year is out."

Six months later Mr. Seward was found dead. He had hanged himself to one of the rafters. When the news of the tragedy flew along the avenue, a crowd gathered in front of the house. In the crowd was a thin, eerie creature decked in bright colors. She shook a thin, accusing fist at the house and shrieked: "Bad luck to the house!"

For several months the house remained unoccupied and neighbors gossiped about its ill luck. Then Amil L. Barber bought it and was afflicted by the series of misfortunes already narrated.

From him it was purchased by the late William C. Whitney, Secretary of the Navy under President Cleveland, and one of the foremost financiers of America. He planned to make his new home the show place of New York, and right well he succeeded.

Mr. Whitney spent $4,000,000 in remodelling and furnishing the house. The late Stanford White, whom he employed, bought up a dozen European palaces, in order to secure their choicest stonework, woodwork and ironwork for the New York palace.

When the building of the house was well under way Mr. Whitney took unto himself a bride—a second one. The house was to be a wedding present for her. Finally the last stone was put in place, the last bit of furniture installed, the last touches given the wonderful marbles. Everything was in readiness for the bride, who had been the beautiful Mrs. Randolph.

Friends of the multi-millionaire were bidden to a private view of the completed mansion.

"America at present has nothing to equal it," said Mr. White, and he added: "Such beauty must surely bring happiness to those who live in it."

Mr. Whitney went down to Aiken the day after this private view to bring his [illegible] home. The morning after [illegible] arrival at the latter Southern resort he went for a ride with Mrs. Whitney, her husband and wife were full of plans for a brilliant Winter. Mrs. Whitney's horse took fright and dashed her against a [illegible] bridge. Her neck was broken.

The bereaved son with all his millions, could [illegible] He brought his bride [illegible] on a special train, and [illegible] for months by medical skill, aided by her wealth and power. But nothing could save Mrs. Whitney. She died after months of suffering, and the [illegible] house in America was shut up, its windows barred.

After a period of mourning, Mr. Whitney again opened the house. He brought out his stepdaughter, Miss Adelaide Randolph. He entertained lavishly for her. He roused jealousy in the breasts of his own children by his devotion to the son and daughter of his second wife. The house seemed to bring discord. His older daughter, Pauline, married Almeric Paget, a young Englishman of little fortune. This was contrary to Mr. Whitney's wishes, who did not wish his daughter to marry a foreigner. There was much dissension in the family because of this marriage.

In the midst of this family strife Mr. Whitney was taken suddenly ill. It was a most mysterious illness. Appendicitis and peritonitis were given as the cause, but the exact truth was never made known.

After Mr. Whitney's death, the mansion was bought by James Henry Smith, a multi-millionaire friend of the brothers Harry and Payne Whitney. Mr. Smith was generally called "Silent" Smith by his friends. He married the beautiful Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart. They went to Japan on their wedding trip and Mr. Smith died there. A house of unhappiness, indeed!

Stanford White's genius made [illegible] mansion the most beautiful [illegible] New York, the most [illegible] America, many said. [illegible] 25, 1906, Stanford White was killed by Harry Thaw. Again people spoke of the history of the house.

"Superstitious neighbors gossipped that a gypsy woman, wronged by the first owner, had put a 'curse' on this great house of severely respectable exterior and incomparably rich interior."

The superstitious decided that it would remain vacant perhaps until torn down. But a surprise was in store for the society gossips. Harry Payne Whitney, whose wife was Gertrude Vanderbilt, bought in the mansion, and for two years has lived very happily in it.

"Nothing wrong about the house!" he says. "Not with my happy children running about and playing."

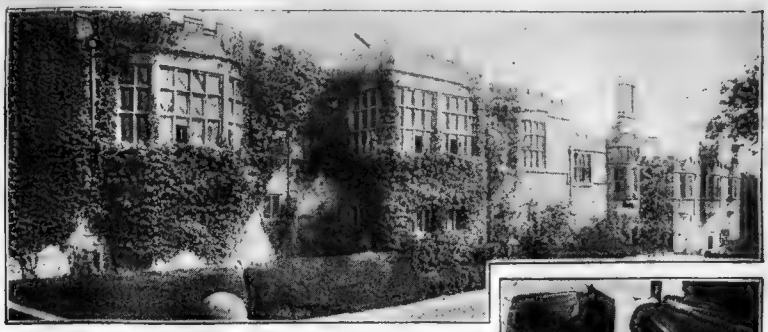
"Those Yankees Will be Moving Westminster Abbey Next"!



Haddon Hall, Once the Home of the Romantic Heroine, Dorothy Vernon, Now the Property of Her Descendant, the Duke of Rutland, Father of Lady Marjorie Manners.

Cromwell's Boots, Which Are Included Among the Antique Treasures of the Reindeer Inn, Banbury.

What Lady Marjorie Manners Said When She Caught J. P. Morgan Trying to Carry Off Haddon Hall and Richard the Lion-Heart's Bones and Cromwell's Boots

London, Aug. 2.

In his mind's eye he sees the American millionaire waking off boldly with every interesting object of antiquity in his England, not excepting the justly celebrated Tower of London and the incomparably venerable Westminster Abbey.

It was bad enough to have the Americans taking away all the athletic records. They might leave a few of the old things to make the country look interesting. Really, they are becoming perfectly impossible, you know.

So another great movement to save old England has been started. Rich Englishmen have been implored to do something to save the old places and the old things, and a few have responded. Haddon Hall has been saved from J. P. Morgan. The old "globe room" at Banbury has been saved. Cromwell's boots have been saved. Richard the Lion-heart's bones have been almost saved.

It was the beautiful Lady Marjorie Manners, that very picturesque person, who started this new movement to save old England. As so often happens, it is a woman who takes the first step in any patriotic or public-spirited movement.

Lady Marjorie happens to be a collateral descendant of the famous and romantic Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall. The Vernon estates and the Hall are the property of her father, the Duke of Rutland. Haddon Hall, an early Tudor stone mansion in a state of mellow decay, is the most beautiful place of its kind in England.

Now the Duke of Rutland is notoriously a very poor man for his rank. He has not kept Haddon Hall in occupation or repair. Noting this fact, an American millionaire made him a handsome offer for the old place through an English estate agent. It was understood that the American was J. Pierpont Morgan and that he would pull the old place down, load it in a ship and send it over to America. At any rate, that was how Englishmen figured it.

The poor Duke was very much pleased with the offer and quite ready to close with it. When Lady Marjorie heard of it, however, she blazed with indignation.

"What!" she cried; "sell our ancestral home, the most beautiful old house in England, to be carried away to America like a load of stone ballast! It is dreadful!"

"But what can we do about it, my dear?" murmured the sad-eyed Duke. "We have to have money to keep up our position. Then the income tax and the new land tax are dreadful—and your clothes and little hobbies cost something."

Up to last time Lady Marjorie had shown a marked distaste for matrimony. She had reached an age at which it was surprising that an extraordinarily attractive young woman should remain unwed. Society heard there was a hopeless attachment between her and Prince Arthur of Connaught. To others it seemed that she was so much interested in art, soul culture and other spiritual things that she could not think of anything so earthly as marriage.

But when she heard of the plot against Haddon Hall she became intensely practical. Within a few months she became engaged to Marquis of Anglesey, the richest nobleman in England. Strange to say society had credited him with a hopeless devotion to Princess Patricia of Connaught.

The Marquis has so much money in cash and thoroughly up-to-date securities that he is able to smile at all the schemes of the British Government which are causing so much distress to the landed aristocracy. It is understood that his millions will be called upon to keep Haddon Hall in the possession of the descendants of Dorothy Vernon.

Between the discovery of the plot to export Haddon Hall to America and Lady Marjorie's engagement, a new American peril was exposed, and this urged her to vigorous action.

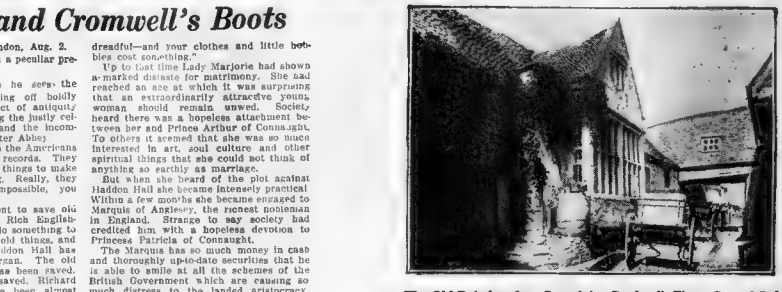
The new peril was nothing less than J. P. Morgan's project to carry away the tombs and the bones of Richard the Lionheart and others of the Angevin sovereigns of England from their last resting place in France.

"Really," said Lady Marjorie, "we must stop this sort of thing. If we don't, those impudent Yankees will be stealing Westminster Abbey."

The way the royal Angevin tombs came into the market was rather curious. The ancient abbey of Fontevrault in France was until recently occupied by the Benedictine monks. When they were expelled by the recent separation law the property became subject to sale by the Government.

Art dealers knew that the abbey contained the tombs of Henry II., the first Count of Anjou to become King of England; of King John, who signed the Magna Charta; of Richard the Lionheart and their wives. Mr. Morgan intimated that he would like to buy the abbey for the sake of these treasures.

Englishmen declared that if the remains of famous English kings could not be left in the resting places they had chosen, they should be taken to England. The French Government was urged to exercise its power of declaring the abbey a historic monument. The Government postponed the sale of the abbey, and there the matter rests.



The Old Reindeer Inn, Containing England's Finest Carved Oak Jacobean Room, Which an American Millionaire Tried to Buy.

Every day some new "peril" from American millions is discovered. The Old Reindeer Inn at Banbury, near Oxford, contained in its "globe room" the finest example of Jacobean oak panelling in England. Here Oliver Cromwell held a council before the battle of Edgehill in 1637. Here Oliver Cromwell's big boots are still preserved. The old inn was falling down, and it became known that an American millionaire had planned to buy the oak panelling, Cromwell's boots and everything else of interest there.

Again the movement started by Lady Marjorie Manners produced results. A rich Englishman came forward and bought up the inn and the boots and preserved them for the use of the British public. In future a Briton will be able to drink his beer where Cromwell sat and gaze in peace at Cromwell's boots.

Other objects of art and antiquity have been saved. Some time ago Lord Lansdowne's Rembrandt, the most valuable picture owned by a private person in England, was sold to Mr. Frick, of Pittsburgh. Groans went up all over England. Recently it became known that the Earl of Galway was preparing to sell his Van Dyck, a less valuable picture, but still a notable one, to an American. Encouraged by Lady Marjorie Manners, an opulent British soap maker came forward and took the picture off his lordship's hands at a handsome price.

The new movement has had two happy results. In some cases the art treasures have been saved to the British nation. In others the noble owner has succeeded in getting a larger price for his treasure from the American. The outcry raised over the prospective loss of the art treasure in England serves as a valuable advertisement.

Experience has shown that few noble lords will hold on to their most cherished family possessions if a sufficient inducement to part with them be offered. There is reason to believe that if they had a chance to raise any cash on Westminster Abbey they would not lose it.

Americans, on the other hand, are quite unscrupulous in the way they spend large sums of money. They have bought up palaces, castles, chateaux, manor houses all over Europe.

These exploits have worked on the nerves of some Britons until they profess to fear that some American is planning to buy and carry away that weighty prehistoric monument, Stonehenge. They go even further. They are now expressing fear that an American is going to buy a spot called Maiden Castle, which is simply an ancient Celtic earth fortification.

Even an American millionaire may want more for his money than a pile of earth!

"Oh, you dreadful man!" said Lady Marjorie. "You want to take Fontevrault Abbey, Richard the Lionheart's bones, Haddon Hall, Cromwell's boots! You will be moving Westminster Abbey next! Stop! Stop! I say!"

WHY Great Cities Ruin the Race by Wearing Out the Healthy Country People Who Flock Into Them, and by Turning Their Children Into Sterile Dwarfs

DR. MAX NORDAU, the noted author of "Degeneration," has contributed an up-to-date chapter on this theme to the Hibbert Journal, the endowed publication devoted to religious and philosophical discussions. In this article Dr. Nordau shows that the great city destroys its inhabitants, and that the continued drainage of the country into the city must end in the destruction of the race. The most interesting points in this article follow.

By Dr. Max Nordau.

IN ever greater numbers the population makes its way from the country to the town, to exchange agricultural occupations for labor in workshops and factories. The number of people that dwell in towns of over 100,000 inhabitants is everywhere swelling; everywhere among civilized nations the tendency appears to transform a people that lives on the land and raises natural products into a people of great cities, producing differentiated goods. The fact is so well known that I may dispense with the citation of figures.

The whole end of civilization seems to be economic. All progress aims at facilitating and augmenting the production of goods. That in this process the individual is being worn out is not considered. The world-economy is not eudemonistic. It does not ask whether it enhances the happiness of the single human being. It produces wealth, and sets this on a level with happiness—a [illegible].

The peasant is attracted to the town because he is hypnotized by the figure of industrial wages, which he compares with the pay for agricultural labor, or the net profit of a small farmer. He does not understand or consider that the higher wage is set off by incomparably higher expenses, and that more money will buy less pleasure and bodily prosperity in the town than less money in the country. He is enticed, moreover, by the excitement, the variety, the amusements which the town offers, and he does not see those doubtful advantages are balanced by quite certain disadvantages — periodic unemployment, a shorter working life, a poor and forsaken old age, and a permanent dependence on great industries and unsentimental enterprise, between which and the workers there exists no thread of human, personal relation.

Degeneration is no new phenomenon. It is probably as old as humanity itself. We may assume that it began in prehistoric times. We know that it has been present in the whole course of history. Only it never before had the range and the character which we now observe. Formerly it only attacked the ruling class of the nations, the dynasties and the aristocracy. In these circles life was always lived too intensively, and more vital energy was expended than was received; their vital economy showed, therefore, an organic deficit that ordinarily required but few generations to lead the family and individuals to bankruptcy.

The rapid extinction of great houses, and especially those of rulers, their collapse in madness, their extinction through languor, celibacy and childlessness, have often been studied. I need point only to the fundamental work on the madness of the Caesars by the Russian author Jacoby, and to the recently published researches into the biological relations of dynasties by the Swedish writer Gustav Sundborg. This degeneracy, which was confined to the upper stratum, was deplorable from the point of view of the class affected, but without any real mischief in respect of the community. The pinnacle of the social edifice was always crumbling away but it was always being renewed. A ceaseless circulation brought the exhausted families down from their height into ruin or obscurity, and brought fresh stocks up out of the depths. The deep masses of the people afforded an inexhaustible source of supply, out of which the life-sap pressed and mounted continually towards the summit of society.

But to-day the conditions are different. Degeneration attacks not only the pinnacle of the social building, but also its broad base, not a privileged class, but the whole stratum of the large-town population—that is to say, a very important part of the people, in some lands even the majority of the nation. There is no doubt that degeneration has its chief home in the large towns, and that the population of the large towns is condemned, as a whole, to degeneracy. The decadence of the peasantry in whole provinces, such as that of the Italian Maremma through fever, that of Normandy through alcoholism, is an exception; but the decline of the town population is the rule.

The large town gives the highest percentage of crime, insanity and constitutional disease; the large town is the focus of all the frenzies of fashion, all hysterical aberrations of public opinion, all anarchical movements in politics, social customs, morality. It is in the large town that celibacy and childlessness are most to be found. In the large towns the tall races are dwarfed: not, indeed, among the patrician class, which has country houses and only spends a part of the year in the town, but among the multitude that is born in the town, lives there, and dies there. In Rouen the Norman people, which even at the beginning of the nineteenth century was rich in splendidly built men and women, is declining at such a rate that to-day 76 per cent. of its young males are unfit for military service.

The Prussian Guard, which enlists none but tall men, and is quartered in Berlin and Potsdam, receives only its smallest part from Berlin itself. The stunted forms that we meet in the slums of East and Southeast London are the descendants of the gigantic peasants of Saxon Sussex, of Danish and Norwegian Hertford, of Jutic Kent, and of Anglian Northumberland. In the large town, families which had originally the finest constitution disappear in four or five generations, if they are not renewed by a continual infusion of fresh blood from the country.

In London and Paris—the young cities of America cannot here come into question—there are probably not a hundred persons who can show a pedigree of a hundred and fifty years, consisting, on both sides, of ancestors born only in London or Paris. The large town is an abyss, in which the population that pours in from the whole country and from foreign lands oozes and trickles away. But for that inflow from without it would be extinct in about a century and a half, since its population is not renewed out of its own resources. For the present, the country population is still capable of feeding the large towns. But the day will come when the depopulated country will have no more reinforcements to bestow on the great city, and then the danger of national degeneration will have come very near to us. This danger will be European in its scope, since one people after another is adopting the large-town civilization, and the white race has no more barbarians in reserve to step into the weakened ranks and fill up their gaps. On the other hand, the elementary feeling of the white race revolts against an afflux of the unexhausted colored races.

Anthropologically the large town is ruinous. For progress it is indispensable. The large town is the focus of civilization. In the large town new thoughts flash into being, not merely bad and perverse thoughts, but also such as are good and fruitful. The inventors that take out patents, the investigators that discover new or [illegible] truths, the artists and poets that endow the world with new beauty, are almost all dwellers in the large town, and by its air their genius is first kindled. But for this intensification of mental activity a dear price must be paid—the swift drying up of the organic powers. The large town is a far-shining lighthouse whose lamp consumes a mighty deal of fuel.

Civilization is not imperilled by degeneration, but civilized people are imperilled. The first or second generation of city dwellers under the powerful stimulus of its new surroundings, puts forth its maximum of intellectual achievement, but its posterity is the prey of degeneration. The problem then takes this form: in the stress of intensive modern culture the peoples that take the lead must needs wear themselves out. Only if they had the courage to retard the rhythm of their economic progress, only then could they retain their health and their full powers. They cannot at the same time be rich and able, shine and endure, but only the one or the other.

It would of course be an elegant solution to set up a cruel division of labor, to abandon one part of the nation to the large town, the mighty machinery of industry, the wild race for success; to retain the other in the comparatively narrow, indigent, primitive conditions of the agricultural village. The first part represents the lost outposts; it wins, for its nation and for humanity, the palm of victory in the Olympic games of the mind, and it succumbs; the second part keeps the nation organically sound, and gives it a fund of character, warriors, a stock for human breeding.

But I see no practical means of restraining the country population from yielding to the seduction of the town, as the moth yields to that of the lamp at which it scorches its wings. The only thing that the legislator can do is, by homestead laws, by the cheapest possible agrarian credit, by other measures that I will not recount for fear of trenching against my will on the field of party politics, to make his native clod so attractive to the peasant that the seductions of the town cannot charm him into migration.

WHY All the BLIND May Soon Be Able to SEE by HEARING LIGHT And All the DEAF Be Able to HEAR by SEEING SOUNDS

AS the result of two marvellous inventions recently brought to the attention of the scientific world, the condition of the totally blind and the stone deaf, hitherto regarded as hopeless, may be greatly alleviated.

One of these inventions is the optophone, the work of Dr. Fournier d'Albe, professor of physics at the University of Birmingham, England. This instrument is not designed to restore sight, but rather to enable the blind to distinguish things through the medium of the ear. In other words, it will enable the blind to hear what they cannot see.

The phonoluminator, the other invention, devised by Alexander Post, a Russian exile at Tomsk, Siberia, on the other hand, is not intended to restore hearing to the deaf, but will enable them to distinguish sounds through the medium of the eye. In other words, it will enable the deaf to see what they cannot hear.

The optophone is based on the property of the metal selenium which makes it susceptible to light. The device consists of a camera-like box, about 26 inches long and 3 inches deep, which contains a piece of selenium, and from which electric wires communicate with two extremely sensitive receivers not very different from those used in the telephone. This box is held in one hand and another box made of cardboard which acts as a "feeler" is held in the other. When this feeler is passed to and fro, the different degrees of light which it intercepts become known through the delicate receiver attached to the ear.

When a ray of the sun, for instance, strikes the "feeler" directly, a harmonious and majestic sound like the echo of a huge orchestra is heard. The light of the moon, on the other hand, produces a different sound, lamenting and weird, more like the groans of the wounded on a battlefield. Electric light produces a most unpleasant sound, sometimes like two pieces of glass rubbed against each other, sometimes like the tittering laugh of ghosts, and sometimes like the piercing cry of a beast in the forest.

An automobile, which presents one of the greatest dangers to the blind man, makes a noise that cannot be mistaken. It is a terrific roar produced probably by the swift motion of the machine. Here is one of the most practical applications of the new optophone.

A train does not present so great a danger to the blind man, as the noise it makes is so easily perceptible to the air. When the optophone combines with the ordinary noise produced by the train the effect on the hearer is almost deafening.

Many effects of light upon the optophone will only be distinguishable when a person has acquired a considerable skill in its use. For instance, the rays of light must produce a certain result when falling on the black and white of a printed page, but it is difficult at present to give any meaning to this.

Gas light is sobbing and whispering, grating and ticking, according to its intensity. By far the most melodious and pleasing sound is produced by an ordinary wax candle. It sounds just like an aeolian harp upon which the chords of some solemn anthem have been struck. Strangely enough, the light of the glow worm sounds like the buzzing of bees and flies, while the light of a red hot iron gives the most lamenting and heart piercing cry imaginable.

Shadows of different intensities have characteristic timbres and keys. The human shadow is like a rattling old cart, while the shadow of a dog sounds murmuring and melancholy.

The optophone was recently exhibited at the Optical Conference Exhibition in London. A blind man stood in the middle of the large room in which the scientists were gathered to witness the demonstration, and with the aid of the remarkable instrument told very readily how many windows were in the room and how many persons were between himself and the wall. This he did by "hearing" the light and shade.

Not only that, but he was able to tell whether the object passing between him and the light was a man, woman or animal and its approximate size.

The great value of the instrument to the hopelessly blind, even in its present imperfect state, will be apparent when it is considered that by its use a blind person might walk the streets in comparative safety. He could tell whether or not obstacles were in his path and avoid them.

It is hoped that eventually the instrument will be so perfected that the operator may be enabled to spell out letters in fairly large print, and familiarity with the characteristic sounds produced by different objects will place the blind in a more advantageous position than they have ever before enjoyed.

Seeing and hearing are fundamentally the same thing. Seeing consists in the perception by the eye of very high rates of vibration of the ether. Hearing consists in the perception of very low rates of vibration by the ear. There are vast scales of vibration that are not perceptible by either sense. It is, therefore, logical that science should seek to make the ear supplement the eye and the eye the ear.

The phonoluminator is somewhat more complicated. It is still in a comparatively crude state, as lack of means and facilities has greatly handicapped its inventor.

It consists of a square wooden box about 14 inches wide by 6 inches deep, on top of which are fastened seven glass tubes an inch in diameter and half a foot long. Two wires connect the apparatus with an electric battery. On the side there is a sound-receiver through which sound-waves are transmitted to the transformers, which are connected with the seven glass tubes on top.

Different sounds have different effects upon the glass tubes, producing vari-colored lights in them. When a musical instrument is played in the vicinity of the sound receiver the tubes become charged with thousands of different colors. Sometimes they seem like fiery fingers [illegible] sometimes like glowing butterflies. Street [illegible] mass of people produces [illegible] couple effects. The lights [illegible] be seen through the closed [illegible] through a wall or other opaque [illegible]

In its present imperfect [illegible] luminator has enabled persons to distinguish between the [illegible] by various instruments and volume of sounds. When [illegible] improved, however, its sphere will be greatly extended. There [illegible] to doubt that eventually colors and forms produce[d] [illegible] spoken words or musical [illegible] recognizable and that through [illegible] of this apparatus the deaf [illegible] able to see and identify [illegible] sound as accurately as they [illegible] if unafflicted.

The invention of the ph[onoluminator is] all the more remarkable bec[ause] that it was conceived and co[nstructed by its] inventor while an exile in S[iberia].

"In April, 1901," said Mr. Post, "I heard that Professor J. J. Thomson had demonstrated in the Royal Institution, London, that there exist particles a thousand times smaller than atoms of hydrogen which move with the velocity of light. These particles, he said, generate light when they fall upon dense obstacles.

"Light from the sun takes about eight minutes to reach the earth. According to science, light is energy and indestructible. But I wanted to know where this energy is stored during those eight minutes when it is neither in the sun nor in the earth, and what goes on in the ether of space that separates us from the sun.

"According to the wave theory the propagation of light depends upon waves in this ether which, when once started at any point in it by a luminous body, are propagated from one portion to another successfully till at last they reach the eye. If this is the fact then those waves must be waves in something which is very different from anything we are acquainted with at present. It cannot be a gas like the air, for the interstellar space and the most evacuated receivers transmit light. It must be vastly denser than any gas. Yet it must be incompressible and resist being torn or cut asunder more strongly than steel. We must admit that the ether permeates not only the interstellar space that separates the heavenly bodies, but also those by which luminous electric and magnetic disturbances can be transmitted.

"Candle light sounds like an Aeolian harp."

"If we throw a stone into a pool of still water we see a succession of waves from the point where the stone strikes the water and they spread out in every direction. The waves of sound in the air spread from their source in an analogous manner. The sound waves are longitudinal. In the early days the luminous undulations were supposed to be of a similar character. Faraday in 1855 proved that a strong magnet exercises a peculiar action on light, which led him to the statement that there is a relation between light and magnetism.

"Clerk Maxwell says: Light consists of electric vibrations in the ether, and light waves travel through the air with the same velocity, but they differ in respect of the length of the wave. While many thousands of the light waves can be packed within an inch, the electrical waves may be one or many feet, or even many miles, in length. The shortest electric wave is two inches.'

"Hertz invented means of measuring the length of the electric waves and showed the fact that they are equal to the light waves. But no one proved the existence of the radium and the North Light waves. Their light was supposed to be essentially different and without waves. It was thought that they can carry energy across the space and yield it up as light at the end of their journey, but they lack the character of regular light. All these things led me to experiment with sound.

"I kept working on it for years, but in vain. I had no means or time to construct the instrument I had in mind. As an exile in Siberia, I was compelled to construct every part of my apparatus myself. Often I grew desperate when I thought that the lack of the few rubles needed might compel me to abandon the work.

"After years of hard work and many vicissitudes I have succeeded. I have no desire to make money as the result of my invention. My ambition is simply to alleviate the condition of the thousands of persons afflicted with deafness.

"I believe that all energy in the universe is convertible. Light may be transformed into sound, sound into light, sound into odor, odor into electricity, and so on. Light, sound, electricity, magnetism, odor and similar phenomena are only various degrees of one and the same thing. It is only our human limitations which make them seem different.

"The lowest sound that the human ear can hear is that which follows from 37 vibrations per second, but a determined musical pitch is not perceived until about 40 to 50 vibrations per second are reached. The highest sound that our ear can hear is 24,000 vibrations per second, although with the aid of certain instruments a still higher degree can be reached. Vibrations above that remain unperceived.

"The difference between light and sound is only a matter of degree. It is not strange, therefore, that we should be able to convert one into the other, although hitherto science has been inclined to regard them as being radically different.

"One strange phase of the new phonolight I have discovered yet remains to be explained. I have found that the apparatus has some remarkable influence on electrical apparatus brought in close proximity to it. An electrical machine seems to lose its positive and negative power, an ordinary magnet is similarly affected, and the magnetic compass becomes entirely unreliable. In the presence of the phonolight, too, wireless apparatus fails to work."

Why You Should Keep House Spiders

THE deadly character of the common house fly has been amply demonstrated, but it is rather curious that science has neglected the hygienic and sanitary qualities of the common spider.

The fly spreads typhoid, cholera, infantile paralysis, tuberculosis and other diseases. The spider is the natural enemy of the fly, and consequently the friend of humanity.

It seems clear that the spider should be encouraged in the vicinity of the house and even within the house, where it is not a positive nuisance. This point is made by a French scientific writer, Dr. Jules Heurivaux, in La Nature.

The natives of certain parts of Mexico have long recognized the value of spiders as a protection against the fly pest. The Mexican goes into the woods and picks out a nest of a certain social spider known to science as Coenotheles.

This spider is small and thickset, very industrious and spreads a great abundance of strong fly catching webs all around him. He builds in the branches of the oak tree.

The Mexican pulls off a twig bearing a nest of these spiders and then sets it up in the room which he wishes to have freed from flies.

The spiders are clean and harmless. They keep to the vicinity of their twig and do not spread all over the room. It is a lesson in industry to watch them work.

Not only does this spider destroy the flies, but he brings an assistant with him to help to do the job in a complete and cleanly manner. This assistant is a small hard-shelled beetle of the Coleoptera family, who lives with the spider, occupying what may be called the servants' quarters in the lower part of the house.

When a fly becomes enmeshed in the web, the spider runs out and feasts upon its blood. After the spider has quite finished his meal, the beetle steps forward and respectfully clears away the remains.

The beetle eats up all the remaining soft parts of the fly. The few pieces he cannot eat he throws into a chamber constructed specially for the purpose in the bottom of the nest. Here the hardest parts are slowly devoured by smaller insects that occupy this [illegible].

Most of the social spiders hitherto discovered have been natives of hot, dry regions. This Mexican species, however, lives in a humid region, with alternations of hot and cold weather, and the French scientist suggests that it might be acclimated in North America or Europe. These spiders possess a special power of attracting the flies and do not merely depend upon the accidental flight of the latter into the web.

Even when the nest is completely surrounded by a paper wrapper, the flies will soon settle quickly upon this paper. It is probable that the spiders exhale a peculiar odor imperceptible to man which attracts the flies.

While dilating upon the extraordinary qualities of this Mexican spider, the French scientist points out that common spiders, indigenous to various parts of the civilized world possess valuable qualities as fly fighters. It should be possible to select the best of these and establish them in the garden and around the house. When flies are scarce, a little raw meat should be given them. Some of the best of the fly fighting spiders do not throw out the long lines of web which are so annoying when they stick to one's face.

WHY the Pharaohs Cruelly Wasted Millions of Lives to Build Colossal Structures Like the Pyramids, and Why Good Eyeglasses Would Have Made Them Normal

THAT the Egyptians suffered from eye-strain to a considerable degree and that this affliction was directly responsible for the building of the pyramids, are among the interesting conclusions reached by Professor Von Hartmann, of Berlin, a well-known Egyptologist, as a result of his recent investigations of numerous Egyptian mummies.

Measuring the eye-balls of the mummies was a most delicate operation, even in the case of those which were the best preserved, but though his efforts were frequently attended with failure, the professor succeeded in obtaining sufficient data to warrant his conclusion that the Egyptians suffered from eye troubles of various kinds and of a serious nature. The principal defect discovered was near-sightedness. The professor concluded that probably 75 per cent of the Egyptians were thus afflicted.

Taking these revelations in connection with the fact that the Egyptians had no glasses with which to correct their eye defects, it follows that they must have suffered constantly from eye-strain.

But what has this eye-strain got to do with the building of the pyramids? The connection is very ingeniously worked out by the German scientist.

In the first place, he declares, this constant eye-strain must have made the Egyptians very irritable, just as the same condition, caused by ill-fitting glasses, causes irritability amongst us. Irritability, plus despotic power such as was wielded by the Pharaohs, was quite sufficient, he thinks, to account for the cruelties they practised upon their slaves, and it was partly to gratify their cruel dispositions that the Pharaohs set slaves and subject races to work upon such prodigious tasks as that of erecting the pyramids.

But there is an even more direct relation between the pyramids and the Egyptians' nearsightedness, according to Professor Von Hartmann. Being unable to correct their visual troubles, the tendency in building monuments and similar structures was naturally to make them so large that they could be admired at a great distance despite their short range vision.

Medical papyri of the period during which the Israelites sojourned in Egypt corroborate the professor's findings regarding the eye troubles prevalent at the time, for they contain numerous prescriptions designed to remedy the defects. But for such defects as nearsightedness no medicine could possibly be effective, and eye-glasses, of course, were not then in use. Eye strain, therefore, must have been very common.

It is a fact that one of every ten persons to-day require eye-glasses. This is because, the eye is not adapted for civilization. Nature provided it to fit the savage who has small use for work close at hand. His life depended on being able to see his enemy and his prey at a distance of fifty feet, or, better yet, a mile away. So most of us are made naturally far-sighted, and as long as we live an outdoor life, as most of our early ancestors did, our far-sighted eyes serve very well.

Nowadays, however, most of our work is indoors, where our eyes are focussed generally fifteen inches away. If we look up from our work we are confronted by a desk or a wall only a few feet away at most, instead of resting our eyes on a distant mountain. The natural consequence is that every second of this time our organs of sight are under strain, no matter how perfect they may be for ordinary purposes.

To a large extent this was true too of the Egyptians. During that period of the Israelites' sojourn in Egypt, the hieroglyphic form of writing was just giving way to the hieratic type which was far more complex and involved more strain on the eyes.

This may account for such acts as that of the Pharaoh who directed the casting of the Israelites' first-born into the river, and may very well explain the cruelties practised by Cleopatra at a later date.

That the connection between these things and eye strain is not too remote is fully borne out by recent research of oculists which indicates what a serious matter eye strain may be. To it have been traced numerous cases of heart trouble, indigestion, headaches, despondency, irritability, asthma, insomnia and criminal tendencies.

Its effects are so varied and wide-spread because the eye is a projection of the brain of which it is really a part, and distorted vision and strained eye-muscles seriously derange the whole nervous system.

Instead of betraying itself by a pain through the eyeballs, eye strain often manifests itself in the form of headaches. It is believed, indeed, that most of the headaches are thus caused. The nausea, liver and other symptoms which accompany sick headache are all the result of overtiring two little rings of muscles behind the pupils of the [illegible].

In addition to the lack of glasses, the eyes of the Egyptians must have been subjected to further strain by reason of the glare of the tropical sun from which they had little to protect them.

Professor Von Hartmann's theory must be taken of course in connection with the Biblical explanation of the slaying of the Israelites' first-born and the other cruelties inflicted upon them by Pharaoh. That it will be remembered, was that the Egyptian ruler was afraid that the Israelites would multiply to such an extent as to menace the nation, but it is probable, nevertheless, that but for the cruelty engendered by the eye strain from which the Egyptians suffered some less radical way might have been contrived to accomplish that effect.

GOWNS TO DINE IN.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

By LADY DUFF-GORDON ("Lucile")

I am showing you this week a group of gowns to dine in. Their draperies may be exaggerated but withal no effective that their exaggeration is permissible. The young matron seated at the table is tall and svelt. Her gown is of the most supple crepe meteor in the loveliest tones of mauve. The short sleeves and the diminutive bodice are cut in one. There is no lining in the whole garment. The bodice is cut in a deep point back and front. A corsage bouquet of lilac orchids forms the only garniture in the front. The plain long skirt is very narrow and "slinky" and is slashed up several inches at the left of the front. The silk stockings and satin slippers are of lilac. Topping this graceful figure is a very large picture hat of lilac taffetas. The curving brim is bound with a darker tone of the taffeta. A charming touch is given by the lilac chiffon muff and scarf.

A great contrast is the pannier gown worn by the young madame seated standing with her hand on the chair. Her costume is a remarkable example of the newest ideas suggested by the fad for draped effects. The foundation is sage green charmeuse satin. The first pannier is cut and bound with a dark green velvet. Over this is a second pannier of embroidered chiffon. This chiffon a shade lighter than the charmeuse is also used as a small apron front of the same, filling the space between the drapery.

second costume is a contrast in every way. The hat is as small as the other is large. French women are always careful to make their costumes compose with their surroundings in this way. The little bonnet is chic. It is built of sage green satin faced with the darker velvet.

I really did not say all I wished last week about the new hair dressing. A new scheme evolved by Monsieur Lewis reverses the ordinary method of procedure which only adds bandeau or ornament after the hairdressing is completed. For here, in order to adjust correctly, the enormously wide (and lightly wired) band of black or colored velvet which completely encircles the head, the hair is just to be lightly parted on the forehead, and then left to hang loosely down, while the bandeau is drawn over it, only just a rippling wave of hair to break and soften its line on the forehead. And when once this has been managed successfully the hair is all taken up together and draped over one side of the turban like banding of velvet, secured there, and right over the ears, too the ends being eventually and tidily tucked. The other side of the head is quite as closely outlined as if a skull can were worn, though sometimes relief and adornment are both supplied by means of an upstanding or outspreading aigrette.

By all of which you may gather that others are at least becoming as appreciative as I have always been concerning the charm of the the sleek, close coiffures, which are now practically universal, instead of the bulging, untidy, overloaded heads which met and hurt one's eyes at every turn, during the long reign of curl clusters. I must confess to a certain pride in the part I have played in helping toward this improvement.

Of one thing I am quite sure—the overweighted head is unbecoming to every one; therefore aim at simplicity if you want to achieve success. Moreover, study several different styles before you adopt any one, and don't be just content to take the advice of a hair dresser who has probably some interested motive in advocating a special coiffure for whose development you will so she will assure you—need an inner frame and an outer coil or chignon, combs and pins and slides and what not.

My Secrets of Beauty

By Mme. LINA CAVALIERI, the Greatest Living Beauty

No. 187---Deep Breathing Made Plain

Mme. LINA CAVALIERI

"I ALWAYS recognize a shallow breather at sight," says Mme. Cavalieri in to-day's beauty lecture. Then, wasting no time on non-essentials — for she knows that every intelligent person knows the need and value of deep breathing—she tells the reader how to form the habit of breathing from "somewhere near your toes, rather than a space about the collarbone."

By Mme. LINA CAVALIERI

DEEP breathing is no strange science nor obscure art. It is what its name indicates, no more, no less.

It is breathing as deeply as you can, from the very depths of your being, "clear to your toes," a little girl put it—not breathing shallowly from a space somewhere near the collarbone.

I always recognize a shallow breather at sight. Usually she is round shouldered. Always she has a pale skin, pinched nostrils, dull eyes and a languid walk. Always she has little or no magnetism. The magnetic person is one who is most fully alive.

But how to acquire the habit of deep breathing is the important thing. Summon imagination to your aid. Stand at the open window or go to a garden or to a roof where the air is purest, and imagine that you smell the fragrance of a rose. Determine to draw into your being all the fragrance you can gather.

Stand erect and draw in as much air as your lungs seem capable of holding. Hold that breath; that is, keep the air in the lungs so that it may do its cleansing work, while you count five. That is equivalent to five seconds. Gently empty the lungs of the air. Then slowly fill the lungs again, hold as long as you can and slowly expel the air. You will learn to hold the breath longer and longer. Expert and experienced deep breathers can hold the air newly taken into the lungs for fifty seconds. But no beginner in the art should expect, nor try to do this. At first the practice may cause a sensation of dizziness. But this is not alarming. On the other hand, it is encouraging. It means that the poor, pale, ill-nourished brain is receiving as large a blood supply as it needs and it will soon become used to your new generosity.

If you are not so situated that you can get to a garden, a roof or open window, try to go alone to a room where you can recline for a few minutes. There let the muscles become limp. Folding the arms above the breast or clasping the hands loosely above the stomach will aid this.

To be sure that both nostrils are doing perfect work, press one shut by placing the finger against it and breathing through the other. Generally you will discover that the left nostril draws a larger volume of air through it than does the right. I have noticed it very frequently while doing my deep breathing.

"By deep breathing you get free, well-developed lungs. You get chest expansion and pure blood, which will make your complexion clear."

Test the correctness of your breathing by placing your hands against your abdomen. If its walls rise and fall regularly and in obedience to every breath, you are doing deep breathing. If not, you have not mastered the art.

In two weeks, by repeating these exercises six or eight times a day for two or three minutes each time, you will not only have learned how, but you will have derived such benefit from it that you would not ever forget giving up so healthful and improving a practice.

What does it do for one? I can hear as an echo this question, impatiently put by practical American women. That is the feminine variation of the question often heard in America during business hours, a question spoken by men, "What do I get out of it?"

You get out of it free, well developed lungs. You get chest expansion. You get, if you begin early enough, immunity from that dread disease tuberculosis.

You get pure blood which will make your complexion clear.

You energize the whole body, stimulate your vital forces and secure the bright, clear eyes that are the index of health.

Moreover, you get a new aspect of youth, for with renewed health comes always the aspect of fewer years that have been lived.

Beauty Questions Answered

Dear Madam," writes M. C. I., "I take this means of asking your advice as to the best methods to build up the cheeks. I am a girl of eighteen years, measure five feet seven inches in height and weigh 147 pounds, and have always had the best of health. My only trouble is with the contour of my face. My cheeks have sunk considerably during the past year, and I do not understand the change. I would be greatly pleased if you would suggest some remedy for this falling away of flesh in my cheeks."

I should slap those falling, sunken cheeks if they were mine. Slap them vigorously with the palms of the hands covered with cold cream or lanoline, though I think the changing facial contour need not alarm you. Your face is probably losing its childlike curves and growing more womanly.

C. M. writes: "I am deeply interested in your beauty articles, having read them from the beginning. Will you kindly advise me about my little daughter? She is fourteen, and her face is covered with freckles."

First, I should have great hope of her outgrowing the freckles with other childish habits. I should insist upon her wearing a shade hat when in the sunshine, and should insist upon her washing her face several times a day with buttermilk. Before retiring she should bathe her face in equal parts of lemon juice and glycerine.

'As I am unable to find a druggist who keeps an astringent cold cream, will you kindly publish a formula for one that will reduce my double chin? I should like one that can be put up at a druggist's.

Cologne is an astringent. Alcohol is also. Glycerine mixed with equal quantity of water has that action. You will also find that using tincture of benzoin plentifully in cold water, bathing the skin with it, will have an astringent action.

This may be prepared by a druggist:

Vaseline, 100 grams.
Lanoline, 100 grams.
Iodide of potassium, 6 grams.
Tincture of benzoin, 1 oz.

BEAUTY HINTS

Superfluous Hair.

Can you tell me if there is really any way to permanently destroy a very annoying growth of superfluous hair on my face and arms? I am 26 years old and my growth is very bad. My daughter, who is 22, is similarly troubled, and cannot wear short sleeves or low necked gowns. Depilatories seem to be worthless, and you told that about the electric needle is sometimes effective, it is very costly and painful. I should be thankful if you would give me your advice.

MRS. M. M.

You are wise to avoid the electric needle. It is a dangerous operation, and besides being painful, often causes scars. I have frequently stated in these columns that it is foolish to endure the electric needle when there is nature's own remedy against superfluous hair. Depilatories are worse than useless because they cause the hair to grow out thicker than before.

Recently, however, I have come in contact with a method based upon scientific principles, the discovery of an eminent professor of chemistry in an English university, which is now being successful used in this country. If you will write to Balsey Chapelle Dept. K. E. Pine St., Providence, R. I., mentioning my name and enclosing stamp for reply, she will send you, without charge, detailed information of this method, which will undoubtedly enable you to be permanently free from all trace of that unsatisfying blemish.

Creating New Cold and Drought Defying Plants

How the U. S. Government Ransacks the World to Strengthen Our Agricultural Resources

EVERY Winter millions of dollars' worth of fruit and vegetables are killed by the cold. In the Summer, fruit and vegetables suffer almost as much from the sustained droughts which occur from time to time.

To avoid these losses, the Department of Agriculture has for years been endeavoring to make such plants and trees as are susceptible to the cold or to drought hardy enough to resist them. To accomplish this they have sent their explorers far and wide to obtain specimens in foreign climes with which our domestic varieties may be cross-bred and thus strengthened.

Much success has already attended exploration work having such objects in view—the plants secured in many instances being in themselves of no value, yet priceless for the sake of the hardiness or other qualities to be got from them by cross breeding.

Thus, in response to the demand of the upper Mississippi Valley for cold proof fruits, Dr. Frank N. Meyer, one of the Government's explorers in Asia, is making during the last two years a thorough search of the cold and barren slopes of the Tien Shan Mountains and the desert regions of Chinese Turkestan. He reports finding there whole forests of wild apples, apricots, peaches and almonds (all of which are expected to be valuable for breeding purposes), and also remarkable cold proof cherries that grow on bushes.

No plant introduced recently has attracted so much attention as a cold-proof wild peach from China, trials of which have already shown that it can endure surprisingly low temperatures. It promises to be the earliest stock for use south in California, and endures the extreme heat of the Southwest in a remarkable way. Whether it can be crossbred with the ordinary peach has not yet been determined, but if so we are likely to hear less of the destruction of our peach crops by frost in the future.

The Chinese pears and their American descendants, the Kieffer and Le Conte, are not affected by the pear blight which attacks and destroys whole orchards of the more delicate varieties that have come to us from Europe. In the hope of creating superior blight-proof varieties which shall be of better quality than these cooking pears, special efforts are being made to obtain budwood from pear trees all over China and Central Asia.

There is nothing more picturesque in agriculture than the role played by the discovery or introduction of a new kind of plant. The vines of the Chautauqua grape belt, producing annually 200,000,000 pounds of grapes, are derived almost entirely from cuttings of a wild seedling planted at Concord, Mass., sixty-eight years ago. The Elberta and Belle peaches, which have earned many millions for fruit growers since the Fall of 1870, both originated in Georgia from the same tree of an imported Chinese cling peach. The cultivation in California of many square miles of such oranges (navels) as the world never saw before is the result of the importation of a single bunch of "seions," from Bahia, Brazil.

These are familiar examples of discoveries in the agricultural world which are comparable to the inventions of the telephone and the typesetting machine in the mechanical world. Yet Ephraim Bull, who discovered the Concord grape, the Rumph brothers, who originated the Elberta and Belle peaches, and William Saunders, who introduced the navel orange, received no financial advantages from the benefactions they bestowed upon mankind.

The influence which the introduction of a single new species may have on the creation of a whole range of varieties is nowhere more strikingly demonstrated than in the case of the fetching of the famous Bengal rose into Europe. In the eighteenth century there were only thirty varieties of double roses in cultivation. To-day there are more than 2,000 varieties.

In 1907, when the Department of Agriculture first took up work with the soy bean, there were known in this country only twenty-three varieties of that plant. We are now acquainted with at least 300—gathered in the last five years from the bazaars of Oriental villages, or bought from farmers in Japan, India, China, Siberia, Korea and the Dutch East Indies, by trained explorers, American consuls, and missionaries.

Our common persimmon is only one member of a great family of plants widely distributed over the world, and of these more than 200 species have already been collected by botanists. Among them are newly-discovered types of Oriental persimmons, one of which bears large and absolutely seedless fruits, "puckerless" at that. Another is so precocious that the plants when only two feet high bear a heavy load of fruit. Experiments are being made with a view to conferring these valuable characteristics on our own persimmons by cross-breeding.

To help in the improvement of the potato, nearly 250 varieties of that precious vegetable, mostly wild, have been introduced from South America. In attempting to aid in the production of a rust-proof asparagus, thirty-five hitherto unknown kinds have been collected with a view to crossing the familiar "maypop" of our Southern States with the delicious-fruited passion plant of South America and South Africa, about seventy importations of budwood material have been made.

Meanwhile the wheat breeders are testing the new-found wild "emmer" from Palestine in their experiments; cotton varieties of Egyptian origin promise a paying industry in the Yuma region of Arizona, and kaffir corn from China and the Sudan afford expectation of the development of better strains of this great grain crop.

One of the greatest pieces of plant introduction work thus far accomplished has been with the genus which includes alfalfa and burr clover. The world has been literally ransacked for seeds of promising species, and three expeditions into Siberia have been made for the purpose of obtaining ample quantities of certain alfalfas and clovers, to enable large numbers of breeders to work together in the creation of superior drought-proof and cold-proof forms for the North west and Winter-growing varieties for the irrigated valleys of the Southwest.

Finally, mention should not be omitted of the newly introduced "desert line," from Australia, which a frost-proof, bears drought remarkably well, and already has edible fruits which, though small, are of fair quality for making preserves. Entirely new citrus types are expected to be obtained by crossing it with the orange

Ought Modern Women Join the Ugly "Furies?"

LAXMAN'S "ORESTES RESCUED FROM THE FURIES."

The Extraordinary Plan which the Charming "Futuriste" Leader in Paris (Miles Ahead of the Most Militant Suffragettes) Advocates to Enable Woman to Regain Her "Supremacy."

A LIVELY French poetess, Mlle. Valentine de Saint Point, niece of the great Lamartine, complains loudly that modern women are not sufficiently violent. She wants women to be furies, wild beings, who bring vengeance upon the base and cowardly, and spread death and destruction over the earth.

She is not satisfied with the suffragettes. She says that woman should disregard the suffrage and take up the weapons of violence, of which we have too little in the modern world.

Her heroines are not the modern women who have achieved distinction in intellectual callings, but the forceful women of antiquity. It must be pointed out that many of her heroines were exceedingly bad characters, whose influence on the world apart from their achievements as conquerors must have been wholly bad. The modern political woman is surely preferable to a Cleopatra, a Messalina or a Catherine of Russia.

Mlle. de Saint Point is a Futurist, which seems to be a rather backward kind of advanced woman. Her ideal of womanhood is the Fury of Greek mythology. The Furies, we are told, were three goddesses who punished the crimes of those who escaped or defied public justice. The heads of the Furies were wreathed with deadly serpents, and their whole appearance was terrific and appalling.

Here are some of the startling ideas of Mlle. de Saint Point, as expressed in a document recently put forth by her, called "The Manifesto of the Futurist Woman":

"Humanity is mediocre. The majority of women are neither superior nor inferior to the majority of men. Both are equal. Both deserve the same contempt.

"Every woman should possess not only feminine virtues, but virile qualities * * * The man who has only male force without intuition is but a brute. The woman who has only intuition without force is a nullity. We live in an age of feminism, where neither man nor woman has force. Let woman give the inspiration of violence to a feeble, decaying humanity. What we need is more brutes—inspired brutes—who will wipe out the weak and cowardly and put the world back in an earlier and more virile age.

"Woman is destined by nature for this role of destruction and purification. She is inspired by divine fury on great occasions. She can rise above all considerations of physical weakness. The day is coming when one of our sex will sweep the earth like a divine scourge.

"The real women are the Furies, the Amazons, Semiramis, Joan of Arc, Jeanne Hachette, Judith and Charlotte Corday, Cleopatra and Messalina, Queen Elizabeth and Catherine of Russia, Lucretia Borgia and Catherine de Medici; the warriors who fight more fiercely than males, the lovers who stimulate, the destroyers who, breaking the more feeble, help selection by arrogance or despair.

"To the natural cruelty of woman I look for the regeneration of the world. Let woman grasp at what she desires with all the weapons, all the savagery, all the trickery at her command. Let us have a fight to the death for all that is worth having—love, power, wealth, luxury.

"To woman I look to put an end to this stupid rule of the world by worthless statute books. Let blood and passion rule the world, not miserable dirty paper.

"Oh, for a vixen that will conquer Europe as Catherine conquered the savage hordes of Russia; a siren who will bring all the men worth having to her feet as Cleopatra brought them; an avenging spirit who will sweep the foreigners from France as Joan of Arc once did.

"It seems so long since such things happened that they are no more than a dream to us, but I tell you, my sisters, that a glorious day is coming when a woman will once more drench the earth with blood and tears.

"In the days when humanity was great, woman fought for what she desired with the weapons that nature had given her—her physical attractions, her cunning, her secrecy, her cruelty, her vigilance, her vindictiveness, her treachery, her merciless and unrelenting tenacity. She did not prate about her rights. She fought and she won by strength or by craft. The qualities which she displayed she transmitted to her sons, and so men were great, too.

"All the ruthless conquerors of the past have been inspired by women. It was the women of the Goths and Vandals, the Huns and Mongols, who kept afire the devastating spirit of their men. They mutilated the dead and dying after the battles. At sanguinary feasts they urged the warriors to fresh slaughter on the morrow. It was because the Roman women had lost their savagery that the Romans fell before the barbarians.

"When was our French Revolution magnificent? When female furies spread fire and death through the city and the tricoteuses knitted relentlessly as they watched the heads drop into the guillotine basket! When was the Revolution ridiculous? When anaemic, pedantic men began to devise laws for the people!

"Oh, for a world of blood, passion and intrigue!

"In the East woman has no rights, but it is the East where woman takes every right by the power of her body. It is the East that has produced a Semiramis, a Lalla Rookh, a Sultana Jenin, a Ranee of Golconda, and in our own days a Dowager Empress of China.

"A pest upon your world of law and order, respectability and politeness, virtue and hypocrisy!

"Political feminism is a political mistake. Feminism is a cerebral mistake of woman—a mistake which her instinct will make her recognize. Woman must be given none of the rights claimed by the feminist. To give them would bring about none of the disorders desired by the Futurists, but on the contrary an excess of order.

"Let woman regain her cruelty and her violence, which make her persecute the vanquished, because they are vanquished, to the point of mutilating them. Cease preaching that spiritual justice to which she has vainly tried to submit. Women, become once more sublimely unjust, like all the forces of nature! Be the selfish and ferocious mother, who jealously guards her young, holding them by all that is called right and duty while they are physically in need of protection!"

THE DESERT OF WASTED TIME

"If only the years would come back again and bring their chances once more."

That is the cry of millions of remorseful, disappointed men. The cry is vain. The hand of time writes and passes on. We cannot call it back.

But regret for time wasted can become a power for good in the time that remains.

And the time that remains IS TIME ENOUGH, if we will only STOP the waste and the idle, useless regretting.

DON'T WASTE TIME.

These three words should be in the mind of every man every day.

They should be repeated over and over in every pulpit, in every newspaper, in every public school, in every family group.

Only one thing we have—TIME. In time we live, and do our work.

And time we waste like spendthrifts, forgetting its value and our small supply.

* * *

Often we have talked to our readers about waste of time. Often in future we shall talk about it.

We wish that it might be possible to find words that would put into the mind of every young man, and old man, into the thought of every woman and child, the lesson that is taught in the picture on this page.

Wasted time is a great desert, its presiding genius is a silent, cold, heartless sphinx of death. On the sands of that desert of wasted time are scattered the bones of failures and the footsteps that led nowhere.

* * *

Don't waste your time. Don't waste it in idleness, don't waste it in regretting the time already wasted, don't waste it in dissipation, don't waste it in resolutions a thousand times repeated, never to be carried out.

DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME, use it, sleep and work, rest and think.

Save part of the time of yesterday by saving part of the money earned yesterday. Money earned in days past is the TIME of days past.

Save the time of tomorrow by planning to use it carefully, thoroughly and systematically.

The best of us have already wasted time enough for the creating of a dozen reputations, for the doing of ten times as much work as we ever shall do.

Time is wasted that devotes itself to THOUGHT of time wasted.

* * *

Don't waste time.

Remember that however much time you may have wasted already, you have TIME ENOUGH LEFT, if you will use it.

The old man has no excuse for mourning the chances that are gone forever. NO CHANCES ARE GONE FOREVER WHILE LIFE AND TIME REMAIN.

You have seen the rising sun and the setting sun.

They look different to you, but the difference is in your imagination.

The rising sun is the sun of youth, and the setting sun is the sun of age. One is like the other. The rising sun, like the setting sun, gives heat and light to the earth and beauty to the clouds, and no man can tell the difference between a photograph of the sun that is rising and the sun that is setting, or the difference between paintings of the two if the paintings are accurate.

* * *

The rising sun seems to us full of hope, life and promise. The clouds that the rising sun paints and illumines seem full of a beauty and freshness unknown to the clouds of the later day.

The setting sun seems tired, the farewell rays seem different from the early rays that tell of the coming day.

But the difference is in our MINDS.

In the morning we are fresh, full of ambition and hope, and our eyes see things in one way.

In the evening we are tired, some illusions have gone, and the tired eyes see different colors and different lights.

* * *

Actually, sunset and sunrise are the same.

And, actually, the beginning and the end of life are the same as regards power and possibility, if we can only see things as they are, not be discouraged, and not be deceived by the hours and the years that have passed you. Time in the day is as good as ever it was.

The sun's light as the sun goes down is as bright as the light when the sun comes up. What you could do with your hours forty years ago, you can do in those hours now, IF YOU WILL.

* * *

Don't waste time.

If all of your life is ahead of you, plan to use it all, AND BEGIN WITH THE PRESENT HOUR.

If half of your life is gone, plan to make the remaining half as useful as the whole life would have been, without the determination, the incentive and the knowledge of age.

* * *

You KNOW when you are wasting time. You CAN stop the waste if you will.

Begin now to save and use your only real possession.

Time slips through your fingers like sand through the fingers of a child on the sea shore. Each grain of sand is an hour, and each handful is a year.

What others have done you can do if you will. Time enough is still ahead of you. The last days are as good as the first if you refuse to believe in any difference.

Whether your sun be rising or setting use the hours of light and opportunity that remain.

Soon the night, the darkness and the cold will come. All the sand of time will have run through your fingers and your chance in this life will be ended.

"Work, for the night is coming when man's work is done."

Results of the Rockefeller War on Infantile Paralysis

Experts, After Studying Many Cases, Report There Is No Specific Cure Yet, But Recite Many Novel and Interesting Facts About This Cruelest Scourge of Childhood.

INFANTILE paralysis, or acute poliomyelitis, is one of the most terrible and baffling diseases with which science has to deal.

It occurs in epidemics and attacks perfectly healthy children who have been living under healthy conditions. There is no specific cure for it, and no doctor is able to forecast accurately whether it will result fatally or how far the paralysis which has begun to show itself will go.

It is caused by a virus which first attacks the forward horns of the spinal cord, and subsequently may produce paralysis in any part of the body.

An exhaustive study of this cruel disease, entitled "A Clinical Study of Acute Poliomyelitis," has just been published by Dr Francis W. Peabody, Dr. George Draper and Dr. A. K. Dochez, of the Hospital of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, of New York.

This study is based on the observation of 183 cases at the hospital. In their work, the physicians have been aided by the fact that the most important laboratory experiments in infantile paralysis have been made at the Rockefeller Institute, which is associated with the hospital.

This publication gives a most interesting description of the disease and the present methods of treating it. It shows that the disease is due to a virus, not a bacterium, which reaches the spinal cord through the nose, and is also disseminated through the nose; that many persons carry the disease who do not suffer from it; that it is communicable to monkeys and probably to other animals; that common house flies probably act as carriers of the virus; that it is impossible to diagnose its course accurately; that paralysis sets in almost instantaneously; that the approach of death is often heralded by an abnormal acuteness of the senses; that there is no specific cure at present, although experiments on monkeys seem likely to furnish one, and many other interesting facts.

As a result of all the investigations which have been conducted into this disease, it has been decided that it is not due to a bacterium, but a virus. "A bacterial cause," say these doctors, "has been definitely ruled out, and there is now undoubted evidence that the infecting agent belongs to the group of so-called filterable viruses." The virus is remarkably tough. It withstands glycerination for long periods and is not injured by .5 per cent carbolic acid. Freezing at 23 degrees Fahrenheit for forty days does not effect it materially. It is readily destroyed by hydrogen peroxide in 2 per cent solution, by menthol and corrosive sublimate. In monkeys one attack of the disease artificially produced prevents a second successful inoculation.

Seeking a Protective Serum.

Fairly satisfactory results in the production of active immunity, by repeated injections of small amounts of attenuated virus, have been obtained in monkeys, but these have not warranted the application of this procedure in man. The serum of recovered monkeys, and also the serum of human patients that have recovered from the disease have been shown to contain a substance capable of neutralizing the virus.

A most important fact discovered is that the disease is disseminated by persons who are not suffering from it. The chief active carrier of the epidemic is the victim of an abortive attack of the disease, since he may not be confined during any period and is an available prey for distributing the infection as a severe case attended by paralysis. This is equally true of other contagious diseases, notably diphtheria, scarlet fever and typhoid fever.

Since the wide prevalence of epidemic infantile paralysis the existence of a paralytic disease among barnyard fowls has been commonly noted. There seems a possibility that the disease is disseminated by domestic animals, but the conclusions on this point are very uncertain.

Insect contamination with the virus would explain the manner in which many epidemics have been caused. The common house fly appears to fulfill all the conditions required in an agent for spreading the disease. It has been proved by Dr S. Flexner, of the Rockefeller Institute that flies can carry the virus in an actively infectious state for 48 hours or longer.

It has been proved that the virus is nearly always found in the nasal passages of sufferers and that those passages are the means by which the infection is commonly distributed. From the nasal passages the virus quickly reaches the cerebro spinal space where the disease begins to do its destructive work. When the virus was inoculated into the spine of monkeys it quickly made its appearance in the nasal passages.

The virus may be distributed by an infected person when he coughs, sneezes, or even speaks loud.

From experiments with monkeys it would seem that in typical cases of infantile paralysis the serum of the infected individual always contains, after a certain interval, protective bodies, and that these substances persist for a very long time. The place where the virus first begins to do injury to the body is the forward horns of the spinal cord. Its appearance here is accompanied by congestion of the blood vessels supplying the cord and the collection of small round cells in the lymph spaces about the vessels. In the vessels a cellular exudate forms a sheath completely surrounding the vessels for long stretches and in many spaces the cells are so numerous that they form collars and thus exert a mechanical effect in obstructing circulation.

On account of this pressure and anemia the nerve cells degenerate. If the hemorrhage and exudate are absorbed soon enough, the cells may recover their function. If, on the other hand, the anemia and pressure have been prolonged or excessive, the nerve cells go on to complete necrosis or death.

The same sequence of changes, vascular disturbance, and subsequent degeneration of the nervous elements is found to a less degree in various parts of the brain. Many other changes take place in the body during the onset of the disease. Certain glands in the intestines show the most acute swelling. There is a marked degeneration of the liver cells.

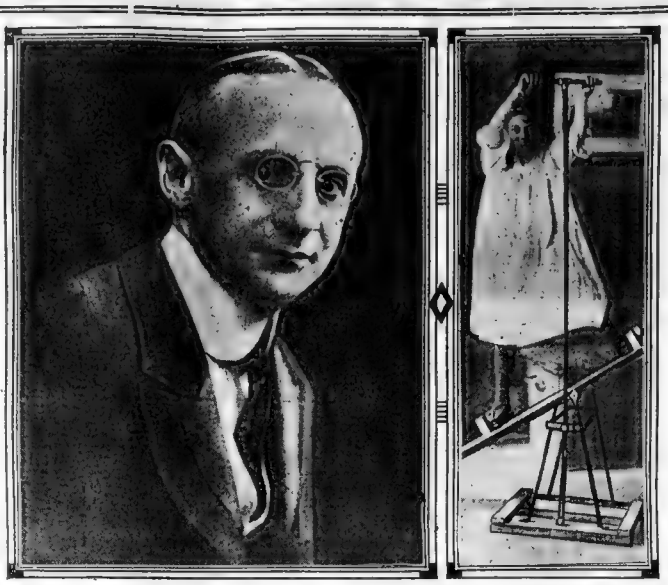
Although childhood is essentially the age which is most susceptible to infantile paralysis, adults are by no means immune. Doctor Wickman says that one-fifth of his cases were over fifteen years old and he mentions one case in a man of forty-six and other cases in even older persons.

The first stage of the disease, lasting about three days, is marked by high fever and a tendency to drowsiness. This drowsiness sometimes lasts only a day or two and then disappears, but often it increases and runs into a mildly stuporous condition with the onset of the acute stage.

In the commonest form of the disease the paralysis appears on the first or second day after onset. "By this time," say the doctors, "the child may be found lying on its back with thighs slightly flexed and everted in a frog-like manner and the head usually rotated to one side. The eyes are partly or wholly closed and there is a tired, wilted expression. Not infrequently the chin is pointed upward a little, indicating a small degree of retraction. From this dreamy or almost sleeping condition the child can be roused suddenly, often by a gentle touch or manipulation of an extremity. Very frequently when the leg is lifted only a few inches from the bed an expression of annoyance rather than distress crosses the face, and if the leg is the paralyzed one the child often tries to free it from the examiner's hands by twisting or some other purpose, the patient is found lying quietly as before, but when he rolls over one arm falls back limp. The child seems unaware of the loss of power.

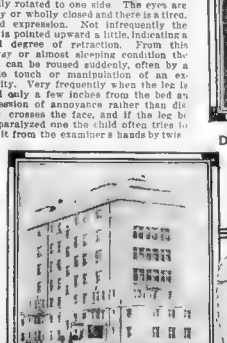
One of the peculiarities of this disease is the very unsystematic distribution of the paralysis. Thus in one case both legs are paralyzed and in another one leg and one arm, in a third there is a paralysis of one lower leg and one upper arm, or perhaps facial paralysis. There is indeed a definite tendency of certain parts of the spinal cord to be involved more frequently than others. The fact that certain parts of the cord are more apt to be affected than others probably depends largely on the blood supply, since the disease follows the course of the blood vessels.

Most frequent are paralyses of the leg and, next to this, paralyses of the arms, resulting from injuries from the fifth to the first segment of the spinal cord.

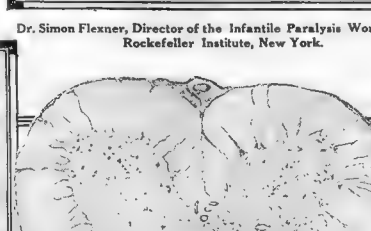


Dr. Simon Flexner, Director of the Infantile Paralysis Work at the Rockefeller Institute, New York.

One of the English Methods of Restoring Legs Paralyzed by Infantile Paralysis.



The Hospital of the Rockefeller Institute Where the Scourge Is Being Studied.



A Spinal Ganglion Showing Diffuse Inflammatory Process and Beginning Necrosis of Nerve Cells.

In a large number of cases the resulting paralysis is traceable to some injury caused by the virus in the brain. To these cases facial paralysis belongs. Another injury resulting from this type of disease is paralysis of the eye muscle, which occurred four times in the hospital cases. The investigators suggest that slight attacks of infantile paralysis may be a more frequent cause of squinting than is commonly believed.

Disturbances of speech are quite frequently met with, and may be of all degrees from hoarseness to complete inability to speak. Difficulties of swallowing are sometimes seen at the acute onset of the disease. This may be a transient symptom which lasts a day or two and consists only in inability to swallow solids. In other cases there may be total inability to swallow lasting for many days. In these brain cases, the tendency to recovery is much better than one would expect.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the fatal cases of infantile paralysis is the effect upon the senses shortly before death. The sufferer then becomes endowed with an abnormal acuteness of perception. With the onset of respiratory difficulty, which is the last stage of the disease, it seems almost as if the children were suddenly awakened and made to realize the struggle before them. Little children seem to age in a few hours. One sees a heedless, careless, sleepy baby become all at once wide awake, high-strung and alert to the crisis, which is breathing.

"The whole mind and body appear to be concentrated on inspiration," say the authors of this study. "Respiration becomes an active, voluntary process, and every breath represents hard work. The child gives the impression of one who has a fight on his hands and who knows perfectly how to manage it. All he wants is to be left alone, not to be interfered with, to be allowed to carry out his fight on his own lines. Instinctively, he husbands his strength, refuses food, and speaks, when speech is necessary, quietly and with few words. One little child of four, so helplessly paralyzed that she was unable to move, but with a mind which seemed to take in the whole situation, said to the nurse clearly but rather abruptly between her hard taken breaths, 'My arm hurts,' 'turn me over,' 'scratch my nostril,' and then when the doctor approaches, 'Let me alone, doctor; don't touch my chest.'

"Pressure on the chest, tight neck bands, anything that obstructs easy respiration, is immediately resented. The child demands constant attention, is irritated unless everything is done exactly as he wishes it, and often shows an appreciation for some especially efficient nurse. He is nervous, fearful, and dreads being left alone. The mouth becomes filled with frothy saliva which the child is unable to swallow, so he collects it between his lips and waits for the nurse to wipe it away. He likes to have his lips wet with cold water, but rarely attempts to take it into his mouth, for he knows he cannot swallow it.

"During the whole course it is remarkable that cyanosis is absent. There is a little bluish tinging of the lips and tongue, but much more distinct is the pallor, which is sometimes striking. Sweating is profuse, then as respiration gets weaker, the mind becomes dull, and with the occasional return of a lucid interval, he gradually drifts into unconsciousness. An hour or more later respiration ceases. This peculiarly alert, keen mental state has been much less noticeable in small babies. They tend to be dull and drowsy most of the time; but in the older children this alertness has been such a characteristic feature of the fatal stages, we almost prefer to have a child brought to us in a stuporous condition, rather than with a mind whose nervous acuity seems due to a perception of impending danger."

When death occurs directly from infantile paralysis and not from a complication, it is due to a failure or paralysis of the muscles that control the act of breathing. These muscles are the diaphragm and the intercostal muscles which are attached to the ribs. The patient may live after paralysis of either the diaphragm or the intercostal muscles, but when both become paralyzed respiration ceases and death follows.

The average mortality for different epidemics of infantile paralysis varies between 10 and 20 per cent.

Peculiarities of Fatal Cases.

In the fatal cases there is usually a pause after acute onset of the paralysis. There may be one or two days without any definite increase in paralysis, but it is frequently noticeable that the children are not doing so well as those who will eventually recover. Often the respiration is more rapid and a trifle more difficult than the degree of paralysis warrants. They are un usually nervous, excitable and irritable.

Then the paralysis may begin to increase. Hoarseness, inability to speak, or difficulty in swallowing may be the first evidence of the spreading lesion. A weakening of the remaining muscles of respiration soon follows. Instead of the normal, smooth, rhythmic cycle, there is a slow lasting for many days. In these brain cases, the tendency to recovery is much better than one would expect.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the fatal cases of infantile paralysis is the effect upon the senses shortly before death. The sufferer then becomes endowed with an abnormal acuteness of perception. With the onset of respiratory difficulty, which is the last stage of the disease, it seems almost as if the children were suddenly awakened and made to realize the struggle before them. Often the respiration is more rapid and a trifle more difficult than the degree of paralysis warrants. They are unusually nervous, excitable and irritable.

Then the paralysis may begin to increase. Hoarseness, inability to speak, or difficulty in swallowing may be the first evidence of the spreading lesion. A weakening of the remaining muscles of respiration soon follows. Instead of the normal, smooth, rhythmic cycle, there is a sharp, jerky, forcible movement of the abdominal wall on respiration. The wings of the nostrils dilate with inspiration and the accessories of respiration in the neck begin to come into play.

As the diaphragm weakens the neck muscles become more and more prominent until it seems as if the whole work of breathing depended on them. The jaws have even been dislocated in the intense effort to breathe. The head is thrown back, and with every breath the lower jaw is pushed forward and downward in an attempt to get air.

The manner in which paralysis shows itself is most uncertain and extraordinary. Two cases, for instance, showed no signs of paralysis that could be discovered by careful examination while the children were lying down, but when they stood up they bended at the hips and fell, after a sudden change of position or balance.

The investigators admit that there is no specific cure for infantile paralysis and it is impossible to forecast the progress of the disease. Even when paralysis has begun to show itself it is impossible to tell whether it will progress to the point of making the sufferer a hopeless cripple or will pass away. The doctors say that there is no specific form of therapy by which a paralysis can be prevented or by means of which resolution of the inflammatory process and consequent return of function may be hastened. The problem of treatment, therefore, consists principally in preventing the spread of the disease to other persons, in giving such remedies as have been known to procure some relief and in attempting the restoration of muscular efficiency and prevention of deformities. They declare that the direct contagiousness of infantile paralysis and its dissemination by healthy carriers is definitely established, and therefore that the maintenance of strict quarantine is essential for the public safety.

The general treatment is the same as for other infections, such as scarlet fever. A great difficulty in treatment arises from the intense pain which the patient suffers whenever moved. Not infrequently this pain is so great that the children develop a dread of being touched and cry out long before they are hurt.

In patients with spontaneous pain the weight of the bed clothes may be sufficient to cause discomfort and a cradle to raise them off their limbs is often a relief. Wrapping the limb in cotton wool blankets and hot water bags is a great comfort. A sudden change from warm Summer weather to a cold rainy day would be accompanied by severe attacks of pain in the patients. The ward was therefore kept at a warm temperature.

When the acute disease has passed away and deformities have begun to make their appearance, it is necessary to resort to mechanical treatment. The Rockefeller Hospital doctors give many suggestions as to the character of this treatment. Massage is said to be most helpful and in the treatment. Heat, and especially baking, exert a good influence on the circulation. Of all methods by far the most valuable one is muscle training.

The slow recovery often continues for a very long time, and to be sure that the muscles have regained all the power they are capable of conscientious treatment ought to be continued for a year and a half or two years.

For Humanity in the Image of Its Creator---

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

THIS world will be intensely interesting one hundred years to come.

Between the Society for Applied Eugenics and the Longevity Bureau and Laboratory, the human race stands a chance of becoming a much better image of its Creator than it is to-day.

Dr. Forbes Winslow, the mental specialist, said to a journalist: "This is by far the most pressing question of our time. We have 132,157 lunatics incarcerated in asylums, and no fewer than 149,000 feeble-minded degenerates at large in the community free at will to become parents. The majority of them are either the children of drunkards or the offspring of feeble-minded parents. In 1859 there was one lunatic for every 586 sane persons. To-day the ratio is one in 276, and in less than 300 years, unless drastic steps are taken, there will be more lunatics and degenerates than sane people among the western nations."

The indiscriminate breeding of lunatics must therefore be stopped by law.

From a report of the chief medical officer of the Board of Education (Sir George Newman) it appears that of the six million school children in England and Wales, not less than sixty-three per cent. suffer from some sort of disease.

We can only secure racial improvement by breeding from the most moral, the most intellectual and the most highly developed physical units, while preventing the propagation of scrubs and degenerates in each and every succeeding generation.

Now there is a regular bureau, to assist those who want to look into the scientific side of the marriage question.

At the Eugenics Record Office, which Dr. Davenport has established at Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, it is possible for any young man or woman to obtain, free of charge, from the highest authorities of heredity in this country, advice as to the hereditary consequences of a possible marriage mating. The applicants for such advice are furnished with blanks on which to record the family history and characteristics of each family, and from this information the biologists can tell what hereditary traits may appear in the children, what possibilities in eye color, hair color or curliness, stature, what possible defects, physical or mental; what possible strong qualities of body or mind.

Besides this, New York, Connecticut and Indiana, and some other States have enacted a law making it permissible to sterilize the chronic criminal, the hopelessly insane and the incurable inebriate, so that they shall not reproduce their kind.

In that ever progressive city—Chicago—there is the Academy of Scientific Thinking, where they teach Orderly and Systematic Thought.

It has been demonstrated that a six months' course in the system of Mind Training or "Mental Gymnastics" will increase the efficiency of normal students as teachers ninety per cent., for pupils taught by this method will acquire the habit of absorbing all knowledge in a six-million school children in England and Wales, not less than sixty-three per cent. suffer from some sort of disease.

In that ever progressive city—Chicago—there is the Academy of Scientific Thinking, where they teach Orderly and Systematic Thought.

It has been demonstrated that a six months' course in the system of Mind Training or "Mental Gymnastics" will increase the efficiency of normal students as teachers ninety per cent., for pupils taught by this method will acquire the habit of absorbing all knowledge in a completely related form, they will become thinkers and competent citizens instead of the lazy ne'er-do-wells that now take up the majority of the product of our schools.

Those who acquire the thought habits and mental technique implanted by this system will be orderly and systematic in their reasoning, they will be rational in all things and irrational in none, their mental efficiency will be increased many fold, with a great economy of time on the part of both teachers and pupils; they will become habituated to act always upon the results of their reasoning, truths will come to reveal themselves to them as Decrees of Related Natural Law instead of mere decrees of the Ego (opinions and beliefs); in a word, they will become wholesale instead of retail thinkers.

The statement relative to teaching sex-hygiene to children is one of the demonstrations of Orderly and Systematic Thought put out by the Academy of Scientific Thinking, organized for the purpose of promulgating this great discovery both in and out of the schools. It is as formulated as to accord with the Decrees of Life and Nature—of Natural Law—of Related Modern Knowledge.

THE LAW OF THOUGHT SYSTEMATICALLY FORMULATED is "A new FORCE in human affairs, second in importance to no world movement since the coming of Christianity."

Human thinking is still in as great a state of disorder and jumble as language was before the alphabet, music before the scale was discovered, printing before Guttenburg, or mathematics before Pythagoras formulated its laws.

The systemization of all thought and knowledge into nine classifications (equivalents—eight scale tones encompassing all of music and twenty-six letter sounds all of language) is a more far-reaching improvement than all the others, for it will do for education, health, economics, government, etc., what the alphabet did for language, movable type for printing and literature, the scale for music and the rules of arithmetic for calculation. Being the exact counterpart of these in its particular field, its mission, like theirs, will be "to bring order out of chaos," and it will do it.

Such a state of diseased thought as has been revealed among children by the death of little Julia Connors and the perverted mind of one of her little associates should make every parent in America realize the necessity of some systemized method of instruction for the little girls and boys on this uncompromising topic.

Parents, scientists, teachers and philanthropists the world over should unite in forming societies to formulate the best method of wise and safe instruction for children regarding the facts of life and birth; and if this School of Self Conservation has a system to reveal, it should be put to a complete test.

Recognizing the operation of the Law of Thought as a part of natural law, the Academy of Scientific Thinking employs RELATED LAW as a guide and standard, and undertakes demonstrations of truth on every subject, not by employing the ego or inner-consciousness of any one as a criterion, or accepting traditional ideals as standard (the usual method), but by substituting as a measure and guide for each statement and conclusion the general principles of laws of thought involved that are infallible and unchanging. The result is dependable accuracy in place of the unreliable guesses and whims usually presented in theses of controversialists.

This presentation of the study of sex-hygiene therefore is no piece of patchwork gathered into a mental "crazy quilt" from the contributions of academic moralists and educators of the old school who have never dreamed of classifying mental and social changes as forms of momentum and are completely unprepared to deal with human affairs as coming under natural law, but instead, it is a dependable demonstration wrought out of the related laws of astronomy, biology and mathematics, in harmony with them, a part of them and entirely free from traditional, egocentric or homecentric taint.

EUGENE—Good evening, Willie. You're not looking very well to-day; what's happened to you?

WILLIE—Oh, it's nothing at all, except from morning to night it's work, work and work—and WORK!

EUGENE—Where are you working?

WILLIE—I'm not working. I start in to-morrow.

EUGENE—Ah! then you'll feel better to-morrow night. Willie, I hear you have a brother who's a good diver.

WILLIE—I betcha my life. He's a regular Annie Kellerman. Do you know what that boy can do? That boy can dive—oh! ess he a diver?—he can dive into five inches of water and never come up again. Chure!

EUGENE—Well, I just happened to mention this, because I, too, have a brother who is quite a diver himself. My brother can take a needle and a piece of thread and throw them into the water, dive in after them, and when he comes up he has the needle threaded.

WILLIE—Huh! That's nothing at all; a mere bag of nuts. My brother can take a silver dollar, chuck it into the reservoir, dive in after it, and when he comes up, huh, he's got the change. Yah! You don't believe it?

EUGENE—Why, certainly not.

WILLIE—Well, neither do I. But I got yet another brother. Oh, he is a schmart Alexander! Last week my father gave him two quarters. He says for one quarter buy cheese, and for the other buy beer. So in half an hour he comes back crying and he says: "Papa, I forgot it; which ess the cheese quarter and which ess the beer quarter?"

EUGENE—Marvelous! But still, Willie, you seem to be quite a bright boy yourself.

WILLIE—Chure! I should laugh to myself I am. Ha-ha!

EUGENE—Well, what makes you so smart?

WILLIE—I am a financial vegetarian, and I eat simply nothing but nuts.

EUGENE—What kind of nuts?

WILLIE—Doughnuts.

EUGENE—I see. But aren't doughnuts rather rich for you?

WILLIE—Maybe they are, but as long as they make me rich I don't never mind. Besides, I have to be rich to be generous.

EUGENE—Generous? Why, you never gave away anything in your life.

WILLIE—Don't you dare flatter me! Why, every morning I buy a paper, and when I get through reading it I give it away, don't I? Huh, what do I care for money? Ha-ha!

EUGENE—I never saw you throw away a paper in my life.

WILLIE—Not throw it away! I said give it away, usually once in a while. Sometimes I sell it again. Chure!

EUGENE—So you manage to maintain both health and wealth on a diet of doughnuts?

WILLIE—Yes, and also I take a cold-water bath every morning. Summer or Summer.

EUGENE—Did you take one this morning?

WILLIE—No. There was no hot water, and, besides, the sink was broke.

EUGENE—Well, what was the matter with the bathtub?

WILLIE—Oh, somebody stole the bathtub!

EUGENE—But couldn't you catch the thief?

WILLIE—No, we didn't miss the tub for two months.

EUGENE—How are you going to spend your vacation this Fall, Willie?

WILLIE—I am going to go hunting.

EUGENE—Ho-ho! You'll make a fine hunter, you will. Why, only this morning I saw you running away from a little pup, and just because he was barking at you. Haven't you ever read in the book that barking dogs never bite?

WILLIE—Yes, I read the book; but how do I know the dog read it?

EUGENE—Well, you know I am something of a hunter myself.

WILLIE—Yes, you hunt for a new flat every time the rent comes due.

EUGENE—My favorite sport is shooting birds.

WILLIE—The only bird you ever shot was a rabbit, and you knocked him down with a stick.

EUGENE—Where do you hail from, anyhow?

WILLIE—Oh, I hail from the sky, same like all other kinds of rain. (He thinks he wants to kid me.)

EUGENE—No, no. You don't get my drift.

WILLIE—No? Then snow again, snow again. Go ahead.

EUGENE—I mean to say, where do you come from? Where is your home?

WILLIE—Oh, I come from Michigan.

EUGENE—I see. Then you're a Michigander.

WILLIE—Yes, and my sister's a Michigoose.

EUGENE—Tell me, Willie, has your mother any more at home like you?

WILLIE—I should despair. Three more.

EUGENE—Altogether?

WILLIE—Oh, no; one at a time.

EUGENE—They say you have quite a melodious voice.

WILLIE—It's a lie. I never did. I don't drink.

EUGENE—What do you mean?

WILLIE—You said I had a melodorous voice.

EUGENE—Oh, no; melodious, full of melody; that you sing well.

WILLIE—Yes, my voice is deep.

EUGENE—Did you ever study music?

EUGENE—Is that so?

WILLIE—Yes, he lived upstairs and I lived in the basement.

EUGENE—Well, I happened to hear you sing once, and really you are a very clever boy. In fact, you have quite some ability.

WILLIE—Yes, the doctor said I had it.

EUGENE—Had what?

WILLIE—Debility.

EUGENE—Where did you sing last?

WILLIE—Oh, over at the Metropolitan.

EUGENE—You don't mean at the Opera House?

WILLIE—Chure! I used to sing out for the cabs in front every night.

EUGENE—Oh, I thought you meant on the stage. I thought you could act.

WILLIE—Of course I can act. I used to be an actor in the early days. I was with a circus.

EUGENE—What did you do in the circus?

WILLIE—All I had to do was to stick my head in the lion's mouth twice a day. The rest of the time I had to myself—Chure-

EUGENE—Weren't you afraid?

WILLIE—Oh, no; my brother played the lion.

ENGENE—You know that I have a very creditable record myself before the footlights.

WILLIE—Then I pity you after the footlights.

ENGENE—Let me tell you I was an actor, and I used to be IT.

WILLIE—Yes, with a capital N. What was your specialty?

EUGENE—My what?

WILLIE—I wouldn't say it again. What did you used to do it?

EUGENE—Why, I used to give an imitation of a violin.

WILLIE—I can't stand for you stringing me any longer.

HEINE—Honus I am worried
HONUS—About what?
HEINE—My brain
HONUS—If I was you I wouldn't let a little thing like that worry me
HEINE—Didn't you know I was a poet?
HONUS—No I always thought that you was harmless.
HEINE—Honest, I'm a poet. Do you want me to prove it?
HONUS—No, I would rather admit it. Do you write for the magazines?
HEINE—No, I write good poetry.
HONUS—I never heard of you.
HEINE—Didn't you ever hear of Schiller?
HONUS—Sure I have heard of Schiller
HEINE—Then you must have heard of "Heine."
HONUS—You bet. There is a poet who is on a high peanchel of fame. But he is dead.
HEINE—Well, many people who have heard my poetry have told me that I belong where Heine is HONUS—And if you keep on writing poetry you'll be where he is sooner than you expect it
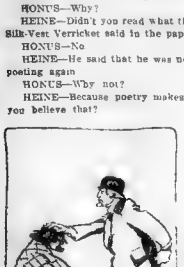
HEINE—But I got to quit.
HONUS—Why?
HEINE—Didn't you read what that great poet George Silk-Vest Verricket said in the paper last week?
HONUS—No
HEINE—He said that he was never going to do any poeting again
HONUS—Why not?
HEINE—Because poetry makes a man insane. Do you believe that?



HONUS—Sure I have read lots of poetry that made me crazy.
HEINE — It ain't reading it. It's writing it. He says that all great poets are crazy. And the greats the poet the nuttier he is HONUS — By golly, Heine! I am just beginning to realize what a great poet you must be!
HEINE — It's pretty tough on us poeters. It used to be an honor to be a poet. They used to put you in the hall of fame. Now if they catch you they're liable to put you in a padded cell.
HONUS—And these days ,believe me, there's many a poet that deserves it
HEINE—Well, let me tell you they'd have a hard time putting me in a straitjacket for anything I write.
HONUS—They couldn't do it to you
HEINE—Why not?
HONUS—They'd have to prove it was poetry first
HEINE—Do you mean that my poetry ain't?
HONUS—I never saw any of your poetry. What kind do you write?
HEINE—Every day I write an ode.
HONUS—A what?
HEINE—An ode. You see, as a poet I am an oder
HONUS—An oder?
HEINE—Yes, an oder
HONUS—I believe it.
HEINE—And that's what worries me. I'm afraid any day that somebody will read one of my poems and have me locked up in Matteawan.
HONUS—Heine, you are foolish to worry. Even if you are off your nut there is hope even for you.
HEINE—What do you mean?
HONUS—Didn't you read where that great London sturgeon, Dr. William Maule Smith, has discovered an operation whereby if your brain is no good he can take it out and put in a brand new one?
HEINE—Do you mean that he can make a brain as good as mine?
HONUS—Much better, or he wouldn't bother with it.
HEINE—By golly, I think I'll buy one.
HONUS—He ain't got 'em on the market yes. But when he does it will be a great thing. Of course, they'll be expensive, but who wouldn't save up to buy an extra brain?
HEINE—Everybody could have two sets of brains, and when one brain got tired, all you'd have to do would be to go down to the doctor, have him take it out, and put in the other one

SHOULD OLD MAIDS BE CHLOROFORMED?

Western Minister Says They, Ain't No Good, Nohow.

It may be mere sentiment, but there's something about the mere name of Florence Nightingale that lights up the darkness of the world as her lamp did the darkness of the Crimean hospitals.

And ask any one that even had a maiden aunt if he would have had her chloroformed. Not on your life; not when she slipped him cookies and saved him from lickings that he undoubtedly deserved.

There's none of them we can spare —flappers, wives, mothers, old maids, grandmothers—no chloroform for any of 'em

A Poet's Dream

If every word would end in "ale,"
A poet would be blithe and hale
To find a rhyme he could not fail.

Or, if they all would end in "O,"
How trippingly a rhyme would go—
A poem would be finished—so.

Notes of the Beaches

The Life Guards' Society at Peninsican Beach has passed a resolution condemning the rescue of bathers by persons who are not members of the organization.

Bird Village is covered with posters requesting visitors who may find themselves drowning on Sundays not to yell loud enough to distract people going to church

Squire Filkins of Jim's River, fined a visitor $7.50 last week for stealing sand from the beach. The man's shoes were found to be full of sand, and the squire cannarut him severely for trying to sneak away with county property in such a manner. The visitor produced a $50 bill to pay his fine, and he had to stay in jail three days while Squire Filkins went to New York to get it changed. The squire's expenses amounted to $6.10, and this was deducted from the $50.

IN a conspicuous place in the parlor of a country hotel was an inscription: "Ici on parle Francais." The proprietor was asked, "Do you speak French?"

"Not me," the man replied, "United States is good enough for me."

"Why do you have that inscription on the wall then? That means 'French is spoken here.'"

"You don't mean it!" exclaimed the hotel keeper. "Well, I'll be darned! A young chap sold that to me for 'God Bless Our Home!'"

IT is the custom for the stage managers of all travelling theatrical companies to go to the theatre immediately upon the company's arrival in town and lay out on a sheet of paper a list of the dressing-rooms to be assigned to the various members of the company.

The stage manager of this particular company repaired to the "opry house" as soon as the troupe had landed in town. He made inquiry of an old man whom he found sweeping off the stage, and who proved to be the manager, about the number of dressing-rooms, so that he could lay out the list for the actors.

"We have two dressing-rooms," said the old man.

"But," said the stage manager, "I have a star and thirty ladies and gentlemen in my company. How can I put them into two rooms?"

"Well," replied the old man, "you can put the star in the little room and the thirty people in the big room."

"You don't seem to understand," said the stage manager. "Besides the star there are thirty men and women. How can they dress together?"

"What's the matter?" asked the old man. "Ain't they speakin'?"

DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON, the well-known physician and writer, was once called upon by a young matron with more than her share of flesh and fat.

She told the doctor that she had read his article on "Fat and Its Follies" in a popular magazine, and she wanted him to help her get rid of some of her fat. After a few preliminary questions, he handed the lady a diet list, telling her to come back in two weeks.

The good doctor's consternation can scarcely be imagined when he saw his patient again. She looked 50 per cent. fatter and weighed twenty pounds more. He was more than puzzled. His list contained no sweets of any kind nor any fat producers; yet it was putting flesh on at an enormous rate.

"You are sure that you ate the things on this list?" the doctor questioned severely.

"Yes, Doctor," was the firm answer.

"What else did you eat?"—as a sudden inspiration seized him

"Why, nothing but my regular meals," was the indignant answer.

Married Life the 17th Week

NOTE—In the stories you read of "Married Life in the Nineteenth Year," "Why I Left My Home," and all that sort of thing, you never hear of the poor husband. Perhaps he is too busy to write; perhaps nobody cares about him, anyway. Here for the first time we have a husband giving his views of married life in the way so many women have been doing of late.

BY ROBERT SHERBERT TURNER

MARRIED life is bad enough at home, but at a Summer resort it's the dickens.

When the boss unexpectedly insisted that I take a vacation, I had to go and join Lucy in the Candbean House, which is situated in one of the O'Sullivanest spots in O'Sullivan County.

This business of going away in Summer always gets my goat. I'd sooner stay at home, but when everybody's doing it you just have to close up your house and go away to be uncomfortable for two or three weeks.

If you decide to stay home you meet Smith on the street one morning.

(Fellows going away from the city always slap you on the shoulder when they tell you about it. They talk about the woods or the mountains, and you know all the time the only woods they'll see will be in pictures on the railroad folders. But the mere mention of woods makes them slap you terribly hard on the back as they tell what they're going to do.)

To resume. Smith will say, "Hello, old top! I'm off to Bucketdogue Lakes tomorrow. Where are you going this year?"

"I'm going to stay at home this Summer," you say, feeling suddenly as if you had pleaded guilty to some heinous crime.

"Not going away?" says Smith in tones of amazement.

"No—that is, I don't think so," you reply weakly.

"Oh, I see," says Smith, in a tone of deep meaning.

"Oh, it isn't that," you answer hastily. "In fact, it costs me more to stay at home than it does to go to the country There are the roof gardens and—er—all that.'

"Yes, yes, I know," Smith replies. "Well, its' tough, old man, that you can't get away this year. A vacation in the woods braces a man up for the whole year. It's well worth the investment."

"It isn't the investment I mind," you will say. "I can recuperate better at home."

"Of course, you can, old chap," says Smith, in the most infernally patronizing tones you ever heard. You get a bit peevish.

"I may run up to Mosquitogue River later in the Summer. ,ou say "in fact, I'm going up there anyway." This you add defiantly.

And in consequence of this interview with Smith you spend an unpleasant month at Mosquitogue, when you might have been at home and happy.

So, thanks to the unexpected urging of the boss to take a vacation, I was now seated in a couch full of smoke and cinders on my way to the Candbean House in O'Sullivan County

"I'm going to the Candbean House," said a thick-necked person wearing a striped sweater. "Where are you going?"

"To the same place," I told him.

"You picked a live one, pal," said the stranger. "Me and a bunch of club fellers is going there, and you bet we'll keep things humming. I don't expect to get to bed before 5 any morning"

"What club do your friends belong to?" I asked him.

"The Dry Dock A. C.," he responded. "It's where Kid Leaches, the lightweight challenger, had his first bout. He's with the bunch, and we'll keep things going. Got phonographs and all that junk with us. We'll kill a keg of beer every evening."

Full of the pleasant reflections which this information inspired, I reached the station and headed for the bus marked Candbean House, but a wild rush of the club men filled up the vehicle.

"Ten minutes from the station, over a prettily winding road," says the booklet of the Candbean House.

I made the distance in forty-five minutes, walking as fast as I could. My suitcase, which weighed about seventy-five pounds at the station, weighed at least half a ton when I reached the Candbean House, and Lucy, who was talking with a man I later discovered to be a drummer in ribbons, let her eyes rest stabbingly upon my wilted figure.

"THERE ain't no true art any more," said the man in the last year's suit, all pressed up.

"Sure there ain't," said the man who had just come from the tailor shop. "Us song writers is getting wise. We give it to the public what they want. Why don't you stop writing all the time them ballads! Ballads is a joke. Nobody buys them. You are all the time telling me that you are a poet. What is poets? What we want is ragtime all the time. Look at me. This suit I just got it from one of the best tailors in New York. Sixty dollars. You call yourself a song writer. And all the time you are writing ballads. What good is ballads? You can't snap your fingers and wiggle when you are singing 'Sweet Dreamland Faces,' and you know it. Give it to the public what they want."

"Them ballads is going to come back some of these days," said the man in the last year's suit. "Come over here into the shade and I will read you a lyric that is going to knock them stiff, Kid."

The man that had just come from the tailor-shop sighed wearily

"There is lots of shade inside Jake's," he said. "I got it plenty of money. Come on in and I will blow you to a stein, and then I shall have to listen to your ballad."

Once inside the cool resort, the man with the last year's suit bright ened up. The cool stein and the electric fan acted as a sort of tonic. "Listen to this," he said

"A girl was setting on a bench
One evening in the Spring;
But all was grief within her heart,
Though she heard the song birds sing.
She was thinking of her sweetheart
While the blossoms they did spray,
But he had went beyond recall,
So to herself she did say:

CHORUS:

" 'His eyes was like two lakes of blue,
His hands was soft and white;
His nose was like the red, red rose
That blushes day and night.
My heart has broke forever,
But another beau does court me;
I love my dead love best of all,
But a dead love can't support me.' "

The man that had just come from the tailor shop shook his head mournfully.

"It won't work, pal," he declared. "How many times have I got to tell you that the American public doesn't want them ballads? Ballads was all right in the old days."

"I still believe that the days of the ballad will come back almost before you know it," said the man with the last year's suit. "Merit is merit, and there ain't no getting away from that. It will be the same again as it was a few years ago, when I made so much money out of ballads like 'The Bookworm Had a Hookworm,' and 'I Cannot Sing the Old Songs, and the New Songs Give Me Cramps.'"

"You're chasing them butt-rifles, as one of them poets once said," insisted the man with the new suit. Have another stein before you go, and don't make up no more ballads. They was all right when folks was simple, but the New Yorkers are wise now, you bet, and you have to write good stuff for them. Irving Berlin knows how to write good stuff. How much do you suppose this fellow Shakespeare and this fellow Byron could make now? They wouldn't be wise enough. What did they know about rag?"

"Good-by," said the man with the last year's suit, putting away his manuscript and starting to the door.

"Good-by," said his prosperous friend. "Remember, no ballads!"

Signs of the Times

WHEN YOU SEE—

—Large puddles of water all over your frock coat and silk lid you hung in the window to air out, it is a sign the lady in the apartment above you is watering the flowers in the window box.

—The waiter put your glasses on the left of your plate and consult the menu every time you order anything, it is a sign he doesn't belong to the union.

—Food prices drop away down, it is a sign you should consult an oculist.

—Bryan out of the race, it is a sign our country has become an absolute monarchy.

—A husband and wife beating it for Reno, it is a sign they are going to be married to each other if their trip is successful.

—The ambulance and coroner dashing into the country, it is a sign somebody's joy ride has been interrupted.

—The women all rushing out to vote, it is a sign the polling place is in some millinery shop.

Adventures of the Hunters

A Thrilling Account of the Hunter Family Hunting a Summer Resort—in Ten Palpitating Chapters.—Camping Out, This Week.

By LEWIS ALLEN

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS:

Mr. Hunter prefers the beach, so they go to the mountains, where Mrs. Hunter's mountain dress is called a Texas Tommy costume, whereupon they hurry to a beach. There a clam cannery is in such bad odor they flee to a farm where bees, poison ivy and fells nephitica drive them to Lake Winnisemegrants. At this charming spot a peroxide widow spoils the scenery for Mrs. Hunter and they try camping out.

CHAPTER V.

"ISN'T this beautiful?" asked Mrs. Hunter, as they climbed out of the team that left them in a secluded spot on the shore of Squam Lake

"It'll do," said Hunter, separating the bundles and looking about for a site on which to pitch the tent.

"I suppose it WOULD be more attractive if there were a blonde widow about," she replied, sarcastically, "but that's just why I brought you her, so we could camp out MY OURSELVES," and Mrs. Hunter sniffed as she remembered her experience at Lake Winnisemegrants.

"Oh, I know who you mean, Ma," chimed Willie.

"Hush, Willie, and help me," said Hunter nervously.

"That blonde lady's the one Pa said was a Lallapaloosa, and I thought a Lallapaloosa was a kind of a bird"——

"William!" shouted Hunter, red in the face.

"I suppose your father thought she WAS," snapped Mrs. Hunter, "but don't talk about such silly things, help your father."

Mrs Hunter opened cans and set up the collapsible oil stove while Hunter built a table, put up an awning over it, and made a fireplace for the camp fire at night and for boiling water over a crane.

With canned meats and biscuits made from the celebrated "Add-a little-water-and-take-a-chance" brand of flour, they managed to make a meal.

"You can catch some fish this afternoon and we will have a fine meal to-night," said Mrs. Hunter.

"I hope so," grunted Hunter, "where's the sugar for this coffee—this is coffee, is it not?"

"It is—not, it is tea," said Mrs. Hunter, "and the sugar is in that tin marked 'S.'"

Hunter shook a good supply of it in his tea, stirred it, took a big swallow and leaped to his feet.

"I don't mind your poisoning me," he managed to say, "but use more judgment than to do it away out here; think of the extra cost it would be to get my corpse back to the city."

"I—I don't know as I would bother, you—you brute," sobbed Mrs. Hunter, "what's the trouble now?"

"Taste that tea!" yelled Hunter. Mrs. Hunter tasted of it.

"Why, you simpleton, you put salt in it instead of sugar," she exclaimed.

"Well, you told me the sugar was in the can marked 'S.'"

"Here it is, helpless!" snapped Mrs. Hunter, handing him another can.

"Why, that is marked 'S,' too," said Hunter.

"Yes, I marked it 'S' for sugar, did you think sugar began with 'X'?"

"Well, you marked the salt with an 'S,' too," complained Hunter.

"What would I mark it with—oh, yes, now wasn't that droll, I marked both the sugar and salt with an 'S,'" and Mrs. Hunter laughed merrily.

"No, it wasn't droll, it was asinine. I suppose you put the kerosene and the ketchup in similar bottles and marked them both with a 'K.' Pass one of the what-is-its—no. I'll reach it myself, you are not strong enough to lift one," and Hunter reached over and took one of the biscuits.

Mrs. Hunter started to sob again, thought better of it, because she wasn't such a fool after all, went into the tent and brought out something in a glass.

"Here," she said winking mysteriously to him and nodding her head toward little Willie, "here's some of that tonic you need. I brought some out—no, Willie, it is only bitter medicine," as Willie reached for it.

Hunter took it, smelled it, grinned broadly and tossed it off

"You are all right," he said, "if I could have some of that tonic with every meal"——

"I brought a quart, to surprise you," said Mrs. Hunter.

That afternoon Hunter went out fishing, brought back a good string and was in a much better mood. Then he rowed across the bay to a farmhouse to get some milk and bread and chickens. When he came back he was decidedly talkative, and his wife noticed that he smuggled something from the boat into the bushes.

They had a much better supper, but Hunter was so hilarious that his wife became suspicious.

"John William Hunter, what was that you took from the boat and put in the bushes over there?"

"Eh? That? Oh—er, that was nothin', nothin' at all except some—a—why nothin'"——

"That's right, Ma, t'wan't anything, I found it there myself, 'twas only a jug and it had some smelly stuff in it I poured out an' filled the jug up with water and put a lot o' pollywogs in it"——

"You—poured—it—out! You—well, I'll be eternally dash-banged, of all the"——

"Hush, John. It served you right. No, Willie, that is all right, it was nothing your father wanted at all," and Mrs. Hunter leaned back and laughed heartily.

"I suppose you got that—er—jug over at the farmhouse where you went for the provisions," said Mrs. Hunter.

"Yes. I got it"——

"For Willie to keep pollywogs in," laughed Mrs. Hunter.

"It looks like rain I wish we had pitched the tent up on that knoll"——

"What difference does that make?" asked Mrs. Hunter.

"Why, it it rains—oh, never mind," said Hunter, grinning.

He was quite right about the rain. He was awakened during the night with the downpour. Things were floating around in the tent and some were drifting out of the front where they left the flaps open for the air Feeling chilly, Hunter groped about for the bottle of "tonic" his wife had so thoughtfully brought, thinking to take one good drink before he awakened her and rescued their floating belongings.

"E-YOW—WOW! Ugh—B-R-R-R'!! For the love of Pete! What the"——

"S-matter, John?" asked Mrs. Hunter, sleepily.

Coughing and gasping, he jumped up to light the lantern.

"Murder!" he yelled, landing in a puddle.

Mrs. Hunter also leaped from her cot.

"O-O-O-O-O, HELP! I'm drowning!" shrieked his wife.

A lighted lantern showed several inches of water on the ground under the tent and more pouring in.

"You get so much better view here than up on a knoll," said Hunter sarcastically.

"You would drag me out camping," said Mrs. Hunter.

Hunter opened his mouth to speak, but he was speechless Instead he found the right bottle and consoled himself.

Then he managed to gasp. "What was in that other bottle I drank from? Was it prussic acid?"

"Only kerosene; I suppose you'll get lit up now"——

"Great joke," growled Hunter

"You march to the nearest farmhouse, get a team, take us there to get dry, and to-morrow we go to Rawport and stop at the Swelltonic"

"You thought camping would be next to nature"——

"Next to nothing!" exclaimed Mrs. Hunter, splashing back to the cot bed, "you beat it along and get that team."

MRS. MILLS was a woman of few words. One afternoon she went into a music store to buy the book of an opera for her daughter. A salesman walked up to her, and in her quiet way Mrs. Mills said:

The salesman frowned.

"What's that, ma'am?" he said.

Uncertain.

"HAVE you purchased your new car yet, Mrs. Noorich?" asked the visitor.

"No, Mr. Smithers, I ain't. I can't make up my mind whether to get a gasolene car or a limousine car. Maybe you can tell me—does limousine smell as bad as gasolene?" inquired the lady.

Unexpected.

WHEN Mrs. Mulligatawny arrived at her holiday haunt, to her dismay she found that her watch was missing. Thinking that she probably had dropped it on the thick, soft dining room carpet, she wired to the maid at home:

"Let me know if you find anything on the carpet in the dining room."

A few days later she received a letter from the maid as follows:

"Dear Madam: I was to let you know if I found anything on the dining-room carpet. This is what I found this morning: Three champagne corks, eighteen cigar ends, five cigarette ends, thirty-six burnt matches, and one pink satin slipper."

Couldn't Miss.

THE man with the St. Vitus's dance and the man who stammered went out to shoot sparrows. The man who stammered had the first shot, but failed to bring down a single bird. He handed the gun to his companion, saying:

"You t-t-try your l-l-luck."

With many contortions and spasmodic movements the nervous one took aim and, to the utter astonishment of both, brought down a bird. The stammerer gazed at him in silence for a minute and then remarked:

"N-n-no w-wonder you k-k-killed a s-s-sparrow. Y-you aimed all o-o-over the whole d-d-darned t-t-tree."

Johnny Couldn't See the Idea of It.

AT the bidding of the school board in a Missouri town, a physician visited the local school. He examined the eyes of the children. The teacher next day sent a note to the mother of one pupil, saying that he was "not perfect optically." The following day Johnny brought back a reply to the teacher which read:

"The old man whaled Johnny last night and I took a hand at him this morning, and I think you will find him all right now."

Quite the Wrong Ideah, Reahly.

AN Englishman went to Paris, where he stayed for some time. When he returned to his home a friend asked him how he had liked France.

"A beastly country," he replied, "perfectly beastly. They know nothing there. They don't even know how to talk. Why, they call bread 'pain!'"

"But," his friend said, "that is the French word for bread."

"Oh, I know that. But why should they call it that? It really is bread, you know."

It Wasn't Soap.

A NEW JERSEY farmer came to the city the other day and, among other things, he visited a high-class restaurant. His appetite ran to cheese and inquiring of the waiter what sort of cheese was listed he desired "something new." "Why don't you try a bit of Roquefort?" suggested the waiter. "What's that" asked the farmer. "Hang it," he added, "bring me some. I like the name, anyway. He ate of it and liked it. So he thought he would take some home to his wife. Arriving late he laid the small cheese wrapped in silver paper on the sideboard. He forgot to inquire about it till next night, and then he asked his wife how she liked it. 'Oh, I s pose it's mighty stylish up to the city, but I jes kinder couldn't use it. I couldn't get no foam out of it, an' when I washed the children they smelled kinder funny, and I can't say's I like it."

Necessity Cleared the Air.

"WE hear much of compromise nowadays," said a politician recently, "and it is sometimes a good thing." He knew a young man who got married about a year ago, and he and his wife were constantly arguing as to whether they should buy two bicycles or an up-to-date motorcycle. Meeting him one day, he said:

"My wife and I wrangled for months, but, thank goodness, we've compromised at last!"

"What have you compromised on?"

"A baby carriage," he proudly answered.

Here's the REAL Simple Life for You--

By BERTON BRALEY

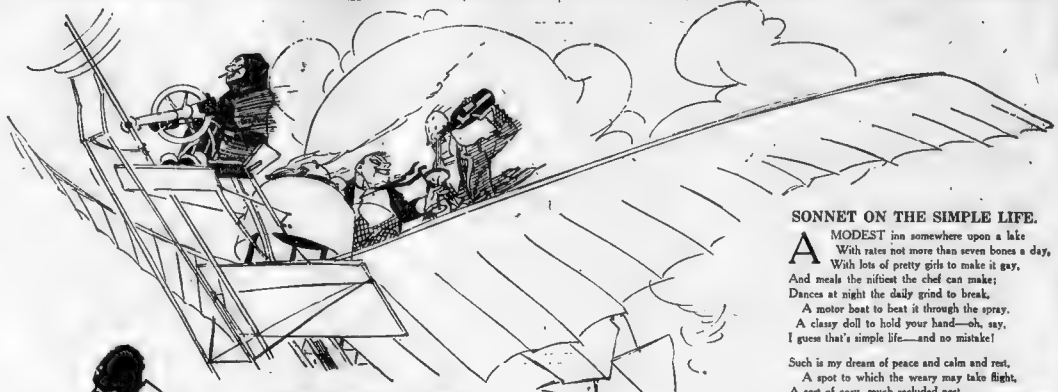
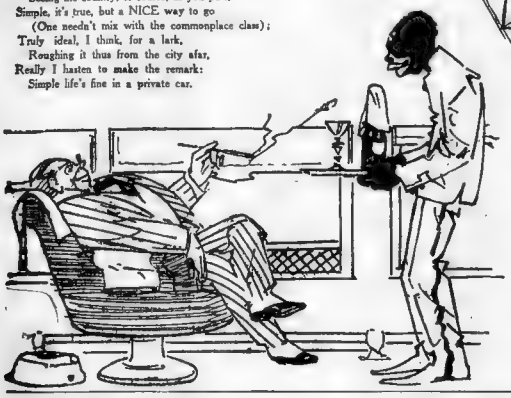
UNASSUMING DESIRES.

LADIES and gentlemen, kindly give ear,
I would be heard in a plain little song,
Breathing a sentiment modest and clear,
Helping the simple life program along:
Give me no hunting lodge up in the peaks,
Give me no place where the country homes are,
Let me but spend a few simplified weeks,
Roughing it some in a private car.

Nothing much splendid or nobby I ask,
Rosewood and leather are simple and good,
Linen—a very plain woven damask—
Tables, perhaps, of mahogany wood;
A porter, a cook and a waiter, perhaps,
To bring you the wine and to light your cigar,
Yes, I am one of the plainest of chaps,
Me for the simple life lived in a car.

Gay little party of people you know,
Seeing the country, of course, as you pass,
Simple, it's true, but a NICE way to go
(One needn't mix with the commonplace class);
Truly ideal, I think, for a lark,
Roughing it thus from the city afar,
Really I hasten to make the remark:
Simple life's fine in a private car.





THE SIMPLE LIVERS.
(Up in the Air.)

MY simple life ideal,
If I could make it real,
Would be a long vacation on a ship of air,
With an aviator feller
Who would tend to the propeller
While I took my ease and comfort in a wicker chair.

I should have a pleasant waiter
Who could aid the aviator,
And attend to all my wishes when I tapped the bell;
And I'm sure the scenic beauties
Would bestir him at his duties,
And the voyage might be truly something ultra-swell.

I should want the airship stable,
So as not to pitch the table
When I eat my simple viands in the sky's clear blue;
So when you say you're ready
With such an airship steady,
I'll accept an invitation for a sail with you!

SONNET ON THE SIMPLE LIFE.

A MODEST inn somewhere upon a lake
With rates not more than seven bones a day,
With lots of pretty girls to make it gay,
And meals the niftiest the chef can make;
Dances at night the daily grind to break,
A motor boat to beat it through the spray,
A classy doll to hold your hand—oh, say,
I guess that's simple life—and no mistake!

Such is my dream of peace and calm and rest,
A spot to which the weary may take flight,
A sort of cosy, much secluded nest,
With something doing, morning, noon and night;
There let me hide myself from towns afar,
At some big Summer palace—with a bar!

(Ten young men and ten young women agreed to always tell the truth, regardless of results or of whose feelings they hurt.)

CHAPTER IX.

"HA, good morning, doctor; haven't seen you since the other evening when we joined the 'Truth Tellers' Association.' What do you think of it?" asked Miss Trixy Trigher, the well-known young lady lawyer.

"Good morning, Miss Trigher," replied young Dr. Willie Hellpus, "yes, I remember you seemed quite interested in the association. I think it a great thing, especially for us professional folk; it will instill greater confidence in us on the part of the public."

"Dear me, doctor, why pose like that?"

"I don't quite get you?" said the doctor.

"Why say 'we folk'; that only bluff, now isn't it?"

"Why no—er, yes, as long as we must tell the truth, it is a bit of bluff. But tell me, why do you pose?"

"I pose? And how——"

"Why by wearing such clothes. Now, you know you do not like those high starched men's collars, nor that thick man's vest and coat and plain skirt—and you had much rather have a nice, light, comfortable and prettily beruffled and panniered foulard skirt than the heavy black cheviot thing you are wearing."

"Yes, doctor, you are right. As long as we are telling the truth, we might as well practise it. Now, tell me how you got along? You do not have much of a practice, do you?"

"No, I don't. It is a mighty small practice. I have a little money left me. And you, Miss Trigher? You seldom ever have a client, do you?"

"Hardly ever," sighed Miss Trigher, "but mama sends me a good allowance. Well, so long, you old truth teller."

Half an hour later the doctor's telephone rang.

"Well?" he queried. "What's that? Jones very ill? All right, if it is an emergency case I will cancel an appointment I have here in the office. I have just returned from performing an operation in a home up on Fifth avenue, and my car is ready," whereupon Doc hung up the receiver, dusted his medicine case, rushed out and took a street car up to the Jones house.

"Struck by Old Billyun's automobile? And skinned your knee? Why, get a pair of crutches and a wheel chair at once; do not leave your house. I will look after the case. Remember now, when you are brought into court you cannot walk, and can scarcely move. I shall sue for $300,000," and calling a cab Miss Trigher hurried her client, who had walked with agility up the three flights to her office, to his home.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The "Truth Tellers' Association" now has a membership of two.

CATERPILLARS.

CATERPILLARS are boneless animals brought into the world so that there would be something besides mice to frighten women. The hairy ones walk along like a lost tooth brush looking for its handle.

Caterpillars look like curtailed worms sadly in need of a shave, and they ought to wiggle themselves to some fuss-class barber. Caterpillars are made in all shapes, styles, and shades. Some hairless, looking like an animated pickle; others crawling around togged up in a fur overcoat.

The caterpillar belongs to the worm family, and the early bird that catches the hair worm imagines himself swallowing a piece of last year's camel's hair underwear. Caterpillars feed principally on holes in leaves, and they take to the green with the same enthusiasm as golfers.

The caterpillar is a good mother to her kittenpillars. Caterpillars go along with such a rolling, billowy motion it takes the little ones many days to learn how to perambulate properly without getting seasick.

A butterfly is a caterpillar dressed up in its Sunday clothes. There are no negro butterflies even though they all come from a co-coon. Caterpillars are very voracious, and if the small boy had the appetite of a healthy caterpillar every family tree would look like a piece of Renaissance lace when they got through. A caterpillar would chew a leave of absence. When caterpillars change to quiescent pup-a they ought to be called dogger pillars. When they go to sleep they lay their heads on a cater-pillar.

CARNEGIE.

CARNEGIE was born so that authors would have some excuse for writing books, and that anecdote writers would have a prolific subject to work on. Little did his folks dream that some day their son would be a philanthropist. In fact they didn't know what that word meant.

Carnegie loved his native land, but when his mother threatened him by proclaiming that he would have to read all the books of Ian Maclaren and J. M. Barrie in order to perfect his Scotch dialect Andy rebelled. He told his mother that his dialect was all to the mustard. This was a sharp retort for the boy to make. "Ye wurreds be too perfect," said his mother. "I dinna ken what makes it, but ye must pronounce ye wurreds more thick and dislocate them more; who wots but soom day ye mought be a Harry Lauder."

"Mither," replied Andy, "I would take a dose o' Laudernum furrest.'" Then he made preparations to emigrate to America. The day he left his mother called him aside and said: "Andy, lad, when ye are oot in the wurreld become a man o' iron, an' remimber the seventh command, 'thoo shalt noot steal.'" Andy was made of the right metal, and as he sailed ore the ocean his mother's ironical remark rang in his ears.

Landing in Pittsburg everything looked black to him. He got a job as a telegraph operator, however, and at night slept between the ticks, for he was too poor to have himself cross-indexed and filed away in a boarding house. Later on he decided to learn the trade of millionaire and got a good job in a mill. He soon learned the business and soon thereafter the smoke from his own stack intermingled with that of other grates, which soothed him immensely. Then he kept adding to his steel business despite his mother's warning. He kept on building new work houses in a matter-of-factory way.

CONEY ISLAND.

CONEY ISLAND was made in order that frankfurters would have some place to lay around for the Summer. Its principal imports are nickels and its exports are fagged-out excursionists.

Coney Island is a body of land entirely surrounded by beer-gardens, dance-halls, crackerjack and noise. We might add, for the benefit of the multitude that annually visits this pleasure resort, that everything is on the square excepting the carousel, and of this class of amusement they have enough to go round.

The West End of Coney Island is used for holding that part of the ocean which does not flow into the soft drinks and chowder. The medical profession does not inform us that the salt air does not have any good effects on the viands, although the coffee served is strong and the chowder is full of grit. When you eat a plate of chowder and the tide gets low the bottom of the spoon gets all scratched.

Coney Island is noted for its surf bathing, and on a warm day every one turns to water for relief. Others turn to rubber, for it amuses them to see the breakers go through thick and thin, or vice versa, we should say. And talking about the surf, no matter how deeply a man goes into a subject he is investigating, when in the surf for the purpose of studying that body of water, he never is anxious to go to the bottom of it.

WORRY— —By Governor John A. Mead

The Governor of Vermont Is Acting Editor of Today's Sunday American

By JOHN A. MEAD

Governor of Vermont.

Acting Editor of Today's Boston Sunday American.

PEOPLE in the cities WORRY TOO MUCH.

I never go to the city but the fact impresses me more and more that the American people are a NATION OF WORRIERS.

And, for the most part, we worry over TRIFLES. Our worries, in the main, are UNNECESSARY.

So that I am always glad to get back to the country, and the hills, and the valleys, and the rivers and lakes; to the country, where men and women seem to be content with less, and where there is little or nothing of the vain struggle after Something that I see written on the faces of people in the city.

* * *

When I speak of the city in this sense I mean the BIG city. We HAVE none in Vermont, although several of our larger communities are incorporated under the city form of government. Burlington, our Vermont metropolis, has fewer than thirty thousand people. My own city of Rutland is not so large.

Here of late I have noticed that worry has begun to invade some of these smaller places, quite as a forester discovered a gypsy moth the other day in one of the beautiful maples of the main street at Montpelier.

I WONDER WHY THIS IS.

Of course I do not mean that we ought to be indifferent about the affairs of MOMENT in our lives, but I do say, not only as one who looks out upon the world with the eyes and the experience of seventy, but also as a former practitioner of medicine, that TOO MANY OF US WORRY ABOUT THE AFFAIRS OF YESTERDAY, and the possible affairs of tomorrow and the day after, with TOO LITTLE APPRECIATION OF THE PRESENT.

What is done is done. Why worry about it? Did you do badly yesterday? Resolve to do better in the future. But in the meantime, avoid worry.

* * *

I like SOME cartoons, and I confess to a SPECIAL liking for that series by Mr. T. E. Powers of the AMERICAN which the artist calls "It Might Have Been Worse!" This, in my opinion, ought to be the watchword and the slogan of the American Worry Club, "it might have been worse!"

Some of you people who worry in the cities ought to get back to the country, where Nature intended you to be. You live under artificial conditions. The CITY is artificial. Everything ABOUT IT is artificial. Only the country, the farm, is NATURAL.

And why do you crowd into the cities so? Are the great mass of you any healthier or any wealthier at the end of the year? In the big cities, it seems to me, only the few are really healthy and wealthy, and these few manage somehow to spend about HALF of every twelvemonth at the shore or in the hills.

It will always be a mystery to me, living in the New England State with the smallest population, why so many thousands will herd together in Boston and New York and Chicago, and other great centers, leaving 5,846,000 acres in Vermont to our 355,000 people!

It must be that you LIKE to worry.

And yet I realize that worry is not something to be overcome in a moment or in a day.

What the worrier must do is learn to direct his thoughts into a HEALTHY CHANNEL.

There are not a few diseases which seem to be predisposed to by worry. One of these is gout. Another is diabetes. Still another is a certain form of goitre. One medical writer goes so far as to say that WORRY ABOUT CANCER IN ANY PARTICULAR SITE MAY ACTUALLY DETERMINE ITS OCCURRENCE THERE.

Worry about disease, says another, is a predisposing cause of disease. SO IS WORRY ABOUT ANYTHING WHATEVER. I know people who cannot sleep because they worry because they cannot sleep!

Worry makes a MAN older; it makes a woman LOOK older.

Perhaps it is our modern civilization that we must blame. Most of the important inventions GIVE US NEW THINGS TO WORRY ABOUT. I heartily agree, for instance, with the authority who said that the invention of the printing press must have increased the worries of mankind by an hundredfold.

Get out of the rut! Take up a hobby! Leave your work behind you at night in office, store or shop. NEVER TAKE IT HOME.

Cultivate a fad, or, better still, cultivate a study.

There is no special reason why you should adopt MY hobby, MY pet study, but I do not mind saying that a number of years ago I took up the STUDY OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE. I have found it not only interesting but PROFITABLE.

WE CAN LEARN A LOT FROM THE JEWS.

The Jews, as everybody knows, are the greatest traders in the world. They CONTROL THE WEALTH of the world. There can be no war among the nations of Europe unless the Jewish bankers of Europe say the word.

It was Jewish bankers who brought about the Peace of Portsmouth, between the Russians and the Japanese. I do not minimise the part played by Theodore Roosevelt in that peace pact, but President Roosevelt merely PROVIDED THE OPPORTUNITY. It was JEWISH BANKERS who said that the war must stop, and who declared that there was no more money and there WOULD BE NONE to continue the struggle.

The Jew, even in America, controls every line of commercial endeavor that he has taken up. Jews dominate the ready-made clothing business, for instance, the men's furnishing business, the theatrical business. The Lewisohn brothers command the copper of the world. The GUGGENHEIMS MAKE THE PRICE ON LEAD, and so on.

Are they not a remarkable people? They have no country of their own, and yet they rise to the top in EVERY country. At one and the same time the world saw members of the despised race in command of the affairs of Germany, France and England. I refer to Lasker, the recognized leader of the German Reichstag; Gambetta, Premier of France, and Benjamin Disraeli, Earl of Beaconsfield.

And you want to remember, when you grumble because the Jew is everything in the trade of the world, that the Jew was NOT A NATURAL TRADER.

Originally, the Jew had no special love for trading. He was a HERDSMAN, A TILLER OF THE SOIL, A HANDICRAFTSMAN OF SIMPLE SORT. But not a single Christian nation has kept itself clear of the reproach of inhumanity towards the Jew. Prejudice forbade the Jew the ownership of land. So commerce became, in time, his only resource. He practiced trading, and, as we have seen, his dexterity increased until he became the WORLD'S GREATEST TRADER.

Where has he not gone on the face of the earth? Go to China and you find the Jew there, pushing his business, accumulating wealth, a factor in the commercial life of the new republic. The Jew in the depths of India, on the steppes of Tartary, at the trading posts of inner Africa, in every market and capital of Europe and America. "Alike among the Christians, the Moslems and the heathens," as some one has said, "the Jew has been an outcast and the subject of persecution. And that he has thus been exposed to suffering has been due not entirely to the bigotry of the races among whom he has been cast, but LARGELY OWING TO HIS OWN EXCLUSIVENESS AND HIS PROUD ASSERTION OF SUPERIORITY."

And yet I would not have you study the Jew in order that you may IMPROVE AS A TRADER. That is NOT AT ALL what I have in mind.

LEARN FROM THE JEW CHARITY; LEARN FROM HIM BROTHERLY LOVE.

It is my firm opinion that the Jew comes MUCH NEARER THAN THE CHRISTIAN to living the Golden Rule.

See for yourself, in every community where there is any considerable number of Jews. Is there not an orphan asylum, a home for the aged, a hospital? You may be sure there is. Show me anywhere a burial-place better kept than the Jewish cemetery. Tell me of a Jewish beggar.

I KNOW OF NO RACE OF PEOPLE SO CHARITABLE AS THE JEWS.

I love to talk with them. I never miss an opportunity, in business, in the office, on railroad trains, in the big hotels of the cities, to talk with representatives of this remarkable people. I recall once a chat with a Jewish traveling man on a train coming to New York from Chicago. He was a man of middle age. We lunched together.

We talked of a number of things, of the political situation—whatever it may have been at that time—of trade conditions, the crops, and so on. But what I brought away from my casual acquaintance was a new proof of the charitableness of the Jew. This man, a traveling man, was a regular subscriber to no less than four charitable organizations in New York. He did not tell me of it boastfully. I am not sure that he knew he was TELLING ME ABOUT IT AT ALL.

* * *

I love to think, in connection with this favorite study of mine, how much like the shape of Palestine is the geographical formation of the State of Vermont. You may see it for yourself. You will note that, like Vermont, Palestine is narrow at the southern extremity and broad at the north. Where lies the Mediterranean, we have Lake Champlain. Palestine is cut in two, as it were, by the Dead Sea and the River Jordan. So is Vermont divided by the Green Mountains.

Nor does the parallel end here. We of Vermont are STILL A PASTORAL PEOPLE, as were the Jews of old. Sixty per cent. of our people, even in 1912, get their living from agriculture. The chief product of our commonwealth is the grass of the pastures and the hay fields, converted into butter, cheese and meat for the market.

This thought of mine of the similarity between Palestine and Vermont came to me a number of years ago on a visit to the historic scenes of the old Covenant People.

* * *

I know of no surer cure for worry than a visit to the Holy Land. I recommend it to all who can take it. From the landing at Jaffa, and the customary visit to the house of Simon the Tanner, where, you remember, the Apostle Peter "tarried many days," to the Holy City itself and down to Nazareth, there is that on every side to REKINDLE YOUR FAITH AND MAKE YOU STRONGER.

To have seen the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, to have gone down the Via Dolorosa, the street along which our Lord carried His cross, passing the traditional house of St. Veronica, who wiped the Saviour's face with her handkerchief; and the house of Simon the Cyrenian, where you are shown a mark on the wall said to have been made by the Cross, past Pilate's house and on to the Garden of Gethsemane, is a privilege never to be forgotten by the Christian.

I went to Nazareth, one of the mountain villages of Galilee, where He grew to manhood. On the shores of its beautiful lake He delivered much of His teaching and performed many of His wonders. They showed me the spot where the Angel Gabriel and the Virgin stood. Nearby I saw Mary's kitchen and the foundations of the holy house. We visited Joseph's workshop, too, and the synagogue where Jesus worshipped on the Sabbath with His people.

AND I HAD NO WORRIES.

DON'T worry!

* * *

At seventy, I have been honored by my fellow citizens as few men have been honored by their fellows anywhere. There is nothing more that these good friends of mine can do for me in the way of political preferment. I am quite content to remain here, busy and happy—and, I am proud to believe, useful—at the head of an industry which keeps many of us busy.

And I am not ashamed to declare MY belief that the happiest man, and the most contented man, and the man with fewest worries, is he who SHAPES HIS COURSE BY THE PRECEPTS AND COMMANDMENTS GIVEN TO US IN THE SCRIPTURES.

It is my belief—and you will remember that until 1888 I was a man of medicine—that herein lies the singular and otherwise inexplicable content and freedom from worry of the Christian Scientist.

The Scientist gets his poise and his serenity from the Book.

And so far I follow him, with brotherly love. It is only when the Scientist makes of a mortal woman a personage of Christ-like power and inspiration that the Scientist and I part company.

* * *

I had not meant to write SO MUCH, and here I shall make A CONFESSION.

For a long time I could not make up my mind what I could say—busy and commonplace as I am—what I could write about—that would be of interest to the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN.

Finally, I found myself almost worrying about it. So I concluded to write about "Worry."

My dear friends, CAST OFF THE THINGS YOU WORRY ABOUT!

Some months ago I ran into an old friend whom I had not seen for some time.

I am a plain-spoken man, as becomes the physician, and I remarked that he was looking poorly, as we say, and that he ought to take a rest.

He told me that his physician said he was afflicted with a certain form of diabetes, but that he hoped to be well again in "less than no time."

"My old friend," I said to him, "you have got a secret worry that is hurrying you straight to the grave. You must cast it off. Whatever it is—and I beg of you not to confide in me unless you feel that you must—you must get rid of this something. For your own sake, and the sake of all who are dear to you, cast it off!"

He said to me on that occasion that I was wrong, and we parted.

I saw him a month later. He looked worse.

"Governor," he said, "what you told me a month ago was the truth."

Then he told me all about it.

Of course I am not going to tell his story here, but I can say that my dear friend should have taken his family into his confidence long before. Had he done so, I am quite sure, he would have CEASED TO WORRY. As it is, he is gone, and the things he worried about PASSED AWAY WITH HIS DEATH.

* * *

A little story, and I am done.

Once we had an office boy whose name was Henry. He was a very good boy, of the well-mannered and homebred type we know in Vermont.

As I was leaving Rutland, for the first time after Henry "accepted a position" with us, he came to me to shake hands and tell me good-bye.

He said "Good-bye, Dr. Mead, and I wish you every success on your trip, and that you have a safe journey, and good luck, and, and—I can't think of any more, Doctor, except what Mamma says to ME, when I go away. She always says, 'Have a good time, Henry, but FOR GOODNESS SAKE, DON'T TELL ALL YOU KNOW THE FIRST THING!'"

Perhaps if I had thought of Henry and his farewell a little earlier my tale would have been shorter.

But I insist upon all the privileges of the man of seventy. And ONE of those rights and privileges, as I understand it, is to name your subject and drive all around Robin Hood's barn before you get back to it.

So, DON'T WORRY.

Miss Foster Bride in Fall

ROMANCE and charity figure prominently in the coming events

Among the most prominent weddings of the Autumn will probably be that of Miss Katherine H. Foster, whose engagement was recently announced to Robert Meredith Tappan. Miss Foster, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. W. Foster (Mabel Hill) of Castle Farm, Charles River Village and Marblehead, who last Winter occupied a house in Beacon street, is a prominent member of both the Vincent and Chilton clubs. Her sisters are Miss Hilda Foster, a debutante of two Winters ago; Miss Edith Foster, who was presented last Winter, and Miss Caroline and Miss Barbara Foster, who are still in the schoolroom. The brothers are Charles O. Foster, who married Miss Marion O. Wentworth of New Bedford the last of April, and Reginald C. Foster, Harvard '11, one of the prominent athletes of his class.

Mr. Tappan, who graduated from Harvard in '07, is the son of Mrs. Frederick H. Tappan (Elizabeth Meredith), of Marlboro street, and the brother of Mrs. George Peabody Hamlin of Bay State road. Mr. Foster, the father, is a well-known clubman and yachtsman. He belongs to the Union, Eastern Yacht, Norfolk Hunt, Myopia, Country, Riding, Tennis and Racquet and Automobile, and in New York to the University, New York Yacht and Harvard clubs. He graduated from Harvard in '81

Magnolia Horse Show.

Wednesday, August 28, has been decided upon for the annual horse show at Magnolia. The classes include Children's saddle, ladies' saddle, thoroughbred type, combination, sporting tandem, saddle horses, hunters and jumpers and high jump. In all the classes, with the exception of the last, sterling silver cups will be awarded. In the last class a first prize of twenty-five dollars will be given and a second prize of ten. There will be three races—for hacks, pole ponies and galloways, an open race and a novelty race, open to all.

The Rev. Endicott Peabody of Groton will officiate at the wedding of Miss Anna Roseiter Kowes and William Green Roelker which is to take place at the home of George B. Kowes on Madison avenue in New York on Thursday, Aug. 22. Frederick Schenck will be the best man. On account of mourning in the family the wedding will be very quiet. The young people will sail for Europe immediately after the ceremony.

One of the most interesting of the season's events for charity will be the musicale for which Mrs. C. Parker Bremer is to open her beautiful Summer home, "The Ledges," at Manchester, on Friday, Aug. 23, in aid of the Frances F. Willard settlement. The affair is in charge of Mrs. Bremer and Mrs. Stanley F. Clemens, the financial secretary of the settlement.

Announces Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. MacDonald of Wollaston have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Helena Abbie, to Clifton Hartman, also of Wollaston.

"Shadows"—a painting by Harley M. Perkins, a Maxton portrait artist, is attracting considerable attention at Manchester-by-the-Sea, where it is being shown. The theme is treated with all the charm of an Israels. A dimly lit New England room of a generation ago is depicted. The last rays of a departing day fall upon the silvered head of an old lady in an old-fashioned armchair. A book has neglected in her lap; a cup of tea and a broken loaf of bread, the remnants of a solitary repast, are upon the old red-covered table before her. She sits in silence and dreams alone of the days that are past and the loved ones gone as life ebbs about her.

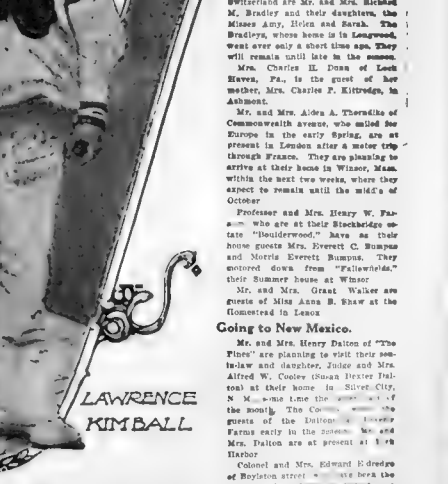
THEODORA AYER

Children of the Social Set Who Attract Society's Attention.



LAWRENCE KIMBALL

OF all the future belles of the North Shore there are few who are of wider interest than pretty little Saxonhatred Theodora Ayer. This important young person attracted much admiring attention at the recent horse show held on the North Shore in connection with the fair given there.

Little Miss Ayer is about five, and on her tiny black pony, her almost white curls flying in the breeze, looked more like a large bisque doll than a real, live little horse-woman.

Mrs. C. E. Osgood, one of the most active workers for the South End Day Nursery, one of the most worthy charities in Boston, entertained forty-three of the children with the nurses and matron at her Summer home, Villa Mussapoag, on Lake Massapoag. The event will never be forgotten by the little ones; sailing on the lake; games on the lawn; and ample refreshments made the time pass only too quickly for them. They finished the day's festivities with three rousing cheers for their hostess. The little ones will always remember this as a red letter day in their lives.

HILL LANDS BECKON SOCIETY AND MAGIC OF MOTOR ALLURES

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

NOW that salt-sea breezes have worked their rejuvenating wonders and we have shaken the July lotus, sleep, the Berkshires and other famous hill countries beckon and the magic of the motor makes all things possible to those who would girdle the globe and convert the world into an enchanting wonderland of moving pictures.

The elemental that lives on in us all urges us every now and then to go a-gypsying. And when the red apples are calling there is no peace till we hie to the cool, green twilight of the woods and pay our dues to that most exacting of mothers—Dame Nature.

Society is full of hoboes and near-hoboes and an annually increasing army of them is easing the spirit of wanderlust through the medium of the motor. The past few weeks have been too cool for the enjoyment of long water trips and so the motor has been more in demand than ever, and whizzing over beautiful country roads in beautifully equipped motor cars has been the most interesting pastime of all. Touring the Berkshires is among the most interesting of these trips, and so society keeps gaily on the move.

MR. HEALY'S CLIENTS GET 5-YEAR TERMS

Severe Punishment for the Suffragettes Who Tried to Burn Dublin Theatre.

ASQUITH'S GREAT APPEAL

Premier's Tribute to Irish Race as Leaders and as Law-Respecting Citizens.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Mr. Tim Healy, M. P., despite his great legal powers and his forceful speech, had rather hard luck defending the ladies who tried to set fire to the opera house in Dublin during the recent visit of Mr. Asquith. Two of the "ladies" were found guilty and received the severest sentences yet imposed in the whole history of militant suffragettery. They got five years' penal servitude. A third "lady," who pleaded guilty, was sentenced to the city prison for seven months. The presiding justice was not the sympathetic and chivalrous Recorder of Dublin, whose kindness to the suffragettes tried by him last week will keep his windows secure during the coming Winter.

Describing the incident of throwing a hatchet at Mr Redmond as he rode in the carriage to the Gresham Hotel with Premier Asquith, Mr. Birrell, the Chief Secretary for Ireland, said to a London reporter:

"It was a heavy hatchet the hand's being about eighteen inches long. It is the greatest wonder in the world that Mr. Redmond was not killed. The hatchet just grazed his face and fell into the carriage."

An Unqualified Triumph.

Speaking of the reception given in Dublin to Mr Asquith, the London Daily Chronicle says editorially:

"Mr. Asquith's visit to Dublin—the first occasion on which a Prime Minister has landed on Irish soil since the Act of Union—has been a magnificent, unqualified triumph. The head of the government carried to Ireland the greetings of the democracies of England, Scotland and Wales, the expression of their determination that the long plight of frustrated national ideals in Ireland shall end and end early."

An editorial in the London Daily News and Leader says:

"The visit of Mr. Asquith to Dublin will be a landmark in history. It is the first occasion on which a British Prime Minister has made a public appearance in the Irish capital. No British Prime Minister has spoken in Dublin because none would have found a welcome. Mr. Asquith's visit is the opening of a new and happier chapter in the somber story of the government of Ireland. In the fervor of the welcome that has been accorded to him we have an augury of the future. It indicates not merely the dawn of a better day for Ireland but the dawn of a better day for this country also."

Mr. Gladstone made, during his grand battle for home rule, some magnificent orations both in the House of Commons and from platforms throughout Great Britain. But nothing that Gladstone ever uttered could exceed the earnestness and warmth of feeling the peroration of Mr. Asquith's address in Dublin. The Prime Minister closed in great deliverance with the following words:

Asquith's Peroration.

"Gentlemen, I must bring what I have to say to a close. Why are those who, on one or other of the grounds to which I have referred, are critics or opponents of this bill—but it is a question I may most answer—why alone in the whole British Empire does this island of yours, nearest to us in race, most closely related to us by ties of kindred, and by social and business intercourse, continue to be a source not of strength but of weakness?

"Individual Irishmen lead our armies, command our ships, are captains of our industry, occupy the highest positions upon our judicial bench and in our civil service, adorn and enrich and develop our literature and art.

"Irishmen in countless numbers do their full share of the work and the struggle in all the manifold activities of our great industrial and national life. The British Empire has been largely made and is maintained by the gifts, the energies, the patience, the endurance of Irishmen.

Loyal and Patriotic People.

"Yet the vast majority of the Irish people here at home, and scattered over the earth, by nature as loyal and as patriotic a race as the world has ever bred, have been for three lifetimes and more, in three generations alienated in political sympathy from the United Kingdom, and the will greater Parties [illegible] to form a part. Gentlemen, this is, as I have said, a question of immense issues of things.

"What is the explanation of it and how is it to be brought to an end? I've often wished," thought one of the greatest—perhaps the greatest—of Irish thinkers, Edmund Burke, more than a hundred years ago—'I am convinced,' said Burke, 'that no reluctant lie can be a permanent.'

"Ladies and gentlemen, we wish to make the lie no longer reluctant but reluctant our spontaneous, voluntary, affectionate, real.

"There is nothing in our bill that is incompatible with devotion to Ireland as a nation and loyalty to the United Kingdom of which Ireland is an integral and should be an enfranchised and self-governing part. Let us all unite the two streams that they may flow together to the common enrichment of the whole of our commonwealth."

Census Figures for Cork.

The latest census figures issued deal with the county and city of Cork. As compared with the census of 1901, there is a population of 3.09 per cent. in recorded in 1901 the number of persons living in the county and city of Cork was 400,000. According to the census just taken, the population is now 392,104. 197,16 male and 194,548 females.

While the population of the city and county has shown a falling off, the population of the city by itself shows an increase. In 1901 it was 76,122. In 1911 it was 76,678.

The religious statistics show that Catholics form 88 50 per cent. of the population Yet one of the most popular public men in both city and county is Captain A. J. Donelan, a leading Protestant who large properties of the highest worth public offices are held by non-Catholic citizens, and held with the approving votes of the electorate.

The significance of this should not be lost sight of by those who are making an honest study of the Irish question.

REV. LEO J. KNAPPE, D. C. L.

Rev. Dr. Knappe's parishioners of Newton and Wellesley will hold grand reunion next Saturday.

ONE of the annual events which is looked forward to with greater interest in Wellesley and Newton Lower Falls is the Summer picnic of St. John's parish.

For weeks general and special committees have been studying and arranging the many details of the outing, which will be held next Saturday at Riverside Recreation Grounds.

The committee has provided an unusually long and attractive program of games and sports, furnishing amusement and recreation for old and young.

A special drawing card will be a baseball game between the Lower Falls and Needham teams, to be played at 3 o'clock. The friendly rivalry between the locals and the fast Needham nine promises a lively contested game.

Music and dancing will be enjoyed in the large outdoor pavilion. Success always follows where the people of the parish begin to hustle. For years, under the energetic leadership of Father Callanan, the Summer festival of St. John's parish was the great attraction for all the neighboring country. This tradition still lives and the people are most anxious to show their new pastor, the Rev. L. J Knappe, D. C. L., what they are capable of doing.

Father Knappe, coming from the famous Dorcy quarter of Boston, where parish reunions were first inaugurated by Mayor Fitzgerald, is no doubt anxiously looking forward to this his first opportunity of meeting and greeting large groups of the people of the parish, which comprises Wellesley and parts of Newton and Weston. For the assistant, Rev. Joseph E. Murphy, the coming event will also be a new experience.

Among the invited guests are the Rev P. H. Callanan, the first pastor and now head of the large St. Peter's parish, Cambridge, the Rev. Edward F. McLoughlin, the first curate the parish ever had, recently appointed rector of St. Stephen's Church, North End, and the Rev. John J. Meleraft of Whitman, who for seven years was assistant to Fr. SUNDAY AMERICAN'S SPECIAL CABLE LETTERS FROM THE CAPITALS OF EUROPE

ENGLISH PAPERS DENOUNCE MERSEY REPORT ON TITANIC

"Is Worth No More Than Senator Smith's and Probably is Less Honest."

"VITAL POINTS IGNORED"

By JOHN L. EDDY.

Special to the Boston American.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Cabled reports from New York indicating the levity with which Lord Mersey's Titanic report was received in America have had a cooling effect on the English press. The weekly papers, commenting on the report, nearly all coincide with the American opinion.

All virtually admit that the prophecy cabled by I. F. S. correspondent at the beginning of the inquiry that Lord Mersey would discover nothing and the inquiry would amount to nothing has been justified by events. The fact is that Lord Mersey was formerly counsel for Mr. Ismay and the White Star line. During the progress of the inquiry he showed himself the most astute and loyal of the White Star line's able and expensive counsel.

The extent to which public opinion is changing regarding the relative merits of the Mersey inquiry and the United States Senate inquiry is well indicated in the following from this week's issue of the Throne:

"The Mersey inquiry into the Titanic disaster has issued its report and the first thought that will occur to most people is that on the whole it is worth just about as much as notorious Mr. Smith's report and probably less honest.

Certain facts were definitely ascertained at the inquiry which Lord Mersey has not had the courage to face. For instance, there is the California episode. Lord Mersey finds that the ship seen by the Californian on that disastrous night was the Titanic. He records that the distance between the two ships was not more than eight to ten miles. The night was clear and the sea was smooth. The ice was loose, not extending for more than two or three miles in the direction of the Titanic. He believes, therefore, that the Californian could have pushed through the ice without serious risk and so have come to the assistance of the great liner.

"Had she done so she might have saved many, if not all, of the lives that were lost."

And that is all Lord Mersey sees fit to say respecting the failure of Captain Lord of the California to have carried out the sacred duty which from time immemorial has made the first law of the sea, namely, to go to the rescue of a ship in distress.

Wireless Message Ignored.

Lord Mersey's findings on Mr. Ismay and Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon are equally unsatisfactory. He finds that Mr. Ismay was only an ordinary passenger and did not exercise any authority on the vessel, but he carefully ignores the significance of the reporting ice in the vicinity which was handed to Mr. Ismay which that gentleman placed in his pocket. If Ismay had no part or parcel in the conduct of the liner, why was the telegram handed to him?

"The learned judge also absolves Ismay from any blame because he got into a boat while hundreds of his passengers were left to drown like dogs. His report would have commanded more respect had he ignored this episode, for if Ismay displayed the same characteristics as many heroic victims showed, responsible or not for the navigation, he would have scorned to save his life while many women remained aboard. And who could have known better than Ismay that a number of women must have been left behind?

"The report will not, I fear, enhance the opinion of either nation respecting the traditions of British character."

"Nobody Found to Blame."

The Bystander says:

"We ventured to prophecy at the time of the appointment that Lord Mersey's Titanic inquiry would not find anybody particularly to blame for the tragedy. And in that anticipation we are well gratified. Nobody is found to blame because nobody is to blame except the Board of Trade, which, having no soul, either to be saved or damned, can bear anything. On the whole our press has accepted the findings with characteristic docility and those who have strong feelings against anybody will need to look for their reflection in the New York papers. There the attacks on English courages and seamanship continue unabated and it is threatened to boycott the White Star line."

"Whitewashing Champion."

John Bull says:

"Mr. Masterman must look to his laurels or he will loose the whitewashing championship. Lord Mersey has discovered that excessive speed is the few regrets was the immediate cause of the Titanic disaster and he thinks the Board of Trade ought to have brought its regulations up to date. In running at this excessive speed, Captain Smith cannot be said to have been guilty of "malfeasance," but even if the regulations had been brought up to date it is doubtful whether they would have required boat accommodation which would have increased the number of lives saved. Captain Smith ought not to be blamed" Mr. Ismay the warning telegram and it was 'improper' of Ismay to have retained it, but then incident had no effect upon the navigation."

"Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon might have encouraged the men to return to the scene of the wreck, but the charge that he bribed them not to do so is "unfounded," and of course Mr. Ismay did the right thing in jumping into the last boat. We shall now watch for the announcement of the total cost of the inquiry."

It is now announced that the total cost of the inquiry will be approximately $87,500.

SEEK WILL OF POET'S SON.

FLORENCE, Aug. 10.—Diligent search is being made for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a great deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington, of New York, and from whom he lived apart three years.

Alfonso Dodges State Cares Goes to Cowes for Good Time Favors Aviator White's Wife

MRS. CLAUDE GRAHAME-WHITE

King Alphonso, it seems, is partial to aviation. This picture shows him engaged in animated conversation with Miss Briancourt, widely known in Europe as an aviatrix, and Mr. Garnier, a French aviator.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—British weather had a depressing effect on Cowes' week. Indeed, it may be said that, as a social event, the famous regatta was only saved from being a dismal fiasco by the presence of the King of Spain and his young brothers-in-law, Leopold, Maurice and Alexander of Battenberg.

After foolishly announcing that affairs of state would detain him at home, Alfonso, after all, changed his mind and sneaked over unostentatiously to Cowes, where he always manages to have the time of his life. Madrid, and his cabinet in particular, are alleged to be furious, for it is no secret that there is real danger of war with Portugal, and His Majesty's absence was considered extraordinarily illtimed.

There was a crowded out merry party at Osborne Cottage, where the limited accommodation was taxed to the utmost, for in addition to those already mentioned, Princess Henry of Battenberg put up the Queen of Spain and her little daughter, also Princess Christian, Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and Princess Louise and the Duke of Argyll, all with their appropriate suites. Most of them had to be planted out at adjacent cottages.

Princess Henry delighted in her Spanish son-in-law's after-dinner antics for his artistic arts as high as ever. One evening he amused them with a Spanish song and dance, attired a la Belle Otero and on another occasion gave a party entertainment with his young brothers-in-law.

Alfonso, by the way, was quite attentive to the attractive Mrs. Grahame White, new Dorothy Taylor, of New York, whose husband made exhibition flights during the week.

Social visitors to Cowes were scandalized by the presence of a gambling house in their very quiet midst where baccarat and chemin-de-fer-bus were played for very high stakes all the week.

23 TO 26 IS IDEAL AGE FOR MARRIAGE

Man and Wife Should Be About the Same Age, Declares Dr. Frederick Hoffman.

NEED MUTUAL SACRIFICES

Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—What is the best age at which to marry, and why?

These questions of worldwide interest and importance have been answered by Dr. Frederick A. Hoffman, LL. D., F. S. S., one of the delegates to the International Eugenics Congress, which has just been in session in London.

"My experience and observation," said Dr. Hoffman, "have convinced me that the best ages for marrying are between twenty-three and twenty-six for men and women alike. I have no faith in the theory that there should be a wide disparity between the age of the man and the woman.

"My reasons for fixing on between twenty-three and twenty-six as the ideal marriage age for both sexes are roughly these:

"The man and the woman are then, so far as marriage is concerned, at their best physical, mental and moral development. Their hereditary traits are now dominant. On the other hand, the twig has been bent or the temperament has been moulded in the form it will probably retain, with a little modification, for life.

"On the other hand, they are both still sufficiently plastic and malleable to readjust themselves and become mutually complementary to one another. In other words, the man is willing to sacrifice himself to the happiness of the woman and the woman is the happiness of the man. This is one of the essential conditions of true marriage. Perfect co-ordination is another.

"A boy or girl of, say, eighteen, quite apart from other considerations, cannot be expected to know his or her mind. At the same time I should like to state with all possible emphasis that every man of twenty-five or thereabouts who is earning his living and wishes to marry should be permitted to do so, provided only that he and his prospective partner are healthy.

"Men particularly who the over the age of thirty and wish to marry do so at their peril. At this age or over a man is generally so strongly individualized, so set in his judgments, that too often in courting a wife he is only courting disaster.

NEW LANDS VITAL TO GERMANY'S LIFE

Deputy Berry of Paris Says His Country Is Awake and Can Command Peace.

FEW NATIONS MAY SUFFER

By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—George Berry, Deputy for Paris, and author of German social studies, declares that France need not fear Germany any longer. He says:

"I have just come from Germany, where I find all political parties unanimous in declaring it is hopeless and impossible for Germany to survive without conquest or without new colonies. On this question all public men in the Fatherland are as one. Germany must find an outlet beyond the present frontiers for her over-increasing population.

"I stated very clearly that I did not wish to see any further German extension at the expense or that part of the Congo which France still holds. From the investives which the press hurled at me, I concluded the German government still set the secret hope of getting more Congo, but the great bulk of the German people do not seek new trouble with France. There are even some who would be willing to submit our differences about Alsace-Lorraine to a court of arbitration.

Few Approve Agadir Incident.

"There are few in Germany today who approved the politics which dictated the sending of a warship to Agadir in July, 1911. That ship angered every man in France, and our anger has awakened our hitherto sleeping patriotism.

"The diminishing war party counts upon the impulsive character of the Emperor to set the match to the powder, but His Majesty is surrounded by a trio of prudent men, who have great influence over him. Another reason which will stop German aggrandizement at the expense of France is the admirable organization of our army. French patriotism is no longer dormant, and it guarantees our security and national honor. We now look proudly to the future. We carry a high head, without feebleness and without compromise, assured of peace which no one dares trouble. I repeat that expansion is essential for the existence of Germany, but that expansion will be at the expense of some other nation besides France."

Up to England, Says Jaures.

On the other hand, Jean Jaures, leader of the Socialists, says:

"Why does not England propose an international agreement leaving foodstuffs and raw material for labor outside the right of capture in time of war?

"England could in order to feed her people a free ocean. Then let her propose for international arbitration that matériel of food should not be considered. An international agreement about this would help all humanity. Her foreign policy of increasing the Mediterranean fleet by sending ships from the Baltic and increasing the Battle by sending ships from the Mediterranean is simply exasperating.

"This rivalry of armaments is absurd and cannot go on forever. England should be beneficient in Egypt, India and elsewhere and so win good will. She should spend some energy in getting nations to leave food and work free, otherwise her domestic troubles will go on increasing until they reach such a point that England, master of the seas, will be blown up in a revolution like a burning ship at sea.

X-RAYS TO HUNT PEARLS.

Will Save Lives of Oysters of Ceylon.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The oysters in the Indian Ocean are to have the X-rays turned on them to discover the pearls that now lie hidden in the shells. The proposal is made by Lieutenant-Colonel K. MacKenzie Foss, who is interested in the Ceylon pearl fisheries.

Hitherto the procedure has been to open the oyster, and if no pearl is found it is flung back dead into the sea.

The rays of the X-rays, as applied to surgery would, of course, entail an expenditure which would be almost prohibitive in the pearl fishing industry, but it is said that means will be found to render the rays available for operation in bulk at a much reduced cost.

Lieutenant-Colonel Foss, who has seen a great deal of the oyster fishing in Ceylon, hopes to put the scheme to a practical test shortly.

MARRIAGE MADE DIFFICULT

Russian Bureau Head Says Clerks Must Wed in Department.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 10.—The most stringent regulation devised by General Sernatianoff, director of the Department of Posts and Telegraphs, orders that any male or female clerk desiring to marry must choose a consort from the postal telegraphic force under penalty of dismissal and loss of pay. Members of the Woman's Rights League is now endeavoring to secure the repeal of this obnoxious rule.

Quite recently a male telegrapher for some slight delinquency was dismissed. His inamorata, a lady with whom he had negotiation. She appealed for reinstatement but the only information this bureau has received could be considered she must divorce her husband.

AIR FLEET EXPANDING.

Kaiser Enlarging Force to Fight Above Land.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—Gradually, but surely, the German army is augmenting its fleet of air-cruisers. Not that all the purchases are made known to the public—far from it. In the matter of keeping her own secrets, Germany is as unrivalled as she is in her aeronautic triumphs. As far as is known, the War Department owns at the moment seven armored dirigibles, but the number is probably greater, while arrangements exist whereby, in case of war, a good many others would be placed at the disposal of the country.

Mrs. Brown Potter Now Studying the Soul

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A publication known as the Christian Commonwealth, which prints articles concerning the doctrine of materialism yielding to psychic study, announces that Mrs. Brown Potter is now engaged at her country seat in the study of the soul.

Mrs. Brown Potter, so it is said, has placed herself under a Hindu guru, and "Atma Darshan," or soul communion, as taught by the Yogis in Gosainthan temple in the Himalayas, is the special subject to which she is devoting her energies.

The Gosainthan school of psychic culture is unknown in this country and in America. Gosainthan being above the perpetual snow line, 16,000 feet above the sea, is difficult of access, which may explain why the cult is little known, even in India.

MLLE. MERAYA-NAR, SEEN IN HER NEW VANITY BANDEAU

Vanity Bandeau Dazzles Parisians

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Mlle. Meraya-Nar, the piquante actress, has started another fad in head-dress, and now Paris is sitting up and counting. Paris-like, "Barbaric—but (Oh, my!) how beautiful!"

The sensation in fashion circles started when Meraya-Nar dazzled the public with her new vanity bandeau. Though bizarre, the style critics say the head-dress is peculiarly entrancing. It is another one of the handsome actress' startling toilettes.

The novelty of the bandeau is set of all the more strikingly by the wearing of large triple circle earrings which give the wearer a barbaric yet fascinating appearance, according to the critics.

'Everybody's Doing It,' Says Flirts' Historian

By BARON VON ELPHSERG.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—"All the world's a flirt," writes Edward Fuchs, a prominent German writer and historian in his "History of Flirting," which is soon to be published. It is the first time any writer has attempted to give the history of flirting and lucks has gone into the matter thoroughly, tracing it from the middle ages and before up to the present time.

He demolishes the statement that flirting is only a French American custom and declares it is an international manifestation that has spread everywhere. He continues that it is natural and normal to flirt and that even certain animals flirt. Flirting has a recognized place in society, he says, and it is not saying too much to say that everybody flirts some time of their life.

Fuchs calls a flirt a "speaking mirror" and considers Prevost describes this best in his "Juliette's Marriage," wherein he says we all like to see ourselves in the mirror of our face.

"It seems to tell us," says Prevost; "Really, little Juliette, you are most beautiful."

Boy of 15 Is Shadow of Edna Wallace Hopper

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The wooing and pursuing of Edna Wallace Hopper by an Argentinian of fifteen years is the enlivenment of Paris during the dull season. His name is De Lugo and he is the son of a multi-millionaire from the capital of the Argentine Republic.

Young De Lugo came or Paris to pursue his studies at the College De France, but having fallen under the spell of the vivacious Edna he has temporarily abandoned the classics.

Miss Hopper, though still young, yet old enough to be his mother, is seen everywhere with the youth. She is laughing herself sick at this juvenile adoration.

"He can't let go my hand," she says. They have been to the races at Chantilly, to the Comedie Francaise, and they go to Maxim's every night.

To shake him off ruthlessly might mean a jump off the Eiffel Tower, so Miss Hopper is teaching him to dance, and if his wealthy father doesn't interpose an objection she will take him with her dancers to New York in September.

Another Rothschild to Wed in the Family

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The announced engagement of Lionel de Rothschild, M. P., to Marie Beer has aroused much interest because the alliance adds one more to the long series of weddings within the Rothschild family which have served to keep the enormous and constantly increasing fortune intact.

Miss Geer is a sister of Baroness Robert de Rothschild. Her father, Edmond Beer, conducts an important banking institution in Paris, and her aunt, Mme. Guillaume Beer, is known in Paris literary circles under the nom de plume of "Jean Doria."

ONLY ONE OF ALL THE BOURBONS IS MAN OF ENERGY

Duke de Montpensier, Brother of Pretender, Explores Far Corners of Earth.

HANDSOME, 28, IN NAVY

By MARQUIS DE CASTELLANE.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The Duke de Montpensier, grandson of King Louis Philippe, the citizen King, who used to receive as many as fifty Americans at his court in one evening, is covering himself with glory as an explorer and as a lecturer. The Duke is the youngest of the five children of the late Count de Paris, pretender to the throne of France. Consequently he is the brother of Amelie, late Queen of Portugal, of the Duchess d'Aosta, of the Duchess de Guise and of the Princess de Bourbon of the two Sicilies.

He is, however, best known as the brother of the Duke of Orleans, whom royalists call "Our King" and who salute him as King Philippe XIII. As the Duke of Orleans is childless, although he has been married sixteen years, the Duke de Montpensier will succeed him as Pretender.

The Duke de Montpensier as a bachelor and twenty-eight years old. He is tall, broad, black eyes, good looking, a lover of sports and an adventurer. He is an officer of the Spanish navy.

Only Bourbon of Energy.

Of all the members of the four branches of the Bourbons the oldest royalist house in the world, the Bourbons of France, the Bourbons of Spain, the Bourbons of Parma and the Bourbons of the Two Sicilies, the Duke de Montpensier is the only one who has energetic blood. His great regret is that he is not permitted to serve in the army of France. More fortunate than his brother, the decree of exile does not affect him, although it will be he should succeed to the pretendership. He has made a tour of America, has pleasant recollections of the French he made there and will soon return.

The Duke opened his lectures a few evenings ago by saying:

"I engaged an interpreter; discovering that he did not know a single word of Oumbodgean, I retained him as cook."

The Prince was lecturing on Indo-China and the aristocratic audience glorified with delight at his having found a real chief for his original interpreter. Quite recently he passed six months among the Moi, the native population, a people most rebellious against European civilization. To ingratiate himself with the native population, he gave them gifts, showed them cinematograph representations and organized many outdoor sports for them. Though hating civilization, the natives learn by admiring the Prince's prowess as a hunter, and so well has he gained their confidence and sympathy, that now they call him their friend.

Admired Him as Sportsman.

Good sportsmen themselves, they were lost in admiration of the duke's exploit with the gun. He camped out and lived the life of the natives. During this period he gave a hunting party in honor of Prince William of Sweden, who has been in the Far East representing his country at the coronation of the King of Siam. The duke's party was attacked by a herd of wild buffalo and had a narrow escape. A. Saigon he introduced aviation and horse racing, giving an annual prize in order to improve the breed of horses. He took an active interest in the well-being of the native population and encouraged their industries, especially in the cultivation of cinchona.

The Duke visited the ruins of Aukor, which are the most celebrated in the world. These tell a wonderful story of civilization. They are some two hundred miles from Saigon, the capital of Indo-China. No roads exist. He and his party travelled by automobile and literally had to cut their way through the forests, bridge rivers and overcome similar difficulties. Needless to say, the Duke's was the first automobile ever seen in the neighborhood of the mighty ruins and the natives spoke of it as the fiery chariot.

Once a temporary bridge broke down and the Duke and his automobile dropped into the river, burying his machine in the muddy bed. To come 200 miles it took him thirty-two days with his automobile. And then he drove his powerful car up the enormous stone staircase of Angcor, the balustrades of which were decked out in his honor with enormous bunches of palms.

QUEEN AS MATCH MAKER.

Duchess of Fife as Wife of George of Greece.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—For indeed are the weaknesses of Queen Alexandra, who is delightfully human and broad-minded, but with most of her sex she shares the weakness of taking a special pleasure in matchmaking, and she is always pleasure to get some young people led to the altar. Her latest design is said to be to wed Prince George of Greece, her great-nephew, and the young Duchess of Fife. Prince George is a rather handsome and lively young fellow, but is at present inclined to sow a plentiful crop of wild oats, and Queen Alexandra hopes that his marriage would put an end to his gay life.

Her principal opponent is the Prince's mother—not because she would not like to see him married, but because she hates everything English, and wishes to see him become engaged to some German princess.

A girl of English temperament, or rather lack of temperament, she says, would never be able to hold the Prince's affections for long.

DANCER BUYS OLD CASTLE.

Isidora Duncan Owner of Historic Turretry, Is Report.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Isidora Duncan, the Greek dancer, has purchased the old historic chateau known for the past eighty years as Chateau de Begra and famous in history for the high jinks held there to which were a prelude to the great revolution.

The chateau, which is near St. Cloud, was badly injured during the siege of Paris by the Prussians. The price paid for it now is $200,000. Miss Duncan probably intends to turn it into an academy and home for the many children she adopts.

UNUSUAL RECORD IN SUMMER STOCK BY LINDSAY MORISON

Turned Tables on Critics by Success That Greeted Nance O'Neil.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

In entering upon his final week as a manager at the Majestic Theatre, Lindsay Morison may at least point with pride to his record of the last four weeks of his short season. Since the coming of Nance O'Neil to Mr. Morison's company the affairs of that organization have been exposed to view with the sunny side out—at least in a business way.

The ways of the producer of plays in stock during the Summer months are not always smooth and encouraging, but Mr. Morison has discovered on more than one occasion, but it is not recorded that any hot weather season of recent years has in any way equalled that which tomorrow begins its farewell week at the Majestic.

It is a curious coincidence that, as in other years, unfriendly weather at first threatened the success of Mr. Morison's undertaking. But it is to be noted that Mr. Morison is always smart enough to devise a plan that will turn his fortunes from gloom to sunshine.

This season was no exception to the rule that seems to be laid down for Mr. Morison's hot weather attempts at the drama. Various causes, chief among which was the extreme heat of late June and early July, gave Mr. Morison good reason for discouragement.

Even the announcement that Miss O'Neil would join the company and present a series of the solemn plays with which she had been identified was looked upon as a speculation that might not end happily. The result, however, as it may be safely measured today, gives ample proof of Mr. Morison's absolute sanity in the whole matter and substantial evidence that his theatrical judgment is sound.

It is extremely doubtful if any theatre in the country playing Summer stock can equal in either artistic or business success the record of the Majestic for the last four weeks. Of course, it was Miss O'Neil's astonishing grip on the feminine playgoer that made the success so complete, but the real credit for the victory belongs to Mr. Morison, whose managerial head hits what to do, and his courage in doing it.

It is not to be questioned that Mr. Morison has earnest longings for a permanent theatre of his own in Boston. Although a curious twist of conditions keeps him idle in Boston during the regular season, those who have followed his work and he has many loyal friends, know that his annual venture in stock in Lynn will some day be transferred to the larger field found in this city.

It was only the other day that Mr. Morison declared that it would now be only a question of time before he would control his own theatre in the city. "I believe I am entitled to one," he said, "for no other season than the fact that the people are with me. It seems a pity that the class of plays I produce, which anyone can see meets the popular taste, must be confined solely to Summer production.

"My friends know that for several years I have been trying to get control of a theatre in Boston, and although nearly every person you meet will tell you there are already too many theatres in Boston now, there are not quite enough to supply my company with a permanent one."

To the thousands of persons who have been following Miss O'Neil and her plays at the Majestic this final week of her engagement come at a most inopportune time. Miss O'Neil's season might have been prolonged indefinitely to both her own and Mr. Morison's satisfaction—to say nothing of the feelings of the public in the matter.

At any rate everybody concerned in Mr. Morison's Summer enterprise at the Majestic may be pardoned for feeling

ENTERTAINING BOSTON THEATREGOERS

PARKS, THEATRES AND EXCURSIONS

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

One of the best bills of the season, composed almost entirely of new acts never before seen in Boston, and including two novelties, is announced for B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. Edgar Allen Woolf's comedy drama, "The Clown," will be seen for the first time in Boston, and Mlle. Albertina Rasch, the celebrated Viennese ballet dancer, will bring her beautiful terpsichorean novelty, "Le Ballet Classique," supported by Mons. Pernikoff and a company of eight pretty dancing girls. These features will be surrounded by a bill including Bixley and Lerner, the Caruso and Melba of vaudeville; Jack Inglis in Scotch and a singing act with trimmings; Joe Lanigan, a new and comical fellow; Swan and Hamlard, in a blackface specialty; Conroy and Melrose, in "Bumping the Bumps"; McCormack and Irving, in "Flirtology," and the Three Dixons.

Majestic Theatre.

The engagement of Miss Nance O'Neil with the Lindsay Morison Stock company at the Majestic Theatre will come to a close this week with a production of "Oliver Twist," the play founded on Dickens' famous novel of the same name. Interest in Dickens' characters increases rather than diminishes as the years pass, a fact demonstrated by the many revivals of "Oliver Twist," which have recently been staged in several of the larger cities of the country.

Miss O'Neil will, of course, assume the role of Nancy Sykes, a character which she has often played. Howell Hansel will have the leading role of Fagin, while Arthur Hickman, who has been specially engaged for this production, will play the artful Dodger.

Paragon Park.

This is the big month at Paragon. At least it always has been in the past seven seasons. In the Cabaret the coming week Manager Dodge will introduce several new features and Petals a long list of favorites who have become popular Cabaret features at this resort. Also a member the coming week will be Blossom and Blossom, two dainty dancing buds. The Cabaret will also include Mlle. Charles, in her famous "Storm Dance"; Jacquina, Palfrey and Brown, Miss. Cuneo and Mlle. Charles in classic barefoot dances, Mlle. Fifi, Mell Eastman, Florence Vineyard, the Georgian Male Quartet, the Grotesque Serenaders, the Palm Garden Orchestra, Mace Gay's Military Band and the Twilight chorus.

Globe Theatre.

The usual varied program will be offered at the Globe for the week beginning tomorrow. Several new acts of vaudeville, the Rays, the Song Review and the Pathe Weekly will all be found interesting. In the vaudeville section the Mirasos, Yahley and Smith, Musical Buskirk and company, and the Marshalls will be seen.

Norumbega Park.

Norumbega Park is at its best in the month of August, and this season the picturesque resort on the banks of the beautiful Charles is more attractive than ever before. In the open air theatre for the coming week the management offers a vaudeville program which holds out great promise of fun-making, eclipsing any bill previously presented this season. Heading the list is Don Demello, the European illusionist. Keeney and Hollis will be another important factor in the program for the coming week.

Waldron's Casino.

Ben Welch and his burlesquers, which will be at Waldron's Casino this week, bear the distinction of containing in its roster the names of some of the best known players on the burlesque and vaudeville stage. The first part, "The Terrible Telegram," and the burlesque, "A Day at West Point," are new.

Howard Athenaeum.

The old Howard will open the season tomorrow with a burlesque shown known as the "Queens of the Folies Bergere." This company is well equipped with pretty girls and the humor will be furnished by Joe Sullivan and Thomas F. Thomas.

Orpheum Theatre.

The feature which heads the vaudeville bill at the Orpheum Theatre this week will be Theo and her Daddies, introducing "The-Girl-in-the-Balloon." This act comes direct from San Francisco, where it has met with great success in all the Western houses.

Scenic Temple

Next week's bill at the Scenic Temple will include artists of international reputation in up-to-the-moment specialties. Lenna Howe's orchestra will also have something new to offer.

Durbar in Kinemacolor.

"The Birth of Flowers" is a remarkably perfect natural color motion picture shown as an opening feature with "The Durbar in Kinemacolor," now entering its fourteenth week at Tremont Temple. In the Durbar, or ceremony of King George and Queen Mary as Emperor and Empress of India, many of the glories of the Orient are in plain view.

Colonial Auto Trips.

The Colonial automobile trips hourly to the historical points of interest in Boston and Charlestown, with stops at Bunker Hill monument and the Navy Yard, visiting the old frigate Constitution, drydocks and battleships.

Tours are also operated through residential Boston, including Brookline and Cambridge.

Providence Trolleys.

The special trolley car which leaves West Office square every afternoon runs through to Providence without change, arrives in Providence each evening in plenty of time to connect with the night boats for New York, leaving the passenger right at the decks.

Hub Theatre.

The new program at the Hub Theatre this week will include a list of motion pictures which have never before been released and several smart illustrated song numbers.

The Convict Ship.

Many visitors are being attracted to the old British convict ship, "Success," now berthed at Warren Bridge, near North Station. Judging by the comments of the sightseers and the remarks inscribed in the visitors' book, the weird old hulk, with its rows of gloomy dungeons and its paraphernalia of punishment and torture, is deeply impressive.

Bass Point.

After the invigorating sail down the harbor on the General Lincoln or the Martha's Vineyard, the two steamers of the Bass Point and Nahant line, there is plenty of attractions at Bass Point to amuse and regale the excursionists. The three leading festivities at the point are offering many special menus and shore dinners for which Bass Point is noted.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

There will be a new bill at the Bowdoin Square Theatre this week featuring Kid Canfield, the reformed gambler; Harry La Marr in "The Schoolmarm," and Violet Mascotte's Musical Review Girls.

Colonial Line.

One of the many reasons why the Colonial steamship line between New York and Providence is practically carrying its capacity of passengers every night in the week, including Sunday, this Summer, is because the large number of lodge and society convention delegates who having tested the service last season were satisfied to book with them again.

Provincetown Trips.

These are the days when one may easily escape the extreme heat by boarding the steamship Dorothy Bradford and enjoying the 100-mile sail to Provincetown and return. The trip is becoming more popular every day, especially with women and children to whom the city in August is more or less a place of suffering.

Blue Line Trips.

The Blue Line automobiles trips are attracting the attention of excursionists. Comfortable riding automobiles make daily trips to the North and South Shores, Lexington and Concord, and three times each week a two-day trip to Newport is made.

Satellite Trips.

The steamer Satellite makes daily trips to the fishing grounds, which includes an enjoyable sail down the bay and a free chowder dinner.

King Philip Trips.

Good fishing is always enjoyed on the trips of the steamer King Philip to the fishing grounds. Free dinners are served to passengers.

Gloucester Trips.

The steel steamers of the Boston and Gloucester line take thousands of tourists daily up and down the "North Shore" to quaint old Gloucester and picturesque Cape Ann.

MORE PROFIT TO FARM LESS COST TO BUYER

Six Modern Means to Price Reduction Pointed Out by Professor Cance.

NO BIG DROP IN PRICES

Despite Consumers' Protest Farmers Are Not Making Great Profits.

By S. MILLER JORDAN.

THERE is little hope for the consumer of any material reduction in the price of farm products in Massachusetts or the New England States, recently declared Professor Alexander E. Cance of the Economics Department of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

There is no unreasonable profit for the farmer in present prices. The prices are regulated by competition from all over the country.

Staple crops will probably continue to be largely supplied from without. But Professor Cance points out that there is a large market for perishables, such as vegetables, fruit, eggs, meats, and garden produce. Produce of this sort can be profitably supplied by the New England farmer.

There are possible economics, however, that may result in increased profits for the producer and lower prices for the consumer, says Professor Cance.

Greater Profits, Lower Prices.

First, the cost of production can be cheapened by hastening the spread of the scientific knowledge of agriculture and economics. This calls for the liberal support of the National and State departments of agriculture, and State agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

Second, cheaper prices with greater profits will follow the extension of co-operative endeavor. This implies local specialization of crops, increased credit facilities for the farmer, and the co-operative employment of labor and machinery.

Third, the cost of distributing and hence the selling price may be cut down by direct shipments in large lots through shipping associations.

Fourth, reasonable express rates and the spread of trolley freight systems would do much to lessen charges that materially affect both the cost to consumer and profit of producer.

Fifth, the co-operation of cities and railroads is necessary. This should be directed to obtaining adequate terminal and storage facilities for handling perishables.

Farmers' Markets Directed by Cities.

Sixth, the establishment of farmers' markets under municipal direction, of auction salesrooms for the disposal of fruit and produce—in short, centralization of the distribution of all perishable products would work toward the needed end—elimination of waste in distribution.

These methods, says Professor Cance, are not fanciful schemes. They are methods that have been tried out successfully both in Europe and in America.

Not till we get this harmonious organization and effort in support of New England agriculture by railroads, municipalities and legislatures, will the farmer be able to undersell the producers of other sections and yet charge a reasonable price for his products.

GAINS IN THE SOUTH.

Smaller Farms and Intensive Farming Bring Results.

In 1910 nearly half of the farm land in the South was improved; in 1860, but little more than a third was improved. The improved farm land now amounts to eighty-one million acres. The greater part of this change, like the other changes which have advanced farming in the Southern States, has taken place since 1880, when the recovery from the effects of the war began to manifest itself plainly.

It is significant that the moderate-sized farm is in favor. Of farms ranging from ten to twenty acres, there are 245,000; of farms ranging from twenty to fifty acres, there are 656,000; of farms from fifty to one hundred acres, there are 428,000.

With the small farm comes intensive farming, and with intensive farming comes increased production at relatively decreased cost. It is not impossible that the coming generation will look to the southward of Mason and Dixon's line for its main supplies of farm products.

KILLING THE PESTS.

Poisons Sometimes Safe to Use on Vegetables.

For sucking insect pests of vegetables use contact insecticides, such as soap solutions and kerosene emulsion. For biting insects paris green is especially good, because it does not show on the foliage. Arsenate of lead is also good and is less apt to burn foliage. Most people do not know that some vegetables are sprayed with poisonous materials, but there is not enough poison to do any harm anyway.

Cabbage can be sprayed until they are half grown. The head is formed from the inside, so the poison will always be on the outside leaves. Do not spray for green aphis on cauliflower; use tobacco dust or tobacco stems.

Birds That Are Insect-Swatters.

In a bulletin recently issued by the Bureau of Biological Survey, Department of Agriculture, the traits of the family commonly known as flycatchers are shown, 3,398 stomachs are reported upon, showing an average of 95 per cent. of animal food and 5 per cent. vegetable, the animal food consisting of insects, almost exclusively of harmful species. Moreover, the flycatchers as a rule attack large predaceous birds, and are thus a protection for the poultry yard against such winged enemies as hawks and crows. The bulletin is No. 44 of the Biological Survey Series.

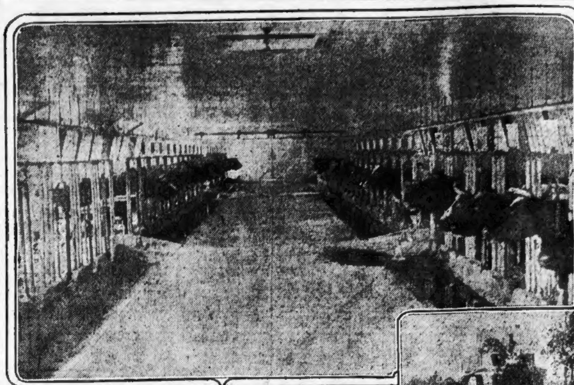
Farm Labor Supplied.

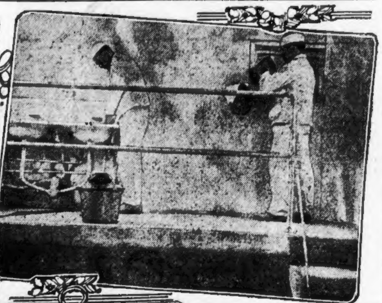
The New York State Agricultural Department reports that through it 446 single men and eleven families were sent to the farmers of the State during the month of June. At the present time there is a great call for help, due to the harvesting of crops, and the supply is scarcely equal to the demand.

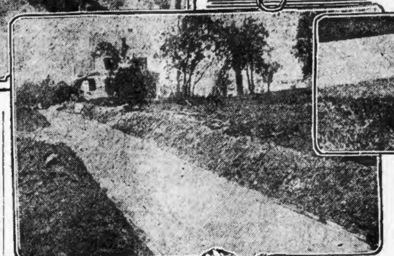
CONCRETE IS REDUCING LABOR OF NEW ENGLAND FARMERS

Only Suitable Material That Is Within Easy Reach of Landowners

CLEANLINESS IN THE STABLE AND CREAMERY WHEN CONCRETE IS USED—PERFCT WALKS FOR THE NEW ENGLAND FARM





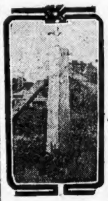


A Concrete Walk for the Farmer.

Cross Walk of Concrete.

Concrete Appeals to the Wideawake Farmer, as It Lacks Many Disadvantages of Wood

By WILLIAM F. FISHERDICK, B. Sc.



Concrete is rapidly growing in favor with the farmer. Of this there can be no question. Yet only recently did it find its way to the farm, after having shown its value as a structural material in city engineering, construction and architecture. For this there is one main reason. Concrete is the only material suitable for farm use and also within the farmers' means. It is at the same time waterproof, fireproof, ratproof, rotproof and easily prepared and handled.

Concrete in Dairy and Stable.

In this day of rigid milk inspection and dairy sanitation, no building material is so satisfactory as concerte. It is an utter impossibility to clean a wooden stable floor thoroughly; and there is besides this disadvantage the constant decay of the planking. A concrete floor, if properly taken care of, leaves no chance for complaint on the ground of uncleanliness. Moreover, when well constructed, it is permanent, if not everlasting.

Manure can be scraped up much more closely from concrete than it can from wood, and the surface can then be thoroughly cleased by a few seconds' flushing with a hose. If the buildings are not equipped with running water, a few pails of water thrown along the gutters will answer. All water that strikes the concrete drains off promptly. Not so in the case of a wooden floor. A good share of the water soaks into the planks, resulting in decay, bad odors and unhealthful conditions.

Concrete makes an excellent material for silos. Ensilage rots wood out very rapidly, but concrete is not affected by these juices and chemical processes. Another great advantage that concrete silos have is stability. It is not uncommon for empty wooden silos to be blown over; a concrete silo is not likely to overturn, because of its greater weight and firmer structure.

Again, barns and stables, the walls and floors of which are of concrete, are about as nearly fireproof as it is possible to make a barn.

Other Uses on the Farm.

Concrete fence posts make an excellent substitute for wooden ones. They will outlast any wooden post there is, and if re-enforced with a bar of iron imbedded in the centre of the post are much stronger. Creamery tanks of concrete can scarcely develop leakage.

Fruit and vegetable storage cellars built of concrete have the advantage of smaller range of temperature and are drier. Hence the tendency of the fruit and vegetables to decay is less.

These are but a few of the uses to which the farmer can put concrete. There is practically nothing which is now made of stone, brick or wood which cannot be made as well of concrete. As the farmers come to realize its advantages there will be less wood and more concrete used on the farms, bringing more satisfaction and better results than the present methods.

RURAL EDITOR'S ACRE

By Professor Robert W. Neal, Mass. Agricultural College.

"WHAT is this nonsense," says a critic "about irrigation in New England that you have been printing? Irrigation may be all right for people in the West, but do you imagine that New England farmers need or can afford to instal irrigation systems? Why not print something practical?"

On the very day this comment was made the daily papers printed the fololwing dispatch:

NORTHAMPTON, July 10.—When the body of Frederick A. Martin, one of the wealthiest farmers in this vicinity, was found in the reservoir here today, his family said his suicide was brought about by the long drouth.

Prior to his disappearance last Tuesday, Martin, exasperated by the drying up of his produce owing to the lack of rain, had remarked, members of his family said: "I wish I was dead and in the bottom of the reservoir." He was found there today.

Martin, who was forty years old, leaves a wife and five children, the oldest eleven years.

This plain news story of a tragedy answers very concretely the critic's inquiry whether irrigation is needed in New England agriculture. The account of Mr. William Sim's irrigation system at Cliftondale printed in the AMERICAN for July 7—the very article that aroused the objector's ire—and the story of Mr. Henry M. Howard's success on his farm at West Newton, printed July 14, answer the question whether New England farmers can afford to irrigate. The real question is, whether with constantly occurring droughts, the New England farmer can afford not to irrigate.

Though the rainfall often fails in the growing season, the water supply is usually not lacking. Lakes, streams, springs, and driven wells abound. Hydaulic rams and gas-engines are not prohibitively high in price. Frequently the fall from a hillside spring is sufficient of itself to carry the water where it is needed. One crop saved may offset the cost of a system.

But facts will always fail to convince the man who closes his eyes to his need and opportunity. The farmer who persists in wearing blinders will undoubtedly continue to shy and snort at the sight of new methods, until presently he runs into the ditch or plunges off the edge of the bridge.

DO DAIRY FARMERS KNOW.

LAST Sunday comment by the census bureau was published on this page, showing that some dairy farmers do not know the details of their business. It was pointed out that this class of dairy farmers are not qualified to judge of the profits or losses of the business, because they do not know the ins and outs of their own expenditures or receipts.

It was also made plain that this class may injure the cause of the dairy farmer generally, because they cannot produce the facts to support their complaints about low prices and unprofitable business.

But these farmers do not represent the business farmer who is engaged in dairying. Merely because they do not know the business facts that determine their own profit or loss, it would be unfair to say that the business facts of dairying are unknown.

It would also be untrue.

Dairying has been studied for years by many careful men who are engaged in producing milk. These men have learned the best rations for cheap milk production; they have learned the best available means of marketing and transporting milk; they have worked out economies in every direction so that the efficiency of the dairy should be increased; they have weeded out the unprofitable cows; they have bred animals with the particular aim of increasing the yield of milk; they have invested large sums in sanitary buildings, in equipment and in the best stock.

They know to a cent what it costs to produce every quart of milk, why the cost is what it is and how much is received for dairy products to offset this cost.

Among the milk producers of this sort—the men who have the proofs to show about the cost of milk—are such Massachusetts dairymen as L. H. Ruggles of Hardwick, John Smith of Barre, W. C. Jewett and A. F. Hunter of Worcester, G. A. Brigham of Northboro, Frank P. Todd of Rowley, John L. Harrington of Lunenburg and Everett D. Robinson of Uxbridge.

When men of such business standing and acumen insist that there is no profit to the farmer in milk under present conditions, what they say demands a hearing. When they produce the proofs by showing the cost of production to the last detail, and the money returns of their business, they must be believed.

It is true that some dairy farmers do not know their own business.

It is equally true that the conditions of milk production are thoroughly known to the leading dairy farmers. The testimony they give concerning the cost of milk is based on study, experience and right business methods.

FARM HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

THE story is as old as time. Dry weather, crop failure, lost profits, hard times, discouragement. New England enjoys no exception. Indeed, when drought comes—and it comes in one part or another every year—New England suffers worse in proportion than the West, for its growing season is shorter and there is less time in which to save the situation by planting catch crops. Nevertheless, such emergency crops can be grown. The repeated occurrences of dry seasons will lead the prudent farmer to plan his plantings with a view to making up through forage crops for the possible failure of the standard crops. An emergency foreseen and provided for is no emergency. If the farmer cannot hit the season coming and going, he can at least hit it coming or going.

2500 Farmers Selling Direct Producers and Consumers Gain

"PRODUCERS and Consumers Exchange" is the advertisement in large letters printed on the window of an office at No. 15 Rutherford avenue, Charlestown. Many pedestrians pass this remarkable combination of letters without giving them a thought, but occasionally a citizen upon whom the high cost of living has been bearing heavily comes to an abrupt halt with a realization that the words have a familiar sound when repeated, not as something accomplished, but as an ideal discussed at club and breakfast table.

Every one today is familiar with the almost time-worn proposition, "If farmers and city consumers could only get together and eliminate the middleman and the uncertainty that goes with the transfer of food from the one who raises it to the one who uses it, the cost of living might come down."

The general public has grown discouraged waiting for any such ideal combination, and therefore the Charlestown Exchange is having some difficulty in impressing people with the fact that here is one experiment that after two years of experience is ready to state to the suffering producing and consuming public that the combination can work, has worked, and is going to work on a far larger scale than in the past.

The Charlestown headquarters were opened in April, 1910, as an office to do business for a few farmers who were connected with the Grange of the State of Maine, an organization with a membership of 60,000 farmers.

B. L. Stevens of Charlestown was put in charge of the Boston office and proceeded to form connections with consumers that soon resulted in transactions that encouraged the stockholders—the exchange has been incorporated—to believe that an extensive business would be the eventual result.

Produce such as butter, eggs, lamb, hay, chickens, apples, potatoes, etc., raised in Maine was shipped to Boston and sold when possible direct to the consumer. At times when there was a great supply coming in branch stores were opened in various parts of the city, making it possible to sell the goods with little transportation.

Great quantities of potatoes were shipped until storehouses belonging to other firms were used. Much of he produce has had to be sold on the same basis as other market material. This was necessary because the company has not as yet sufficient storage room of their own.

While the prices on many products varied little from the regular market price, the farmers nevertheless thought it worth while to have an agent of their own upon whom they could depend, and from whom they could look for honest statements in regard to the condition of the market. They felt that this in itself was a great point gained. The books of the company are always open to the members of the exchange, and anyone so desiring can learn the exact conditions of sales.

Fresh Produce at Lower Cost.

However, the company had far greater plans than merely to secure honest treatment to consumers and producers. It aimed to give fresh produce to the consumer at a lower cost than the regular market price, and it also purposed to return to the farmer more money for his products than he could get from the regular sources. Such an idea may sound impracticable, but results are beginning now to show that it can be done.

"We have now completed our kindergarten training in this field," explains Mandeville Hall, "and we are ready to begin work on a large scale." What we now need is enough capital to establish an auto truck delivery and to insure the farmers immediate returns on the products. Over 2,500 farmers have now joined and are shipping their produce to their own company. Besides the regular dividends which the company will give to the holders of shares, there will be an extra share for every member trading to the extent of twenty dollars with the Exchange."

Is telling what the Exchange has done in the last year and a half Mr. Hall and Mr. Stevens make the following statements.

"We have sold to our members 15,480 dozens of eggs at a value of 30 cents, $4,644; 1,799 barrels of apples at a value of three dollars, $5,377; 321 cars 192,600 bushels of potatoes at a value of 60c a bushel, $115,560; 390 tons of hay at the price of $15 a ton; veals at the value of ten dollars, $350; 1,500 pounds of butter at the value of 30c, $450; 4,350 pounds poultry, $353. The total amounts to $132,744.

These figures mean nothing, however, unless it can be shown that consumers and producers are in some way benefited by the prices as compared with what they could have done through the regular market.

Confronted with this query Mr. Hall produced the following figures and statements:

"I cannot say that we have great results to show as we have been handicapped in several directions such as lack of storage space and lack of capital to enable us to handle delivery as we should, but we are selling eggs, the best on the market, at 34c while the quoted price is 40c. For these eggs we are paying 27c and 28c against 24c and 25c paid by the regular marketmen; thus giving to our producers 2c and 3c profit above the market and to the consumer 6c a dozen.

"In the case of apples we have been able to do nearly as well, paying the farmers 25 to 50 cents more a barrel and selling them to our customers for less than market price.

Educating Farmers in Butter Making.

"With butter it is a little different, for home dairy butter does not as a rule sell as readily as does the creamery butter, but even here we are gaining. In some cases we make it a point to educate the farmers how to put the butter up and handle it in such a way that it will stand any test put to the creamery butter. It is a fact that the farmer can get more butter out of his cream than is allowed for in butter fat by the creamery. We are able to give both our customers and producers the benefit of two cents a pound on the butter we are selling now."

In the case of hay Mr. Hall says that not so much has been gained, as most of it has been handled by other firms, but it was made plain that the farmers are perfectly satisfied if they can be sure that they are getting a fair deal.

Hall quoted a young commission merchant who stated that when hay was selling at $17 a ton net to the farmer after the expense of middlemen was deducted, he was advised by the regular commission merchants to return to the producers only $15, because, they argued, if the farmer once learned that they could get $17 for their hay, the Boston market would be flooded and prices would drop. These benevolent merchants would prevent any such calamity by retaining $2.00 on every ton for themselves.

The Producers and Consumers' Exchange is not now confined to Maine, but has become a New England organization though incorporated in the Pine Tree State.

Various organizations have become interested in this co-operative plan such as the labor unions, the Swedish colony of farmers in Maine, and the Patrons of Husbandry, an order connected with the State Grange of Maine.

The present officers of the exchange are: Mandeville Hall, president, Turner Centre, Me.; vice-president, U. G. Patten, Gardiner, Me.; treasurer, U. B. Stevens, Charlestown, Mass.; clerk, E. H. Libby, Auburn, Me.; auditor, E. C. Patten, Topsham, Me.; directors, Mandeville Hall, Turner Centre, Me.; Enoch Keirstead, Oakland, Me.; C. S. Stetson, Green, Me.; U. G. Patten, Gardiner, Me.; Robert Cleaves, Easton, Me.

For Dairy Cows, Bran and Barley Better

Alfalfa Molasses Meal Gives Less Butter Fat and Increases Cost.

An experiment to show the effect of feeding bran and barley in comparison with alfalfa molasses meal, upon the amount and composition of the milk, upon the physical condition of the cow and upon the economy of feeding, has recently been completed at the Washington Agricultural Experiment Station at Pullman.

For sixty days two lots of five cows each were fed the two rations alternately every fifteen days and the following results were noted:

First: The alfalfa molasses meal was relished for the first few days, but after the cows were on the feed a week or more ill effects on digestion were observed and they were thrown off their feed.

Second: In every period for both lots there was an increase in fat production of one to three per cent. when bran and barley were fed. The average percentage of total solids produced from the alfalfa molasses meal was 13.09 as compared with 13.19 from the bran and barley. The milk sugar showed very little variation on a change from one feed to the other. The percentage of fat in the milk from the cows fed alfalfa molasses meal was 3.788 and from those fed bran and barley it was 3.95.

Third. In actual pounds of fat produced in the milk during the experiment the comparison is as follows: In each change from alfalfa molasses meal to bran and barley there was a gain of 7.83 pounds, but when the change was made back again there was a loss of 11.64 pounds of fat. Bran and barley produced 7.51 per cent more fat and 4.06 per cent more total solids than the alfalfa molasses meal.

Fourth: It cost two cents more to produce one pound of butter and three cents more to produce one hundred pounds of milk when bran and barley were replaced by the alfalfa molasses meal.

RURAL MAIL-BAG

M. G.—Detailed questions about potato culture on your Maine land should be addressed to the extension department of the agricultural college at Orono. Besides the information procurable from the Maine experiment station, bulletins issued by the New York Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva and the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Stations at New Brunswich go into detail on phases of potato growing.

CONTROL OF ELM-LEAF BEETLE.

Rural Mail-Bag:

Some large elms on my farm are attacked by the elm-leaf beetle. What remedy will destroy them?

New London. B. V. C.

The Connecticut Agricultural Experiment has made investigations concerning the elm-leaf beetle in your State. According to its bulletin 155, covering the foliage with some arsenical poison is the only sure means of preventing injury, arsenate of lead being the most satisfactory. Ready prepared arsenate now comes in various dependable brands. The arsenate is to be mixed with water at the rate of from three to five pounds to fifty gallons. About this time the larvae have gone down to the base of the tree, to complete their transformation into adult beetles. From these beetles often comes a second generation of larvae that may and may not do much damage by foliating the trees. However, both the pupae and the larvae should be exterminated to prevent further propagation. Spraying the leaves, branches and trunk very thoroughly, and also spraying the ground in a circle away from the roots as far as the branches extend is recommended. The pupae are especially numerous around the base of the tree after the larvae make their descent prior to transformation.

THE DISK HARROW

RURAL MAIL BAG

The dirk harrow is a machine that should be found upon every farm. Its uses are many. It is good to cut up tough, rooty rods before attempting to plow them. It is capable of killing weeds when they have grown beyond the control of the smoothing harrow, and it is sometimes called the best adapted harrow for pulverizing and loosening the ground of any yet devised.

The dirk harrow is made in four styles—the full dirk, the cutaway, the spading and the orchard style. A. F. E.

SELECT EGG LAYERS EARLY IN SEASON

Culling at Six Weeks Will Improve Flock if Care Is Used.

If the poultryman is ambitious to improve his flock he should begin to make a selection of pullets as early as possible.

The cockerels and pullets are separated as soon as the sexes can be distinguished; then the culling of pullets begins when they are about six weeks old. Of course it is impossible to determine at that age the pullets that eventually will be kept, but we can cull out all that are undersized, lack vigor or show any signs of weakness. In this way the flock intended for layers is kept at a high standard from the start, while the less vigorous chicks, being kept separate, will make better progress than they would if kept with the stronger ones and can be more quickly brought to market size.

At the first culling the pullets are removed from the brooders to colony houses in flocks of 75 to 100 to each house. The houses are of various sizes, being for the most part constructed of waste lumber of odd lengths, and while they are necessarily roughly constructed they are as convenient and comfortable as more expensive structures.

Colony Houses That Satisfy All Demands.

Most of them are about four by six feet, four feet high in front and two and a half feet at the rear, tight boarded on three sides, and upper half of front covered with wire netting. There is a door in the center of front and a small sliding door at the end for the chickens to go in and out. Roofs are covered with tar paper over thin boards. When the chicks are first placed in the colony house hovers are provided, but as soon as the pullets begin roosting on top of the hovers perches are provided. A drop curtain over the open front gives protection at night.

In developing the pullets the feed problem is important. We want the pullets to make a steady, but not necessarily rapid growth. It is best not to attempt to hasten maturity and have the pullets laying at an abnormally early age. It can be done, but only at the expense of the pullet's constitution.

It is not well to have pullets begin laying until they have attained practically their full growth. Thus, we should aim to have our April hatched Leghorns laying the first of October, not earlier. This allows ample time for their development without resorting to forcing methods.

Feeding Chickens Out on the Range.

Their feed while on the range is substantially the same as used in the laying houses. The morning grain feed is equal parts of wheat and cracked corn fed in deep litter. In the afternoon the grain used is oats, corn and a little wheat. In the hoppers before the pullets at all times is a mixture of bran and dried beef scraps.

Grit, shell and fresh water are always at hand. Being on range, the chickens get all of the green food they require, as well as a large amount of animal matter in the form of insects and worms. Milk is fed whenever we have it to spare and is one of the best foods for promoting growth.

After the pullets reach the age of two months there should be little trouble from disease of any kind if ordinary precautions are observed, but we must be eternally vigilant to keep lice in check.

Before transferring the young chickens to the colony houses we examine them and if any lice are found the chicks are greased on head, throat and rump with a mixture of lard and kerosene. By cleaning the houses daily, whitewashing them frequently and painting the perches with lice paint, one will have little trouble with the pest; but to keep them in check we must keep everlastingly at it twelve months in the year. A few weeks' neglect will give the lice such a start that it will require long and persistent effort to control them.

COLONIZE THE HOGS.

Colony House Promotes Quiet and Exercise; Preventr Disease.

The use of small, portable hog houses designed for the occupancy of one sow and her litter, constitutes what is known as the "colony system" of housing swine. The houses are usually placed single in small separate lots, and the pigs after weaning time may be kept there until maturity.

There are several advantages connected with this system. The individual rooms are separated from one another and from all disturbance. They have a lot in which they can obtain exercise. This can be forced upon them by having the house at one end of the lot and the feeding trough at the other. In going back and forth they will be compelled to take exercise.

There is, too, much less danger that disease will spread. If it once gets in, it can be controlled by moving the affected house to a remote part of the farm or destroying it. One of these small houses can be burnt, and thus rid the farm thoroughly of any disease it may harbor, without much loss to the owner, a thing that would not be possible with a large, centralized house. The houses are easily moved and good, clean quarters can be obtained when the old ones become foul.

The cost of the individual house is small—about $10 to $25. This system is actually a little cheaper than it is to house sows and their litters in a large centralized house. The house most commonly used is A-shaped, although the square or oblong is quite popular.

GET YOUR GOAT—ANGORA.

Let the Milk Producers Clean Up Your Land.

What's the use of grubbing your waste land when Angora goats will accomplish the same results and give you profit beside? Angora goats prefer brush to grass and will clear land of small growth in very good shape.

Briars, poison ivy, bardhacks, sweet fern, scrub oaks, birches, young trees of any kind are all the same to the Angora—edible. What they cannot reach they will girdle and ultimately kill.

Angoras are easily raised. They require a little winter feeding in this climate, and when pastured need a dry knoll or dry spot to which they may retire when they wish, which is usually at night. Goat's milk is not at all disagreeable to taste, and is very good for babies. Dogs will not bother goats as much as they do sheep. The fleece also finds a ready market.

PUTTING BOSTON'S VAUDEVILLE UP TO THE "POISON SQUAD"

Old Doc Wiley Never Put the Grocery Store to More Severe Tests Than Are Handed the Vaudevillians, Says Mr. Nick Young. He Also Mentions That in Some Respects the Monday Rehearsal Bears a Marked Resemblance to the Dramatizing of a Foundry

There Is Common Ground Upon Which Groceries and Vaudeville Are Standing.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

IN a carefully calculated outburst of confidence B. F. Keith once said that vaudeville is as staple as groceries—that you could no more live without vaudeville than you could exist without food.

Inasmuch as most of us have never tried to get along for any extended period without either vaudeville or food Mr. Keith, to some extent, seems to have the best of the argument.

Comparing vaudeville to groceries, however, is not so much out of order as you might imagine. There is a great of common ground upon which both institutions stand, the most important of which is that both must be chemically pure.

The pure food label that you seek so earnestly when buying groceries is also stamped on modern vaudeville of the Keith brand. It is one of the precepts of the Keith circuit that vaudeville, to be good, must be free from blemish of any kind and contain no poisonous elements.

All of which leads you straight to the Monday morning rehearsals at Mr. Keith's theatre on Washington street, where performers meet the orchestra on equal terms and demonstrate in advance the purity of their goods.

Takes Nothing for Granted.

Mr. Keith takes nothing for granted.

In some respects the Monday rehearsal bears a marked likeness to the dramatization of a foundry. Noise—assorted and tremendous—is featured with every act.

While the outer edge of the stage is used for artistic purposes, divided equally between the orchestra and the performers the entire area in the rear is given over to the heavy artillery of the stage crew, which works in a continuous kind of performance with incoming trunks and boxes of scenery.

The dropping of trunks, the swish of scenery and the deep voices of Mr. Keith's gentlemanly but at times frivolous stage mechanics contributes a background to the Monday rehearsals that is nearly as artistic as the baggage room at the South station.

And yet Bert E. Grady's orchestra sawed away on its fiddles and blew volumes of air into its horns serenely and melodiously. The vaudeville orchestra is a well balanced team, capable of minding its own business at all times, which means in moments of dire carnage as well as in times of peace—of which there is but little of the latter at a Monday rehearsal.

Mr. Grady balanced himself carefully on his high stool and called for volunteers. "We're off," he shouted, "who's first—step lively." His language was as eloquent as that of an Elevated guard, but it produced immediate results.

Out of the darkness flitted a young woman. "Good morning, Mr. Grady," she began. Grady responded in the soft language of a bright August morning. 'Twas the meeting of old friends.

"I've got a new song this trip," explained the girl, slipping a bundle of music to the director. "It's going to be a big hit."

Then they were off. The girl raised her voice and filled the empty theatre with a rapid rush of rag-time. "When I get you alone tonight," she sang feverishly—and then repeated.

Mr. Bailey Was a Little Wary.

Bill Bailey, who serves as chief cornetist and principal comedian of the orchestra, spilled three bars of notes when he answered, "Not if I can prevent it."

Mr. Grady scowled his dissent and urged the cornetist to keep his face in his horn. It was plain that comedy springs from both sides of the footlights, although Mr. Keith's rules specify that the orchestra is not the part of any act, but merely the musical accompaniment.

THE DRUMMER IS THE BOY WHO TAKES ALL THE ORDERS

It was made clear early in the rehearsal that the real friend of the performer among the musicians was the drummer. He was the one member of Mr. Grady's band who worked with his coat off and his sleeves rolled up. Pleadings to the drummer for a liberal display of his talent were poured upon him like water from a hose.

Said Mr. Casey, of Casey and Smith, to the drummer: "No, George, when I say, 'Oh, can it,' make a noise like a tin can full of nails—d'you get me? And when Smith says, 'My, but it's a rough night on the water,' just make a little thunder with your big drum—are you on?"

Couldn't Make William Smile.

George confessed to both "getting" him and being "on."

As the rehearsal moved forward William Morrell, stage manager and general censor, eyed the proceeding calmly and without emotion. It was a solemn occasion for Mr. Morrell, apparently, and I mentioned it to a young man who belonged to the theatre.

"He is always that way," I was told. "He is known all over the circuit as the man who never smiles. Why, some of our best comedians come to these rehearsals with the one idea of extracting a sign of mirth from Bill and using it as a wedge for an increased salary, but up to this time the stage manager has a clean record. To him there is nothing funny in this business."

I marvelled at the man's self-control.

One of my earliest discoveries at the rehearsal was that several popular subjects of comedy are too sacred to Mr. Keith to be turned into vaudeville fun. For the first time in my life I found that the much-berated mother-in-law is protected from abuse. Mr. Keith will have no mention made of the lady in any way. Also, the word "damn" is prohibited, together with its little brother and sister, "gosh" and "ding."

And yet it has been said that vaudeville is degrading the legitimate drama.

Joe Thomas Gets Riled.

Mr. Grady and his orchestra gave their attention to a newcomer. "Hello, Bart!" yelled the song and dance man. "Have you paid your taxes yet? How's that for a funny man? Do you think it would upset the house?"

"Absolutely," replied Mr. Grady. "It would not only upset it, but break it and disgrace it. My boy, stick to your operatic melodies and let the comedy stuff alone. Really, son, you're not a bit funny—except when you eat, and then you're too noisy."

The performer, properly humbled, returned to his opera, and murmured a few bars just to show the orchestra that he could keep pace with it. It was almost in the line of musical acrobatics for one stout masculine voice to attempt the sextette from "Lucia," but the young man squatted himself solemnly in front the Conductor Grady during the number and managed very well.

"Oh, my," he whispered to Mr. Grady, when the final note had faded away. "I see you have 'Lefty Louie' with you today."

He was bound to be funny. "Look at him—there he is," and a long finger pointed directly into the face of the hard-working operator on the bass fiddle.

"Oh, you g'long," he said, "you know durned well I ain't 'Lefty Louie'."

That seemed to settle it, although the performer would not confess to his error. "You can depend on one thing," he said, in parting, "'Lefty Louie' will land in vaudeville sooner or later. That's what us artists have to contend with."

In the meantime the procession of trunks, boxes and scenery from the sidewalk to the stage continued steadily, if not noiselessly. Dramatic art was scarcely visible, yet this awful pandemonium was but the initial process of the finished performance that was to begin at 2 p. m.

Brunettes or Blondes.

During all the excitement Moynahan, the celebrated Colorado artist, sat speechless. He afterwards said he liked the noise because it reminded Him of home. I didn't quite gather 'his meaning.

"Good gracious," exclaimed Moynahan, "they're brunettes."

Mr. Keith Is a Man Who Takes Nothing for Granted and He Has Won.

"Naturally," I answered, "because, as you can see, they have dark hair."

"But I saw them in New York two weeks ago and they were blondes—all of 'em," persisted Moynahan.

He was calmed by Mr. Grady. "That's all right, boys," he said, "they'll all be blondes by 2:30 this afternoon."

Grady was right.

The only portion of the Monday morning rehearsal that journeyed through to an uninterrupted finish was the motion picture film that always closes the show.

One of Mr. Keith's bright young men told us that it was necessary to see the picture in advance of the regular show, so that any improper matter might be removed.

"What can possibly be improper in a film that is already passed by the national board of censors?" Moynahan demanded. He was seeking information.

No Place to Advertise Anybody.

Then we found that advertising matter is sometimes slyly injected into pictures, and Mr. Keith doesn't like it.

It was a cruel blow, but we sat unmoved as the private censor killed a cigarette advertisement in the film, an advertisement that had already been paid for by the manufacturer who expected Keith patrons all over the country would see it—and respond.

He will be disappointed when he discovers what is happening to his carefully planted publicity.

Mr. Grady folded up his baton and laid it away in its silk lined leather case—a signal that the morning's work was done.

Joe Thomas escaped with his bull fiddle. "I wonder what that durned fool meant," he whispered to himself, "when he said I was 'Lefty Louie.' My, but he's a bum comedian."
